FOREWORD

Throughout our long history of publishing, the primary goal of The Official Catholic Directory, P.J. Kenedy & Sons has always been to provide a detailed and thorough portrait of the holy Roman Catholic Church in the United States. However, the focus of Part II goes beyond the United States borders.

First the Pilgrimage Guide, provides and emphasizes the purpose of specific sites both abroad and in the United States, without bias, and displays useful information to and for the traveler.

The second and most useful section of Part II are the listings of Archdioceses and Dioceses of the World. In this section with permission granted by the publishers of the Annuario Pontificio, we have provided an alphabetical list of all the Archdioceses and Dioceses of the world, listing the ordinary of the (arch)diocese, telephone, fax, email or website when given which is useful in securing sacramental records or verifying the country or (arch)diocese that belong to a specific country.

The third area of Part II is the new and updated (arch)diocesan information not appearing in the main volume.

Finally the Products and Services section, as well as an index to advertisers are important and helpful to anyone seeking information in a multitude of categories from audio-visual to youth ministry.

As with the main volume of the Official Catholic Directory 2005, it is with great pleasure and pride that we present the Official Catholic Directory 2005 Part II.

Sincerely,

Jeanne L. Hanline

"As often as you did it to one of the least of My brothers and sisters, you did it to Me." (Matt. 25:40)

A sturdy house is built for a weather-beaten family in Jamaica; food is handed out to malnourished Haitians; in Nicaragua, cherished milk is supplied to needy children. Whether sheltering an abandoned child or supplying a missionary with food for the starving, Food For The Poor is always ready to serve the poor.

At the heart of our mission is heeding Jesus' Gospel mandate to care for the poor. The aid which we distribute through the clergy, churches and other missionaries acts as a palpable expression of God's love and a means of infusing new hope in the lives of the needy.

Food For The Poor is the fifth largest international relief organization based in the U.S.* A 4% operating ratio in 2004 allowed 96% of all donations to go directly to programs that help the poor. By supplying materials that are specifically requested by missionaries already in place in Latin America and the Caribbean, we serve poverty-stricken areas in the most efficient and responsible manner.

Food For The Poor works with Catholic churches, here and abroad, in answering God's request to care for the destitute. Together we continue to raise up our needy brothers and sisters in the Lord's name.

The Chronicle of Philanthropy*, 2004

PILGRIMAGE DESTINATIONS GUIDE

PREFACE

The expanded version of the Pilgrimage Destinations Guide contains all the features that are essential for Catholics considering a pilgrimage. At a time when many Americans would prefer to avoid international travel, we have highlighted some of the multitude of domestic destinations that will prove enlightening and enjoyable.

- Tours of New York City will enthrall Catholic art lovers. From The Cloister's European monastic architecture to the rose windows of St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York has much to offer.

- Trips to Washington, DC can offer experiences as varied as marveling at the wonders of the basilica or investigating some of the finest Catholic universities or roaming acres of wooded land dotted with Catholic shrines.

- Los Angeles offers the depth of U.S. Catholic missionary history as well as the first cathedral built in the 21st century.

The contact data for all the destinations, foreign and domestic, have been completely updated to provide the most accurate information available. Our hope is that the following pages will prove to be a source of inspiration and encouragement to those planning a pilgrimage.

New York City Travel Guide

There is good news for Catholic travelers planning a trip to New York City: Rumors that the Big Apple is brighter, cleaner, safer and brimming with worthwhile attractions are entirely true. Not only is New York the safest big city in the country, but few places on the planet can rival its irresistible combination of culture, entertainment and energy.

A perfect example of the "new" New York is Times Square. What was once the tawdriest section of Manhattan has been miraculously transformed into a family-friendly entertainment, dining and shopping Mecca.

Because it is an international center of both culture and commerce, many of the world's most sophisticated and successful people call New York their home. It's easy to understand why. Within the city's five boroughs are 150 museums, world-class cultural attractions, wonderful shopping and 18,000 restaurants in all price ranges.

Religious New York

Yet for all of its secular activities, New York possesses a profound and pervasive spiritual side. Catholicism remains among the top three faiths that nurture New York's religious life. The city is home to 58 churches named after medieval saints, at least 92 sanctuaries dedicated to the Virgin Mary, and more than 18 cathedrals, including St. Patrick's, the largest decorated Gothic-style Roman Catholic cathedral in the country. There are also many important Catholic shrines and relics in New York, including the Mother Cabrini Shrine and Pieces of the True Cross, found in locations throughout the city.

New York had a basis for ethnic diversity from its early history. The early Dutch, French, Spanish, Portuguese and British explorers mingled with the Native Americans in order to trade and to survive in the new land. Even the earliest of church records testifies to the heterogeneous group that founded St. Peter's, the first permanent Catholic Church constructed in the city. This spirit of early cooperation, though not unmarred by conflict, seems to have laid an essential foundation of tolerance and acceptance that is the hallmark of present day New York and reflected in the churches. For Catholic visitors who would like to delve into the city's colorful and captivating history, New York is acknowledged to have some of the finest collections of medieval art, artifacts, and documents in the Western hemisphere. For this reason, a visit here would not be complete without a stop at the Metropolitan Museum of Art and its branch in Upper Manhattan, The Cloisters, two of the most famous repositories of early Christian treasures in the world.

Notable Cathedrals & Churches

St. Patrick's Cathedral (460 Madison Ave., 212-753-2261, www.ny-archdiocese.org/pastoral)

This arresting Gothic structure of white marble and stone is the largest Roman Catholic cathedral in the United States. Begun in 1858 by Archbishop John Hughes and recognized as a center of American Catholic life, the cathedral, is visited by over three million people each year. The St. Michael and St. Louis altar was designed by Tiffany and Company, while the St. Elizabeth altar—honoring Mother Elizabeth Ann Seton, the first American-born saint—was designed by Paolo Medici of Rome. Many visitors not only stay for mass but also remain between services to admire the artistry and depth of the Stations of the Cross and the magnificent great rose window by noted designer Charles Connick.

The National Shrine of Our Lady of Mount Carmel (70 Carmelite Dr., Middletown 845-343-1879 www.ourladyofmtcarmelshrine.com/)

The National Shrine was established as a part of Our Lady of the Scapular of Mt Carmel in New York in 1941 but was relocated in 1991 to the present site to provide a more tranquil environment for reflection and prayer. It now sits on 60 acres of land complete with gardens, trails and a lake. A newly planted Mary's Garden has flowers that encircle one of the outdoor shrines to create a serene meditative atmosphere. More than a dozen types of flowers, whose symbolism is derived from biblical books and the writings of the early church fathers, are dedicated to Mary.

The shrine, which is also the site of the novitiate for the North American Provinces for the Missionary Society of Our Lady of Mount Carmel, has indoor as well as outdoor shrines. St. Albert of Jerusalem's contributions are attested to by one of several stained glass windows that adorn the chapel. The Carmelites trace their history through to St. Albert of Jerusalem who wrote the Rule for the community. Named the Patriarch of Jerusalem in 1205 due to his invaluable contributions in both civil and spiritual arenas, he is considered to be the co-founder of the Carmelite community.

The Cloisters (Fort Tryon Park 212-923-3700 www.metmuseum.org)

Just minutes from the hustle and bustle of midtown Manhattan, the Cloisters is set in the amazingly beautiful and bucolic Tryon Park. Sitting on 4 acres of ground, flanked by the gardens and trails of the 62 acre park, the museum overlooks the Hudson river with stunning views of the Palisades. The site, a gift of Mr. Rockefeller, was planned with these views in mind. He not only purchased the site for the park, but he also donated land across the Hudson, which cannot be zoned for development. In this way he ensured that the vistas from the park would remain pristine.

The museum itself brings to life the art and architecture of the medieval period. The building with its stone walls and large central courtyard is based on five medieval cloisters found in France. Housed within the galleries, accessed via the covered walkways off the courtyard, are more than 5,000 works of art primarily from Europe. Outside the structures are medieval gardens planted from designs gleaned from ancient documents and works of art.

Additional medieval art, more than 6,000 treasures, can also be found at the Metropolitan Museum of Art on Fifth Avenue. The collected works in the main museum provides an excellent complement to The Cloister's own collection.

Shrines, Museums & Historic Monuments

Ellis Island Immigration Museum

Ellis Island was the gateway through which more than 12 million immigrants passed in their search for freedom of speech and religion. Often called the gateway to America, this recently restored site provides haunting yet inspiring images of our forbearers from 1897 to 1938 when the site was closed. As an added service, the museum offers visitors interested in discovering more about their ancestry assistance with genealogical searches. Alone or in tandem with a visit to the Statue of Liberty also in New York Harbor, the museum offers a memorable taste of New York's role in the massive immigration to America in the late 19th and early 20th centuries.

Washington, DC Travel Guide

Anyone who traveled to Washington DC in their youth probably remembers a visit to the White House, a tour of the Capitol building and perhaps a walk along the banks of the Potomac. Today's visitors to Washington DC find themselves enjoying far more than just a stroll down memory lane.

Washington DC is one of America's most vibrant and exciting cities. It features some of the country's finest museums, theaters, concert venues and restaurants. While history buffs may hear the call of America's past, those whose interests are strictly contemporary will find an astounding array of events and activities in the District of Columbia.

Every year, thousands of visitors flock to the Smithsonian Institution, a museum complex that includes the American History Museum, the Hirschhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden, the Air and Space Museum and more than a dozen other museums covering everything from African Art to Interior Design.

Because of its relatively small size, Washington DC is one of America's great walking cities. Many of the city's top attractions are clustered within a few blocks of each other, making for easy travel by foot. If walking isn't your thing, then catch the Washington Metro, a remarkably simple subway system to navigate.

Religious DC

What may come as a surprise to visitors to Washington, DC is the remarkable wealth of churches, shrines and Catholic universities in the city. From visually inspiring structures like the basilica to the smallest parish churches, signs that Catholicism is flourishing in Washington and its environs can be found almost everywhere. The city even boasts a neighborhood that has earned the nickname "Little Rome." Brookland, a community in Northeast DC, is home to more than 60 Catholic institutions. Here you'll find the Catholic University of America, the only college in the United States under the direct patronage of the Pope; the Basilica of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, the largest Catholic church in the Western Hemisphere; and the Franciscan Monastery. Other religious sites include the headquarters of the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops and numerous Catholic seminaries, convents and monasteries.

Further afield, but still within the Washington metro area, are a wealth of fascinating locales that played important roles in both Church and American history. Among these are St. Francis Xavier Church in Southern Maryland, built in 1731 and the oldest continuously active parish from the original 13 colonies. Prince George's County and Montgomery County Maryland, just a short drive from the heart of Washington, are also rich with significant Catholic landmarks.

Notable Cathedrals

The Basilica of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception
(400 Michigan Avenue, N.E., 202-526-8300, www.national-shrine.com)

Adjacent to Catholic University, the Basilica was constructed to honor the Virgin Mary as the patroness of the United States. This is an especially good year to visit. In celebration of the 150th anniversary of the doctrine of the Immaculate Conception, the shrine is observing a Marian Year. Pope Pius IX promulgated the dogma, known as "Ineffabilis Deus" in 1854. Pope John Paul II wrote to bless the observance and offer encouragement that all would follow Mary's example of holiness and dedication to advancing the Kingdom of God.

In addition to being recognized as the foremost Marian shrine in the nation, it is also known for its respect for diversity as evidenced in the more than 60 chapels and oratories housed in the shrine. These chapels celebrate the great ethnic diversity that influenced and inspired this place of worship by honoring the saints that are associated with those cultures. This commitment to reflecting the rich cultural heritage of our nation was further shown in the commissioning of the marble sculpture that resides in the Great Upper Church. Entitled, "Universal Call to Holiness", it depicts people of various racial, ethnic and socio-economic backgrounds being drawn upwards toward the Spirit. The art both acknowledges our differences and also affirms our common call to unity in God.

The amazing variety of Catholic artistry is found within the Crypt Church as well as the Upper Church.

The Romanesque lower area is a reminder of the meetings of the early Christians in the catacombs when their faith was illegal. The tiles on the walls bear the symbols and signs used by Christians in the catacombs. The heart of the lower church is found in a memorial altar dedicated to Our Lady of the Catacombs which was presented on December 8, 1928, the feast day of the Immaculate Conception.

Guided tours are conducted daily and a guidebook is available to visitors. Group tours may be arranged by phone or by e-mailing info@nationalshrine.com.

Cathedral of St. Matthew the Apostle (1725 Rhode Island Avenue, N.W., 202-347-3215, www.stmatthewscathedral.org)

Construction on this stately and inspiring cathedral was begun in 1893 and a substantial restoration was initiated in 2000. The effort was undertaken to enhance the structural integrity of the building but also to restore what is widely known to be one of the most stunning interiors in America. The cathedral, constructed in the form of a Latin cross with a striking copper dome, shed its scaffolding and tarps in 2003 with evident success.

Dedicated to the evangelist and apostle, the cathedral is home to a number of remarkable works of art that grace the sanctuary and chapels. The foremost mosaic of the sanctuary is of a seated Matthew that was designed by Edwin Howland Blashfield. More than 30 feet high, it depicts the apostle contemplating a passage from the gospels

St. Matthew's is also the site of the annual "Red Mass" attended by members of the Supreme Court, the Cabinet and others in key government posts. It is derived from a 13th-century European tradition in which the celebrant and justices would wear shades of red for the mass marking the beginning of a new court session. Celebrated on the Sunday before the first Monday of October, the mass is a plea for the guidance of the Spirit for those who work for justice.

Printed explanations of the art and the symbolism are available in the cathedral for those who wish to linger. However, guided tours are also available on Sundays at 2:30 or by calling the phone number listed above.

Catholic Universities

The Catholic University of America (620 Michigan Ave., N.E., 202-319-5000, www.cua.edu/)

The University has the unique distinction of being founded by the U.S. bishops and under the direct patronage of Rome. Established in 1887 as a graduate school, it is located on the former James Middleton estate in the residential community of Brookland. This Gothic-styled campus has two chapels and offers concerts, plays and maintains a small art gallery.

Georgetown University (37th & O Sts., N.W., 202-687-0100, www.georgetown.edu)

Construction began on this Jesuit university, the oldest Catholic university in the United States, in 1788. Fr. John Carroll's vision for a superior Catholic education to foster the growth of the young nation, led him to acquire the land needed for the realization of this dream. Today, Georgetown is known as one of the finest institutions of higher learning in the world.

Monuments & Shrines Pope

John Paul II Cultural Center (3900 Harewood Road, N.E., 202-635-5400, www.jp2cc.org)

The new Pope John Paul II Cultural Center is one of the most stunning structures in the city, providing a reflective environment for visitors to explore their spirituality. The walkway of the Hands of Peace contains bronze castings of the hands of Pope John Paul II as well as those of many others. There are also a number of interactive exhibits, a chapel, and artwork from the Vatican museum collections, many on view for the first time in the United States.

National WWII Memorial (17th Street between Constitution and Independence Avenues, 202-619-7222, www.nps.gov/nwwm)

Opened in Spring 2004, the National World War II Memorial was designed to pay tribute to those whose sacrifices contributed to the Allied victory. Located on the National Mall between the Lincoln Memorial and the Washington Monument, the memorial offers a stirring tribute.

St. Elizabeth Seton National Shrine (www.seton-shrine.org)

Built in 1965 in anticipation of the canonization of Elizabeth Ann Seton, the Shrine, located in historic Emmitsburg, Maryland, is a beautiful tribute to St. Elizabeth Ann Seton. The site includes a basilica and the home where Seton founded the Sisters of Charity.

Franciscan Monastery: The Holy Land of America (1400 Quincy Street, N.E., 202-269-5446, www.myfranciscan.com/)

The monastery, situated only minutes away from Catholic University in northeast Washington, has faithful replicas of the major shrines of the Holy Land. Reproductions of several significant works of Christian art can also be found in the complex. Tours of the church and the catacombs are available daily.

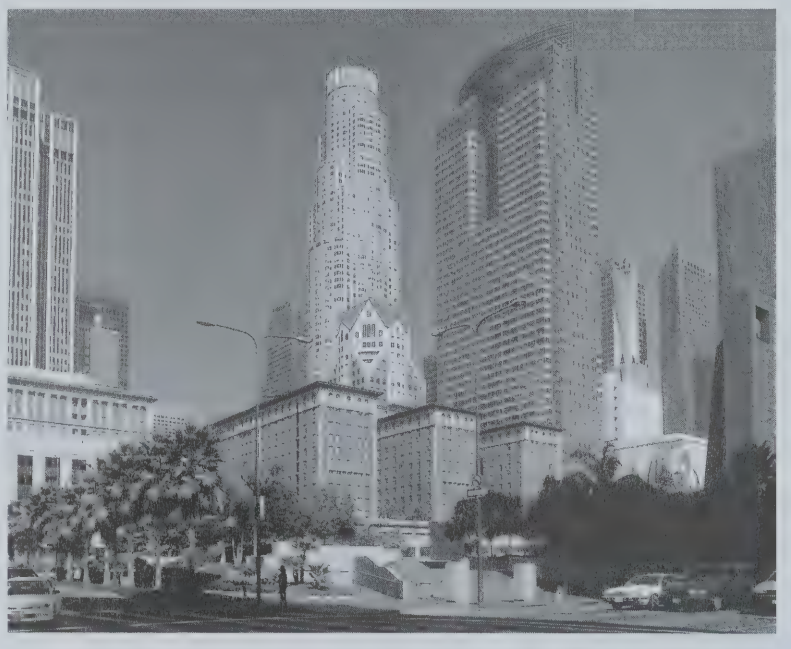
Los Angeles Travel Guide

When most people think of Los Angeles, they can't help but focus on the glamour of Hollywood, the seemingly endless miles of beaches and the remarkable year-round balmy weather. Millions of tourists come with the hope of spotting a celebrity, or at least standing in the footsteps of one outside Grauman's Chinese Theatre in Hollywood. But Los Angeles is about much more than movie stars. More than 3 million people reside within Los Angeles city limits, and another 6 million live in Los Angeles County. It is a huge and ethnically diverse population, containing a wealth of international cultures and customs. Yet it is a city built on a foundation of deep religious faith, a city whose very name – "City of Angels" – comes from the devout eighteenth century Spaniards who established the first missions and settlements there.



Somehow, Los Angeles manages to balance these incongruous images. While the city embraces it's undeniably wild side, it also supports one of the largest Catholic populations in America. It is a city where bustling movie studios and the serene Monastery of the Angels, manage to co-exist in perfect, if bewildering, harmony.

Despite its size, Los Angeles is one of America's best walking cities. While there are many organized walking tours of Los Angeles, it is a great city for those who like to venture out on their own. If you prefer to head out on your own, you can pick up a free Angels Walk brochure at selected Metro stops for a self-guided stroll of the city's historic downtown core, including Bunker Hill, Chinatown and Union Station. Also downtown are exciting new destinations like the Cathedral of Our Lady of the Angels; the new home of the Los Angeles Philharmonic; and the Walt Disney Concert Hall, designed by world-renowned architect Frank Gehry.

Religious Los Angeles

The history of Catholicism in California dates back to 1542, when priests accompanying the first explorers from Spain celebrated Mass on California's shores. Colonization efforts under Spain would have to wait more than two hundred years when the lure of the beautiful coasts and fertile valleys had drawn the explorers up the coast of Mexico into what was to be called The Californias. In 1769, the Spanish governor of California, Don Gaspar de Portola, and the Franciscan Father Junipero Serra founded 21 missions along the California coastline. Two years later, under Fr. Serra's direction, San Gabriel Mission was constructed with the vision of the native Shoshone people carrying on the ministry. At a tremendous cost to his health and well-being, Serra continued to found these missions which led to a chain of them stretching 650 miles up the King's Highway. His significance to the history of California and the Catholic Church is attested to by the fact that Serra was honored with a statue in Gold Gate Park and was beatified by the Pope in 1987.

Of all the institutions that characterize California's rich heritage, none has the historic or religious significance of the Spanish missions that stretch along El Camino Real. Two of these missions in the Los Angeles area are located in the valleys that took their names: Mission San Fernando in the San Fernando Valley and San Gabriel Archangel in the San Gabriel Valley. A third mission, the well-known San Juan Capistrano, is located in nearby Orange County.

Today, The Archdiocese of Los Angeles comprises 288 parishes in 120 cities, and serves a Catholic population of more than 4.1 million.

Missions, Cathedrals & Churches

Mission San Fernando (15151 San Fernando Mission Blvd., Mission Hills, CA, 818-361-0186)

Established in 1797 by Padre Fermin Francisco de Lasuén, Mission San Fernando once controlled more than 1.5 million acres and employed 1,500 Native Americans. In the mid to late 1800s, however, the mission experienced a number of misfortunes that threatened its existence. The mission was severely damaged by earthquakes and eventually passed from the church into secular use. It wasn't until the early 20th century that the property and buildings were returned to the church and restoration work was continued under the Oblate Fathers. Today, under the jurisdiction of the archdiocese, the mission is open to the public for religious services and tours. Visitors to the mission can see the recently restored church and historic buildings, access the archive center and museum and admire the mission's grounds or enjoy the park across from the mission complex.

Mission San Gabriel Archangel (428 S. Mission Drive, San Gabriel, 626-457-3035, www.sangabrielmission.org)

Founded in 1771 and relocated to its current site in 1776, Mission San Gabriel Archangel is the fourth in Serra's missionary chain. Currently under the Claretian Missionaries, the mission retains its original façade and lovely ancient gardens. The Mission's self-contained compound encompasses an aqueduct, a cemetery, a tannery, and a working winery. Paintings, statues and antiques from Spain, Mexico and Italy are on display in the museum. These works, some over 400 hundred years old, are complemented by beautiful Native American paintings from the early mission period.

Mission San Juan Capistrano (San Juan Capistrano, CA, 949-234-1300, www.missionsjc.com)

San Juan Capistrano, known as the "Jewel of the Missions," has been the historic center of Orange County since its founding by Father Junipero Serra in 1776. In addition to having what is considered the most important stone church founded by Serra, this national landmark is a serene and beautiful place, with timeworn paths, lush gardens and cool fountains. The mission is famous worldwide for the annual return of the swallows. This event, witnessed by thousands of tourists each year, often coincides with the feast of St. Joseph on March 19th. Legend has it that the diminutive birds were chased away by a locale merchant but a Franciscan friar offered them shelter at the mission. The kind offer was accepted and the swallows have returned from Argentina every year to find the mission.

Cathedral of Our Lady of the Angels (555 West Temple Street, 213-680-5200, www.ola-cathedral.org)

The central church of the Archdiocese of Los Angeles was formally blessed and dedicated in September 2002, bringing to fruition a vision conceived in 1996. The cathedral, the first built in this century, is one of the city's newest architectural treasures, featuring a 20,000-square-foot plaza, mission-style colonnades, biblically inspired gardens, and numerous works of art by world-acclaimed artists.

The modern influences in the cathedral's design are balanced by a deep appreciation for history. The traditional detached belfry is the home to two of the bells from St. Vibiana's, the original 1876 cathedral which was severely damaged in the 1994 Northridge earthquake. The plaza evokes images from the Bible and the Franciscan missionary traditions. The organ contains pipes from St. Vibiana's but in an updated configuration uniquely designed to fit the new cathedral. More than six thousand pipes harmonize in worship throughout the week and on Wednesdays for the free organ recitals. The musical selections reflect the great care taken by the archdiocese to blend the musical traditions unique to the Church with those of the diverse ethnic communities of the faithful of Los Angeles, creating a house of worship where all members of the community feel both welcomed and embraced.

This theme of inclusion is captured in the art found throughout the cathedral. A total of thirty-seven tapestries, the largest U.S. collection of Christian tapestries, are found at the cathedral. These are known for their use of modern people of various ethnic and racial groups. Some figures depicted such as the Pope are readily identifiable; others are anonymous as if to remind us of the holiness of the commonplace.

The convenient downtown location of the cathedral, located just off the Hollywood Freeway, makes it a natural place of pilgrimage for those traveling to Los Angeles as well as those who live in the area.

Church of the Good Shepherd (505 N. Bedford Drive, Beverly Hills, 310-276-3139)

Beverly Hills's oldest church was built in 1924. It has been the site of weddings and funerals for numerous notable people.

Museums

The Getty Center (1200 Getty Center Dr., Ste. 1000, 310-440-7300, www.getty.edu)

Perched atop a mountain ridge that offers unsurpassed views, the Getty Center has become one of the most important cultural institutions in the world. The museum features an extensive collection of antiquities, paintings, drawings, sculpture and photographs. Included in the Getty collection are an extensive collection of religious paintings, featuring the work of Rembrandt, Brueghel, Rubens, El Greco and Van Dyke.

Museum of the American West (4700 Western Heritage Way, Los Angeles, 323-667-2000, www.museumoftheamericanwest.org)

Singing cowboy and philanthropist Gene Autry's museum takes its visitors well beyond the caricatures of the American West, providing a far deeper understanding of the reality of life in that time and place through myriad exhibitions, collections and activities.

INTRODUCTION

Pilgrimages—journeys to sacred places for religious motives—are as old as civilization. Since the earliest times, such journeys have been made as acts of devotion, penance, or thanksgiving or in search of blessings or miracles.

The concept crosses all ideological boundaries. In the ancient Near East, a portion of the harvest was carried to shrines to be offered to the gods in gratitude and homage. Muslim law prescribes a pilgrimage to Mecca, the birthplace of Muhammad, for all who are able to undertake the journey. For Hindus, a pilgrimage to Varanasi (Benares), to bathe in the sacred waters of the Ganges, is considered an obligation.

Christian pilgrims, from early in the second century, traveled great distances to venerate places in the Holy Land sanctified by the presence of Jesus Christ, the Virgin Mary, or the Apostles. The number of pilgrims increased greatly in the fourth century, after Emperor Constantine I converted to Christianity and legalized the faith throughout the Roman Empire. He and his mother, Helena, were themselves the most influential of pilgrims. The historian Eusebius of Caesarea attributed to Constantine the discovery of Christ's tomb, the Holy Sepulcher; other accounts credit his mother with finding the True Cross.

Word of the discoveries spread, spurring the pilgrimage movement. Although travel was always difficult and often perilous, by the end of the fourth century pilgrimages to the Holy Land were relatively common.

Rome, as it became the center of the Christian faith, became a frequent pilgrimage destination, as did Greece and Egypt, where the faithful could follow the footsteps of the Apostles.

By the Middle Ages, pilgrimages had become a significant part of Christian devotional life, whether they involved a journey between neighboring cities or across half the civilized world. Churches and cathedrals throughout Europe holding relics of the Holy Family, the Apostles, and other early saints drew throngs of the faithful, from common people and parish priests to emperors and popes.

The role of such relics—particularly those that were instruments of Christ's Passion—is strong in pilgrimage, and many have survived to our time. Notre Dame Cathedral in Paris, for example, enshrines part of the Crown of Thorns, wood from the Cross, and a nail from the Crucifixion. Kept in individual reliquaries encased in a gilded ark, they are on view only during Lent. The Sancta Sanctorum Chapel in Rome has relics of the Cross, Christ's sandals, and a portrait of Christ "not painted by mortal hands." At Aachen, Germany, relics include the infant Jesus' swaddling clothes and the Virgin's veil. The Shroud of Turin, believed by many to be Christ's burial cloth, is world famous despite continuing questions about its origin.

Corporeal relics—the bodies of saints, or parts of them—have also formed the basis of many famous shrines. Prominent among such places is Santiago de Compostela in northern Spain, revered since the early ninth century as the burial place of the remains of Saint James the Apostle, who was beheaded by King Herod in Judea in A.D. 44 and whose body was thrown to dogs.

The heads, hearts, and various limbs of other saints were sometimes removed—not by their enemies, but after death by their adherents—and enshrined separately. In Paris, the heart of Saint Vincent de Paul is kept in a reliquary on the altar of his shrine in the motherhouse of the Sisters of Charity; his bones are encased in a wax figure in the chapel of the Vincentian Fathers. In Goa, India, millions were drawn a few years ago to a week-long exposition of one of Saint Francis Xavier's arms. Counted among shrines marking the tombs of saints are those of Saint Martin in Tours, France (once the most frequented shrine in Europe), and that of his mentor, Saint Hilary, in nearby Poitiers, both dating from the fourth century. There are scores of others, on every continent.

Holy objects other than relics have given rise to many other popular shrines. At Częstochowa, Poland, the icon Our Lady of Częstochowa, also known as the Black Madonna, is believed to possess miraculous powers and has been venerated since the fourteenth century. At the shrine of Our Lady of Guadalupe in Mexico City, millions come to see the peasant's cape on which the Blessed Virgin's image miraculously appeared following an apparition in 1531. In Brazil, an image of the Virgin was discovered on a rock by a small child and has led to a wide cult following. In Ancona, Italy, a weeping statue of the Virgin has drawn pilgrims since the early nineteenth century.

Numerous places have become the destinations of pilgrims because of apparitions of the Blessed Virgin, particularly in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. Famed among them are Lourdes and La Salette in France and Fátima in Portugal; at all three, the Virgin appeared to young children and urged mankind's repentance and prayer. Pilgrims now number in the millions, and devotion has resulted in numberless reported favors and cures.

Church authorities are cautious about giving credence to accounts of apparitions of Mary and approving of devotion at the places where they occur. Since the early nineteenth century, about 200 reports of such apparitions have been investigated, and only about 1 in 40 has received canonical sanction. In addition to Lourdes, La Salette, and Fátima, sanctioned apparitions since 1842 have occurred at the church of Saint Andrea della Frate in Rome and at Illaca in Croatia, Philippsdorf in Germany, Pontmain in France, Knock in Ireland, and Beauraing and Banneux in Belgium.

No country in Europe is without its Christian shrines. In England, a number of shrines that were widely known long before the Reformation of the early sixteenth century are the object of growing devotion today. Chief among them are Walsingham, Glastonbury, and Canterbury. (Chaucer's pilgrims of The Canterbury Tales were on their way to the shrine there of the martyred Saint Thomas Becket.)

Other shrines honor the founders of religious orders. Three of these, all in Italy, are the shrines of Saint Benedict at Monte Cassino, Saint Dominic in Bologna, and Saint Francis at Assisi.

New places of pilgrimage continue to arise. At Akita, Japan, an apparition of the Virgin in 1973 was declared "worthy of belief" by the Vatican, and the resulting shrine is attracting increasing numbers of the faithful.

Pilgrimage typically begins even before such apparitions are recognized by the Catholic Church. Such is the case with the small village of Medjugorje in Bosnia, where millions of people visit the site of apparitions of the Virgin that have occurred since 1981, although there has been no ruling from the Vatican on their validity.

The simple "desire to honor Catholic beliefs or devotions" gives rise to still another class of shrines, such as the Basilica of Sacré-Coeur on the summit of Montmartre in Paris, built by national subscription as a manifestation of contrition and hope after the Franco-Prussian War.

Canada and Latin America have numerous Christian shrines, and more than 100 are listed within the United States, chief among them the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception in Washington, D.C. Some were created in thanks for prayers answered or to remind the faithful of the messages received at Fátima and Lourdes; others mirror shrines in the Old World, such as Częstochowa, or mark scenes of martyrdom of early missionaries to the New World, such as the Shrine of the North American Martyrs near Albany, N.Y.

The popularity of Christian pilgrimage has waxed and waned, but it has lived on despite such cataclysmic events as the Reformation and the French Revolution and despite the skepticism of modern times.

The reasons for an individual pilgrimage are varied, but the results are often the same. Chateaubriand wrote: "There never was a pilgrim who did not come back to his village with one less prejudice and one more idea." Many, it is said, return stronger in body and at peace with God.

THE HOLY LAND

Christian pilgrims have journeyed great distances to the Holy Land since at least the second century to visit the sites of the founding of their faith.

All the major events in the life of Jesus Christ—the Annunciation, the Nativity, his ministry, and the Passion, Crucifixion, and Resurrection—took place in what today is Israel, a country only about the size of New Jersey. The sites of those events have been revered, preserved, desecrated, destroyed, rebuilt, and in some cases lost and relocated over the following centuries as sovereignty over the Holy Land has repeatedly changed.

There is scholarly disagreement about whether some of the sites are correctly identified; alternate locations that seem to fit with scriptural accounts have been suggested for some of them, notably the Holy Sepulcher. Two conditions must be fulfilled for any of the holy places to be considered authentic: The location must not contradict the data of the Bible, and the tradition connected with the site must go back to Apostolic times. This is the case with all the sites of the Holy Land, including those over which there is some question.

Although Christian pilgrimage to the Holy Land began in the second century, it was in the fourth century, when Emperor Constantine I legalized Christianity throughout the Roman Empire, that the number of pilgrims increased substantially. Encouraged by the emperor and by such influential scholars as Jerome (an early Bishop of Bethlehem, who translated the Bible into Latin), Christian pilgrims of Gentile origin flocked to Jerusalem, Bethlehem, Nazareth, and other places sanctified by the presence of the Holy Family and the Apostles.

Jerusalem's religious significance, of course, precedes the Christian era by more than 1,000 years. The city is sacred to people of three faiths—Christianity, Judaism, and Islam—and therefore to a third of the world's population. Here, in the ancient City of David, Solomon the Wise built the Temple to the Lord about 950 B.C.; near the site of that temple is the Western Wall or Wailing Wall, sacred to Judaism. Here, too, are the Dome of the Rock and the al-Aksa Mosque, which according to Muslim tradition are at the place at which Muhammad had his vision of heaven and received from God the commandments for the faithful.

For Christians, the same part of Jerusalem is the scene of the Passion, the Crucifixion, and the Resurrection. The Way of the Cross, or Via Dolorosa, in the Old City is believed to be the path Christ walked carrying the cross from the place of his trial to the place of his execution and entombment. The route passes the Stations of the Cross, and countless pilgrims follow it, many of them with a procession by Franciscans each Friday at three o'clock. The last of the stations are within the Church of the Holy Sepulcher. Commissioned in 326 by Constantine, the church has been rebuilt and modified time after time. Since the Crusades (1099–1270), it has enclosed the traditional locations of both Christ's crucifixion and burial.

Numerous Christian denominations have a presence in the Church of the Holy Sepulcher: the Greek Orthodox and Roman Catholics are prominent, followed by Armenians and Copts, who have their sections, and Ethiopians and Syrians, who have access rights.

Nearby, but outside the walls of the Old City, is Mount Zion, the place long recognized as the tomb of King David. It is also the location of the Cenacle, the "upper room" in which the Last Supper—a seder meal that evolved into the Christian Eucharist—took place.

The Mount of Olives offers a broad view of the Old City, and at its foot is the Garden of Gethsemane, where Christ prayed and sorrowed and where he was arrested by Roman soldiers on the last night of his life. On the crest of the Mount of Olives is the Chapel of the Ascension, traditionally believed to be the place at which he ascended into heaven.

Bethlehem, Jesus' birthplace, is only a few miles from Jerusalem. The original Church of the Nativity was built in the fourth century to enshrine the site, but—like the Church of the Holy Sepulcher—it has been rebuilt and extensively repaired many times. Under an old arrangement, it is shared by Roman Catholics (represented by the Franciscans), Greek Orthodox, and Armenian Orthodox. And as is true at the Church of the Holy Sepulcher, the relationship has not always been happy; a disagreement between the Franciscans and the Greek Orthodox was a factor leading to the outbreak of the Crimean War (1854–1856). There are still occasional heated disagreements over who is in charge of what; sometimes the participants have come to blows, to the surprise of pilgrims expecting a scene of peace and tranquillity.

The Church of the Nativity is built over the cave where Jesus was born. In a grotto beneath the main altar, a silver star marks the traditional place of the actual birth, and nearby is the Chapel of the Manger, where Mary placed her newborn child.

The principal Roman Catholic church in Bethlehem, Saint Catherine's, is linked to the Church of the Nativity by a connecting door.

Manger Square, just outside, is the scene of colorful Christmas Eve celebrations held on various dates. Christmas for the Greek Orthodox is January 7; for the Armenians, it is January 19. On December 24, the festivities continue long into the evening, and the mass is shown on an enormous outdoor television screen for those unable to get inside the church. It is also broadcast around the world via satellite.

Nazareth—the scene of the Annunciation, when the angel Gabriel appeared to Mary and told her she would bear the Christ-child—was a small village in Christ's time and is now an Arab city of about 50,000. About half its inhabitants are Muslim, half Christian; it is consequently quiet on Fridays and Sundays, the sabbaths of the two faiths, but exceptionally busy on Saturdays.

The cave dwelling where the Annunciation is believed to have taken place has been revered for at least 1,600 years. A Byzantine church built on the site in the fifth century was rebuilt by the Crusaders in the twelfth century, then destroyed in the thirteenth century by the Mamluks. A Franciscan church was built in the early eighteenth century and was razed in 1954 to be replaced by the huge church now on the site, dedicated in 1969 and containing some of the remains of the earliest structures.

Nearby is the Church of Saint Joseph, said to be on the site of Joseph the Carpenter's workshop. The Church of Saint Gabriel marks the source of the spring at which some traditions say the Annunciation took place.

On the road toward Tiberias from Nazareth is the Arab village of Kafr Kana, the biblical Cana, where Jesus performed his first miracle, turning water into wine at a wedding and thus beginning his public ministry.

The route from Nazareth to Megiddo passes Mount Tabor, the traditional site of the Transfiguration (although some scholars favor Mount Hermon), where the disciples Peter, James, and John saw Christ "transfigured" ("his face shone like the sun and his garments became as white as light") and saw him in conversation with Moses and Elijah.

Note: Because of continuing terrorist incidents and a declining security situation in Israel, the West Bank, and Gaza, the U.S. State Department issued an official warning in mid-2003 strongly suggesting that Americans postpone travel to the area. State Department travel advisories can be checked at any time on the department's Web site, travel.state.gov/travel_warnings.html#i.

Transport

Getting to the Holy Land by air from the United States can be easily arranged from all major airports. A nonstop flight takes from 9 to 11 hours. Numerous tour operators offer Holy Land pilgrimage packages of various durations.

Within Israel, air service is available between major centers, and regular rail service links Jerusalem, Haifa, and Tel Aviv. The best way to travel between or outside major towns is by road, either in a rented vehicle (care is advised; Israeli drivers are notoriously reckless) or by bus, limousine, or minibus. In town, taxis are plentiful.

Accommodation

There is the widest possible selection of hotel accommodation in Israel, from modest guest houses to luxury hotels. Most major American chains are represented. There are also numerous holiday villages, Christian hospices, youth hostels, campsites, and kibbutz guest houses.

Similarly, restaurants run the gamut from snack stands in the streets to elegant restaurants.

DAMASCUS

When Pope John Paul II went to Damascus, Syria, in May 2001, he made history—as the first pope ever to enter a Muslim house of worship. But he was only one of countless devout pilgrims who have made their way to the ancient city since the earliest years of the Christian faith.

The pope was following in the footsteps of the Apostle Paul, who was miraculously converted to Christianity while on his way to Damascus to campaign against it. In a vision, Paul received directly from Christ his mission to evangelize the Gentiles. His life thereafter as an apostle is well known; in at least four major journeys, extending perhaps as far as Spain, he preached, won converts, and established churches. He persevered in his mission even though along the way he was imprisoned, shipwrecked, beaten, stoned, flogged, scorned, and banished. In the end, he was beheaded in Rome—but was soon recognized as the co-founder, with the Disciple Peter, of the Roman church.

John Paul II was received warmly on his arrival in Damascus. In his remarks at a public ceremony he said he had come to Syria as "a pilgrim of faith," following Saint Paul, "whose life was changed forever on the road to Damascus."

The pope was greeted at the Omayyad Mosque, one of Islam's holiest sites, by Sheikh Ahmad Kaftaro, Grand Mufti of Syria. John Paul donned white slippers in accordance with Islamic custom, and once inside the mosque spent a few moments in private prayer before a shrine to Yahha, the Muslim name for John the Baptist, whose head is said to be interred there. After his brief visit, the pope told his hosts that he had been "deeply moved" by the experience. In public remarks immediately afterward, he said that "For all the times that Muslims and Christians have offended one another, we need to ask forgiveness from the Almighty and to offer each other forgiveness."

His visit to the mosque was a continuation of his long efforts to seek common ground between the three great monotheistic faiths: Christianity, Islam, and Judaism.

More than 80 percent of Syria's population is Muslim. Only about 10 percent is Christian (principally Orthodox). But unlike most Arab states, Syria does not make Islam the official state religion, and Christians there say they live in harmony with their neighbors and without discrimination. Indeed, in recent years throngs of Christians have gathered in the streets of Damascus for Easter celebrations.

Since the earliest days of civilization, Syria—Damascus in particular—has been a melting pot of religions and races. The Omayyad Mosque is evidence of this: the site has accommodated a house of worship for nearly three thousand years—first a temple to the semitic god Hadad built in the ninth century B.C., then a temple dedicated to the Roman god Jupiter, then a Christian church dedicated to John the Baptist. When the Muslims invaded Damascus in the early seventh century A.D., part of the building became a mosque although a Christian church remained on the premises. In the early eighth century the existing buildings were razed and the present mosque erected, soon becoming one of the holiest sites in Islam, after Mecca, Medina, and the Dome of the Rock in Jerusalem. The mosque was heavily damaged by fire in the late 1800s but has been largely restored.

The City

Damascus, Syria's capital, is thought by many to be the world's oldest continuously inhabited city. On trade routes from the earliest times, it has been fought over for thousands of years. When the Islamic Empire arose in the seventh century, Damascus was its first capital. Today it has a population of more than six million.

The Omayyad Mosque is in the heart of the Old City, adjoining the main marketplace, the bustling Souq al Hamadiyyeh. Nearby is the late 12th-century tomb of Saladin (Salah al-Din Yusuf, the greatest of the generals commanding the Muslim forces during the Crusades). Also there is the Azem Palace, built in the mid-18th century, which now houses the Museum of the Arts and Popular Traditions of Syria.

In the Old City pilgrims will find the street called Straight, mentioned in the Bible, where Paul—blinded by his revelation—was led to be baptized by Ananias and where his sight was restored. Also nearby is Saint Paul's Chapel, on the site where Paul was lowered down a wall in a basket to escape local religious leaders who had been enraged by his preaching.

Another building of note is the 17th-century Takiyyeh as-Sulaymaniyyeh south of the Barada River. Near it is the National Museum, which houses a vast collection of exhibits including some objects dating back more than four thousand years.

In the Region

Syria is not a large country—only slightly bigger than the state of Oklahoma—and much of it is inhospitable desert. It shares borders with Turkey to the north, Iraq to the east, and Jordan to the south, and Israel and Lebanon in the southwest. But within its boundaries is a wealth of evidence of the ancient world left by the various peoples who have lived and ruled there over the centuries, from the Persians and Romans to the Egyptians and Turks. It is truly a crossroads of history.

Aleppo is Syria's second-largest city, best known for its sprawling covered souks where merchants and buyers have been haggling over every commodity from spices to trinkets to rope for centuries. Some of the oldest souks were built between 1200 and 1300, and many of the market stalls have been operated by the same families for generations.

Aleppo's Great Mosque was founded in the eighth century on the site of a Byzantine cathedral and is an example of what is considered the highest period of Islamic architecture in Syria. The 13th-century Citadel, formerly a royal palace, dominates the city.

Not far from Aleppo, and connected by bus, is Qala'at Samaan and the basilica and shrine of Saint Simeon Stylites. A fifth-century Syrian ascetic, Simeon withdrew from a monastery near Antioch and took up residence on a small platform atop a stone pillar. The pillar was about six feet high, but was the first of a succession, each higher than its predecessor. His final perch was atop a 60-foot pillar from which he did not descend during the last 30 years of his life. Pilgrims came in droves from far and wide to hear him preach from his lofty perch. He converted many nonbelievers to Christianity and had numerous disciples called Stylites (in Greek, "of a pillar"), many of whom copied his unusual way of life.

When he died in 459 an enormous church—four basilicas opening onto a central yard covered by a dome—was built around his pillar, and a town grew around the church to cater to the needs of pilgrims. The church is well preserved, and the remains of the pillar are still part of it.

One of the Middle East's most notable archaeological sites, the ancient city of Palmyra is in a desert oasis about 150 miles from Damascus, near the modern town of Tadmur. Tradition has it that Palmyra was built by King Solomon. It was a thriving caravan station in the first century B.C. and over the next two centuries became a busy city-state of the Roman Empire and a place of fabulous wealth. It reached its height under Odenathus, a Roman ally. Upon his death, by apparent assassination, his widow Zenobia took charge and declared Palmyra's independence. Zenobia's troops managed to hold the city against several incursions by Roman forces, but in 272 the Roman Emperor Aurelian sent a strong army that overwhelmed the city. Zenobia was captured and taken to Rome as a sort of trophy, ending her days in a villa at Tivoli.

Palmyra was subsequently taken by the Arabs, heavily damaged by an earthquake in 1089, and sacked by the Mongol conqueror Tamerlane in the 14th century.

Among the impressive ruins are the Temple of the Sun (or Baal), a huge amphitheater incorporating a market, and the mile-long Great Colonnade, a street lined by tall columns that was once Palmyra's main thoroughfare.

Another Syrian site often visited, and much better preserved, is the Krac des Chevaliers, a castle built by Crusaders 800 years ago to guard a strategically critical pass between Beirut in Lebanon and Antakya (Antioch) in Turkey. At one time the huge fortification housed a garrison of 4,000. It held enough provisions and supplies to allow its defenders to withstand a five-year siege if needed, and it stood for more than two centuries despite many attacks by Muslim armies, not falling until 1271. The castle is near the towns of Hama and Tartus.

Transport and Accommodation

A number of airlines link Syria to the rest of the world via international airports at Damascus and Aleppo. In addition, there are road links to Turkey, Lebanon, Jordan, and Iraq, and an international rail link via Turkey. It is also possible to enter through the ports of Latakia and Tartus on the Mediterranean.

Within Syria, there is intercity travel in air-conditioned coaches, and taxis and trains run regularly between cities. Internal flights are frequent between Damascus-Aleppo-Latakia-Qamishli and Deir al-Zor.

According to Syrian tourist authorities, more than 400 hotels provide a wide choice of accommodation at all price levels. In addition, youth hostels operate during the summer season in Damascus, Aleppo, and Latakia.

Syrian cuisine is well known for its variety. In addition to an abundance of traditional Arab cuisine, there are numerous European-style restaurants in the major centers—many of them French because France administered the country for a period in the first half of the 20th century.

The best time of year to visit is during March and April; by May, the landscape begins to dry up and summer is very hot. Winter can be cold and wet.

The U.S. State Department encourages visitors to Syria to register at the Consular Section of the U.S. Embassy in Damascus and to obtain updated information on travel and security within Syria. A visa is required of all visitors to the country and must be obtained before arrival in Syria.

Syria remains on the U.S. State Department's list of state sponsors of terrorism. As of June 2003, there was no record of recent terrorist attacks against Americans in Syria, and Syrian government officials have repeatedly stated their commitment to protect Americans. However, a number of terrorist groups present in Syria oppose U.S. policies in the Middle East. Americans traveling through the area should remain aware that U.S. interests and citizens may be targeted.

It should be noted that it is nearly impossible to combine a visit to Syria with a visit to Israel. The government of Syria does not allow persons with passports bearing an Israeli visa or entry/exit stamps to enter the country, and entry into Syria via the land border with Israel is not possible.

GREECE

The Christian history of Greece goes back to the first century A.D. when the Apostle Paul brought the faith to Athens and Corinth and places between. Tradition says that Andrew was martyred in Greece, and Peter, Matthew, Luke, and Thomas are all said to have included Greece on their missionary travels.

Christianity grew strongly, but with difficulty, during the first millennium A.D. Major differences arose as early as the fifth and sixth centuries between church leaders in the eastern Mediterranean region and those in Rome. The eventual result was the Great Schism, which divided the church into eastern and western forms of Christianity.

The schism resulted from disagreements large and small. Issues in contention included the ordination of married men to the priesthood and whether Rome or Constantinople should be the seat of the faith. Things came to a head in the mid-11th century. Michael Cerularius, patriarch of Constantinople, began a campaign against the Rome-affiliated churches in his city and eventually closed them. A papal legate was sent from Rome in 1054 to deal with the problem, but the visit proved disastrous; it ended with the legate excommunicating Cerularius and his colleagues, an act widely interpreted as an excommunication of the entire eastern church. Not long afterward, the patriarch and his synod returned the favor.

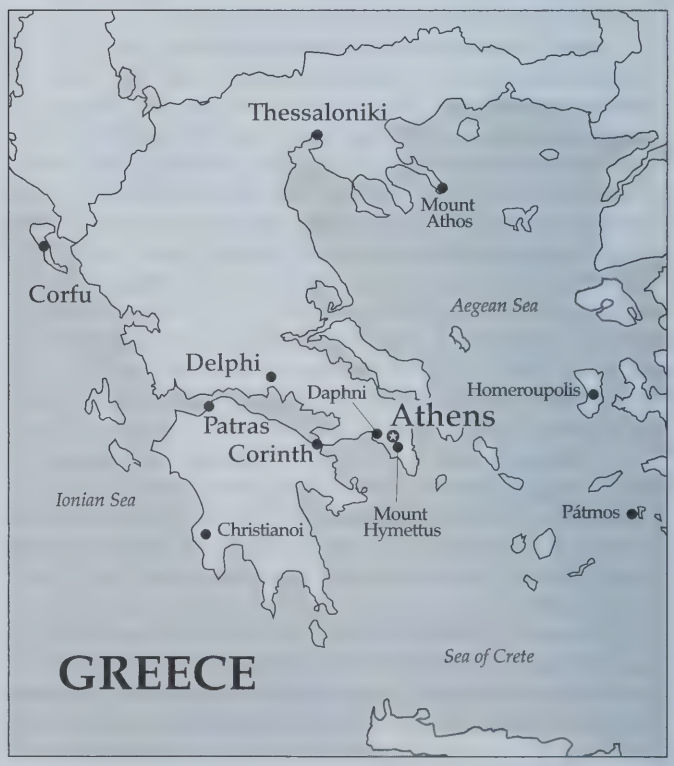
But while this incident is widely cited as the cause of the schism, it was in fact a matter of gradual estrangement that began much earlier and culminated in the sacking of Constantinople by western Catholic Crusaders in 1204. The Crusaders pillaged the city, the symbol of Orthodoxy, and tried to occupy it politically to impose the Latin rite and Latin jurisdiction on the Byzantine church.

In the following centuries, various attempts were made at reconciling the eastern and western churches, but they ended in failure. It was in a renewed spirit of reconciliation that Pope John Paul II included Greece on his pilgrimage "in the footsteps of Saint Paul" in the spring of 2001—the first papal visit to Greece since the churches were one.

Church leaders in Greece were at first cool to the pope's planned visit, a feeling echoed by many Greek citizens. In an unprecedented move, John Paul II attempted to repair the ancient rift with an apology, expressing "deep regret" for past misdeeds of his church, mentioning specifically the "disastrous sack of the imperial city of Constantinople" by the Crusaders.

"For the occasions past and present when sons and daughters of the Catholic Church have sinned by action or omission against their Orthodox brothers and sisters, may the Lord grant us the forgiveness we beg of him," the pope said, addressing Greece's Orthodox leader, Archbishop Christodoulos.

Before the pope left Greece, he and the archbishop met twice more. During their final visit, John Paul suggested that they recite an Our Father together in Greek, and the archbishop readily agreed. Many commentators said it was a sign that the chilly relations between eastern and western Christianity were at last beginning to thaw.



The Orthodox Church is one of the three major branches of Christianity. It stands in continuity with the communities created by the apostles in the eastern Mediterranean region, and was spread by missionary activity throughout Eastern Europe. Today, the Orthodox Church has about 175 million adherents worldwide, compared with nearly 960 million Roman Catholics.

In the Region

Few places are richer in archaeological wonders than Greece, a cradle of western civilization. Archaeological sites and ancient ruins abound, the majority predating Christianity. The Acropolis and the Parthenon in Athens are no doubt among the most famous places in the world, and more ancient sites are being explored and restored around the country each year.

A comprehensive listing of just the sites of Christian history in Greece would fill a book of its own. A small sampling follows.

In Athens, the 12th-century Church of Saint Eleftherios, the city's former cathedral, stands next to the New Cathedral of Athens, built in the 19th century. The old cathedral is decorated with reliefs from structures dating back to the Classical period (500–300 B.C.). It is dedicated to Panaghia Gorgoepikoos, the Virgin Who Answers Prayers Quickly. Among its treasures is a 13th-century icon that is credited with numerous miracles.

Athens' Church of Saint Theodore is believed to be the city's oldest. Plaques built into the wall over the entrance record that the building was renovated in 1065 by Nicolaos Calomalos. It was seriously damaged during the Greek Revolution in 1821 but was restored in 1840.

About five miles west of Athens, the Monastery of Daphni, known for its rich mosaics, is considered a masterpiece of Byzantine art. The mosaics illustrate scenes from the life of Christ and the Blessed Virgin. The original monastery on the site was built in the sixth century A.D.; the present buildings date largely to the late 11th century.

The restored 11th-century Monastery of Kaisariani, 10 miles from Athens on Mount Hymettus, is on a site that once housed a temple to Aphrodite and a sacred spring, then a Christian church in the fifth century.

The city of Corinth, about 55 miles west of Athens, dominated Greek trade in the eighth and seventh centuries B.C. and experienced a second period of great prosperity in the second century A.D. under Roman rule. Saint Paul was there for about 18 months in 52 and 51 A.D. and spent much of his time castigating the Corinthians for their immoral behavior. Infuriated by his preaching, local religious officials took him before the Roman governor. The Bema (public platform) still found in Corinth's Roman agora (marketplace) is where Paul pleaded his case in 52 A.D. He was acquitted, and went on to make Christian converts far and wide until being condemned to death about 15 years later by the Emperor Nero in Rome.

Patras has been important as a religious center since its conversion to Christianity by the Apostle Andrew, who was crucified there around 60 A.D. on an X-shaped cross, the form now known as Saint Andrew's Cross. His tomb attracted vast numbers of pilgrims. Several centuries later, his relics were taken from Patras to Constantinople, where they remained until 1210. In that year, the relics—including Saint Andrew's head—were "translated" by Cardinal Peter of Capua to the cathedral at Amalfi in Italy, and in 1462 the head was moved again to Saint Peter's Basilica in Rome. In 1964 Pope Paul VI returned it to Patras in a gesture of reconciliation to the Orthodox church. It is now venerated in a reliquary in Patras's modern Agiou Andrea (Cathedral of Saint Andrew), said to be largest church in Greece, which was built on or near the site of his crucifixion. In addition to being revered in Greece, Saint Andrew is the patron saint of both Russia and Scotland.

A great magnet for pilgrims in pre-Christian Greece was Delphi. As early as 1400 B.C., the Oracle of Delphi was the most important shrine in all Greece. Built around a sacred spring, it was considered to be the omphalos—literally, the navel—of the world. Pilgrims flocked there to pose questions about the future to Pythia, the priestess of Apollo. Her answers, translated by attendants and almost always cryptic, were religiously followed in every sphere of activity from marriage to spring planting to declarations of war. Delphi became a showcase of art treasures as Greek states and individuals sent gifts to the oracle. Delphi's great popularity came to an end in the fourth century A.D. when Rome, newly Christianized, ruled out prophesying. It is popular with modern tourists and considerable restoration is being undertaken.

The island of Pátmos is believed to be where Saint John the Theologian wrote both his Gospel and the Apocalypse. A monastic complex founded there in the late 10th century dominates the island and the old town of Chorá. Religious ceremonies dating back to the early years of the Christian era are practiced virtually unchanged. The Monastery of Saint John the Theologian (Hagios Ioannis Theologos) and the Cave of the Apocalypse—the two places where John is believed to have done his writing—are pilgrimage centers of particular meaning to the Orthodox faithful.

The Church of St. George on the island of Corfu is a large basilica in the form of an ancient Doric temple. It was built about 1830, during the period when Corfu was a British protectorate. It was initially an Anglican church for the British troops garrisoned on Corfu, but in 1864, at the end of the protectorate, it was converted into an Orthodox church. The 16th-century church of Saint Spyridon in Corfu town holds the body of the island's patron saint, a fourth-century Cypriot priest.

Thessaloniki (Salonica) the second-largest Greek city and port, was settled in the fifth century B.C. Its archaeological museum holds a wealth of treasures from ancient times. Thessaloniki's Saint George's Church was built as a mausoleum for the Roman Emperor Galerius in the fourth century A.D. but was never used for that purpose. It became a Christian church, then a mosque, and is now a museum. Saint Demetrios's Church is on the site of the martyrdom of the city's patron saint and has been restored to its original seventh-century appearance. The Crypt of Aghios Demetrios contains early Christian sculptures of the fifth, sixth, and seventh centuries, Byzantine sculpture, and numerous archaeological finds such as coins and pottery ranging from the fifth to 14th centuries.

The Church of the Metamorphosis (Transfiguration) at Christianoi is considered the most important Byzantine church of the Peloponnesos region. The church was the cathedral of the metropolitan bishopric of Christianoupolis, which was established at the end of the 11th century. Near Christianoi are the traditional settlement of Kyparissia with its Byzantine castle and the small churches of Analepsis (13th century), St. George Bourianon (17th century), and Panaghia Vlacherna (early 19th century).

The Nea Moni (New Monastery) in Homeroupolis, Karyes, is held to be a monument of international importance. Its catholicon (main church) is an excellent example of the insular octagonal domed type of church structure. Founded in the middle of the 11th century, it is now a convent and major museum.

Many pilgrims would like to visit Mount Athos, but few get the chance. It is closed to women (it is said that no female—of any species—has been there since the 11th century), and to tourists. Occasional male visitors are allowed by special arrangement, but they must convince authorities that they have bona fide scholarly, cultural, or religious reasons for wanting to go there. Permission is usually refused.

Athos is on a heavily forested peninsula about 25 miles long and three miles wide jutting into the Aegean Sea. The 6,700-foot mountain, with sheer cliffs dropping to the sea, has been a separate monastic republic for more than one thousand years; the Greek government is represented there by a governor. The first of its several monasteries was founded in 963. At one point in the 17th century about 30,000 monks lived there; today the count is said to be about 2,000, although it varies. Most live in the monasteries, but some are "anchorites," living in remote caves and rude shelters. The monasteries of Mount Athos—particularly the largest and oldest, Grand Lavra—have a rich collection of relics, ancient manuscripts, and artworks, some of which are viewable on the cultural Web sites listed below under Contact Information.

Transport and Accommodation

Air travel from the United States to Greece is easily arranged from major airports, and many nonstop flights are available. A nonstop flight from the East Coast takes between 9 and 11 hours. Within Greece, connections between major cities by air, bus, and train are good, as is transport from the mainland to the Greek islands. Car rental is readily available.

Major cities such as Athens and Corinth offer accommodation and dining at all levels, and smaller towns also usually have ample facilities for travelers.

MALTA

The warmest possible welcome greeted Pope John Paul II when he visited the tiny island nation of Malta in early May 2001. It was the pope's last stop on a pilgrimage "in the footsteps of Saint Paul" and included the beatification of three of Malta's most beloved religious figures.

Religion plays a major role in Maltese life. More than 95 percent of its 380,000 people are Roman Catholic, and an estimated 65 percent attend mass every Sunday.

Malta's Christian heritage stretches back to 60 A.D. when a ship taking the Apostle Paul to Rome as a prisoner was wrecked on the island's rocky coastline. Paul spent three months preaching in Malta and made many converts. Among them was Publius, who became a close friend after Paul cured his father of fever and dysentery. According to tradition, Publius became the first bishop of Malta and was martyred during the persecution of the church under Emperor Trajan. He is Malta's revered patron saint.

The Feast of Saint Paul's Shipwreck, on February 10, marks the turn of events that brought Paul to Malta. About a month earlier, the Feast of Saint Publius in the town of Floriana launches the long feast season, which lasts six months as every town and village honors its own patron saint with processions and festivities of every kind.

The government declared a national holiday for the pope's 2001 visit, and a crowd estimated at 200,000 turned out for a mass at which the pope beatified three of Malta's revered figures: George Preca (1880–1962), founder of the Society of Christian Doctrine; Maria Adeodata Pisani (1806–1855), a Benedictine nun and abbess; and Ignatius Falzon (1813–1865), a monk and missionary.

Malta has stood as a fortress in the central Mediterranean since the earliest times. Its oldest man-made structures are megalithic temples built before 3500 B.C. Ggantija, on the Maltese island of Gozo, is the world's oldest known freestanding structure, predating Stonehenge and the Pyramids.

About eight centuries before the birth of Christ, the Phoenicians established settlements in Malta and stayed for more than five hundred years. Then came the Romans, about 200 B.C. In the ninth century A.D. Arabs from North Africa took over, until Norman invaders from Sicily displaced them in 1090 and remained for more than four centuries.

The Knights of Malta may be the best known occupiers and those most closely identified with the islands. Formally known as the Knights of the Order of Saint John, they were given charge of the islands by the Emperor of Spain in 1530 and ruled there for nearly three centuries after successfully defending Malta against a three-month onslaught by 30,000 Ottoman Turks in 1565. The knights left a rich legacy of buildings and fortifications, and the capital, Valletta, is named in honor of their leader, Jean Parisot de la Valette.

More than 200 years later, in 1798, Napoleon's forces captured the islands, but the British came to Malta's aid and by 1814 had made it a British colony. Eventually, the British also established a major naval base on the island, which became a strategic target in World War II. Months of non-stop bombing by German and Italian forces devastated the islands, but restoration efforts in the post-war decades have largely brought Malta back to its previous state. The nation became independent in 1964.

Transport and Accommodation

It may be possible to book a direct flight from New York to Malta via Air Malta. If that service is unavailable, there are frequent connections between Valletta's Luqa Airport and major European cities including Rome, Frankfurt, Athens, Paris, and London.

Sicily is only about 60 miles away, and there are good connections by boat to the Sicilian ports of Catania, Pozzalo, and Syracusa.

With an increasing interest in tourism to Malta, the number of hotels and restaurants is constantly growing. The cuisine shows Sicilian, Italian, and Moorish influences. Seafood and rabbit are specialties.

In the Region

While Malta today is a distinctly Mediterranean country, a century and a half of British rule have had a pronounced influence. English stands alongside Malti (a Semitic tongue, thought to be based on Phoenician) as the official language. The church is dominant in many spheres of life, and religious buildings are among the outstanding landmarks.

In Valletta, on the main island of Malta, Saint John's Co-Cathedral (Konkatidral ta' San Gwann) has an austere facade, but its interior is a lavishly decorated baroque masterpiece. Multi-colored marble tombstones of Knights of Saint John set in the floor are a memorable sight. Much of the decoration is by Malta's noted 17th-century painter Mattia Preti. The cathedral museum houses a collection of outstanding Flemish tapestries and two paintings by the Italian master Caravaggio.

The Church of Saint Paul's Shipwreck (San Pawl Nawfragu) is another outstanding baroque building. One of its chapels contains a revered relic: an arm bone of Saint Paul.

Among other notable sites in Valletta are the National Museum of Archaeology, which houses a rich collection of artifacts from Malta's prehistoric sites; the 16th-century Grand Masters' Palace, where parliament now meets; and the Sacra Infermeria (Hospital of the Knights), which has become the Mediterranean Conference Center and offers an hourly multimedia presentation on Maltese history.

Less than 10 miles from Valletta, the town of Mdina has a history going back three thousand years. Its cobblestone streets are lined with baroque and Norman buildings, among them the Palazzo Falzon, built shortly before 1500. The 11th-century Sicula-Norman Cathedral in Mdina's main plaza is one of the few buildings to survive an earthquake in 1693. Nearby Rabat is home to the Museum of Roman Antiquities, which showcases Malta's centuries of Roman rule, and Saint Paul's Church, which was built above a grotto where Paul is said to have taken refuge after his shipwreck. Rabat also has elaborate catacombs.

The Rotunda (Church of Saint Mary) in the town of Mosta has one of the largest unsupported domes in Europe—topped only by Saint Peter's in Rome and Hagia Sophia in Istanbul.

Hagar Qim and Malta's other Neolithic temples are the oldest known human structures in the world; Hagar Qim dates from as early as 3800 B.C. The sacrificial altars and oracular chambers of this complex are adorned with elaborate carvings executed with nothing more than the most primitive of stone tools. Hagar Qim and its neighbor, the Mnajdra temple, are near the village of Qrendi.

The other two principal Maltese islands are Gozo and Comino. Gozo is greener than the main island of Malta and more rural, offering sweeping views of terraced fields, shorelines, and imposing churches.

Comino is only about a square mile and is virtually uninhabited—in the winter, it may have only half a dozen residents.

Near the town of Xaghra on Gozo are the ruins of the nearly six-thousand-year-old Ggantija Temples. In town, the Church of Our Lady of Victories has not one but two tower clocks; one shows the correct time, but the other is said to be set wrong on purpose in an effort to fool the devil. Another impressive church is in Gozo's town of Nadur.

Victoria, Gozo's capital, has an outstanding baroque church, the Bazilika San Gorg (Saint George's Basilica), as well as an impressive citadel and folk and archaeological museums.

Tiny Comino is a haven for day-trippers who come from the other two islands to walk its quiet trails and swim in its popular Blue Lagoon.

The best time to visit Malta is probably between February and June, after the cool and damp winter season and before the hot Mediterranean summer. The summer months, however, are popular with many tourists.

Religious holidays are major events in Malta. In elaborate Good Friday pageants, statues are borne through Valletta and other towns to commemorate the Passion and Crucifixion. During the Christmas season, statues of the Christ Child adorn homes and shops, towns are decorated with lights, and bands march through Valletta every evening.

ROME

In A.D. 67, during the reign of Emperor Nero, the Apostle Peter was crucified—head downward, at his own request—in the middle of a Roman racecourse.

Nero was celebrating his thirteenth year as emperor with bloody entertainments that included every type of torture and execution. Peter, the former Galilean fisherman appointed by Christ as an apostle, had brought Christianity to pagan Rome; he was chief among the emperor's victims.

After Peter's death, some of the faithful built a simple tomb for his remains in the center of a pagan cemetery on Vatican Hill. The tomb soon began drawing pilgrims, and over the next few years their number steadily increased.

The Roman Catholic Church grew from Peter's apostolate in Rome, and from his grave site grew the Basilica of Saint Peter and the Vatican palaces that today serve as the center of the faith and a magnet for the faithful from around the world.

The Apostle Paul, a tentmaker and scholar before his conversion, traveled widely in the ancient world spreading the gospel. His travels were perilous; he was flogged, stoned, shipwrecked, imprisoned, and banished from numerous cities, until his ministry ended in Rome; he was beheaded there by Nero, probably in the same year that Saint Peter was crucified. His martyrdom similarly drew an increasing number of pilgrims over the following decades.

It was after the year 313, however, that pilgrimage to Rome increased enormously. With the Peace of the Church—when Emperor Constantine I legalized Christianity throughout the empire following his own conversion—there was a flurry of church building in Rome that included a basilica on Vatican Hill over the old cemetery. The Basilica of Peter the Apostle was richly decorated and furnished and began attracting pilgrims from the far reaches of the empire. Another basilica, San Paolo fuori le Mura (Saint Paul's outside the Walls) was built by Constantine to enshrine Saint Paul's tomb.

By the late fourth century, crowds of pilgrims came to worship at both basilicas and at the catacombs, the vast network of underground cemeteries where early Christians held their forbidden services and hid from frequent persecutions.

Saint Jerome, about A.D. 365, described crowds of visitors at the catacombs and martyr churches in Rome; and Saint John Chrysostom, writing in 387, spoke of the heads of state, generals, and consuls who were traveling to Rome to venerate the tombs of Saints Peter and Paul—"a fisherman and a tentmaker."

As Rome declined as an imperial power, both the role of the city as the center of the Christian faith and pilgrim traffic increased. Scholae, or hostels, were built for pilgrims from different nations; the earliest is believed to have been built by King Ine of Wessex about 730.

By the Middle Ages, pilgrimages to Rome had become entirely too popular in the view of some church officials. In canon law, the usual penalty for striking a cleric was a pilgrimage to Rome, because forgiveness for this crime could only be granted by the pope. But historians say that with the rise of the universities the penalty had to be abolished—too many students were taking advantage of it.

Pope Boniface VIII, in 1300, proclaiming the first Holy Year, prescribed visits to the basilicas of Saint Peter and Saint Paul as required of all pilgrims. In 1350 Pope Clement VI added Saint John Lateran (San Giovanni in Laterano); and in 1400 Pope Urban VI added Saint Mary Major (Santa Maria Maggiore). Ever since, visits to these four basilicas have been the custom for pilgrims to Rome.

By the late fifteenth century, Constantine's Basilica of Saint Peter had fallen into disrepair and was structurally unsound. Over the next two centuries, it was replaced by the present basilica and the buildings of today's Vatican.

The Vatican's spiritual, historical, and architectural wonders are well known, from Saint Peter's (the world's largest church and among the highest architectural achievements of the Renaissance) to the famed Sistine Chapel and the Vatican Museums.

Saint Paul's outside the Walls (so called because it was beyond the walls of the old city) was originally even larger than Saint Peter's. It eventually fell into disuse and disrepair and remained neglected until the eleventh century, when it was restored and again became a center of pilgrimage. In 1823 fire destroyed all but the cloisters; and although the original basilica was replaced, only the cloisters give an idea of the first building's grandeur.

The Basilica of San Giovanni in Laterano is the Cathedral of Rome and the official seat of the Bishop of Rome—the pope. Its present facade, which dates from the mid-1930s, mimics that of Saint Peter's. Much of the rest of the present building is about a century older, although parts of its predecessor structures remain, dating back to Constantine's time.

Among San Giovanni's relics, enshrined in a fourteenth-century Gothic tabernacle, are what are believed to be the heads of Saint Peter and Saint Paul. Nearby, in a sixteenth-century building, are the Holy Steps (Scala Santa), which are said to be the marble steps from Pontius Pilate's palace in Jerusalem.

The fourth church requiring a visit by the true pilgrim, Santa Maria Maggiore, has had far less rebuilding and is therefore one of the oldest churches in Rome, dating from about 440. Legend holds that the Virgin Mary appeared to Pope Sixtus III and ordered him to build a church in her honor at a place, in Rome, where snow would fall on August 5. The snow fell, the church is on that spot, and the miraculous event is commemorated every August 5 with the feast of the Madonna of the Snows. During a special mass, white rose petals cascade from the ceiling.

There are many more churches awaiting the modern pilgrim. Rome is a city of churches, many of them of considerable historical, religious, and architectural importance. Among the more noteworthy are:

- Saint Andrea della Frate, where there was an apparition of the Blessed Virgin in 1842
- Il Gesu, mother church of the Jesuits, designed in 1568 and second only to Saint Peter's in the opulence of its decoration
- the shrine of Saint Philip Neri, founder of the Oratorians, in the Chiesa Nuova (new church), formally known as the Church of Santa Maria in Vallicella
- San Pietro in Vincoli (Saint Peter in Chains), which was built to hold the chains with which Saint Peter was bound after his arrest in Rome, and which houses Michelangelo's famous statue of Moses

Papal Audiences

Most pilgrims hope for an audience with the pope, and this is frequently possible. The pope holds mass audiences on Wednesday mornings. From March to October, they are held in Saint Peter's Square or at the summer papal residence at Castel Gandolfo; during the winter, they are held in an auditorium.

Tickets are required and must be applied for in advance. They are available through some tour operators and travel agencies, or requests can be addressed directly to the Bishop's Office for United States Visitors to the Vatican, the address of which can be found below under Contact Information.

When the pope is in Rome, he also makes a weekly appearance at the window of the Vatican Palace on Sunday at noon.

Visitors to churches, particularly Saint Peter's, must observe dress codes. While women are no longer required to cover their heads, they must cover bare arms and shoulders. Skirts and dresses should fall below the knees. Neither women nor men may wear shorts. No restrictions apply to the mass papal audiences; for other types of audiences, consult the Vatican Information Office.

Elsewhere in Rome

For the modern pilgrim, the possibility of seeing the pope and visiting the shrines of the Apostles may be the main purpose of the voyage, but the relics of Rome's ancient glory are there as well. These are among the most noteworthy:

- The Colosseum, ancient Rome's most famous building, dates from the first century A.D. As many as 80,000 Romans of all classes—from Caesar to slave—would fill the huge amphitheater in its heyday to witness spectacles of savage brutality put on as public entertainment.

- The Roman Forum, the heart of Rome before imperial times, is in ruins. Some of these date from about 500 B.C.; others from about A.D. 400.

- The Pantheon, the "home of the gods," was built by Emperor Hadrian in the second century A.D. and converted into a church four centuries later.

- Trajan's Column was built to memorialize the Emperor Trajan's successful second-century campaign in Yugoslavia.

Also of note are the many monuments of Renaissance Rome, the city's numerous museums and galleries, its parks and gardens, and its scores of fountains—a fixture of the city even in ancient times.

Transport and Accommodation

Getting to Rome by air from the United States can be easily arranged from all major airports. Numerous tour operators offer pilgrimage packages of various durations, sometimes combining Rome with the Holy Land or with the Marian shrine at Medjugorje in Bosnia.

Rome is well served by public transportation, but visitors keen on seeing as much as possible should be prepared to do considerable walking; much in the old city cannot be reached by a vehicle of any kind. The city is linked by air, rail, and road with the rest of Italy and Europe.

Rome offers all types of accommodation in all price ranges. Most major American hotel chains are represented. Restaurants of every sort are also plentiful, from fast food to haute cuisine.

ASSISI

A series of earthquakes in late 1997 brought death and widespread damage to one of the capitals of Christendom, the picturesque hillside city of Assisi in Umbria, central Italy.

But Assisi has rebuilt, and pilgrims are once again streaming there from around the world.

Assisi's fame stems largely from Saint Francis, founder of the Franciscans, the largest of all religious orders. He and Saint Clare, one of his devoted followers and founder of the contemplative order known as the Poor Clares, were both born there in the late twelfth century and the city is dominated by reminders of their lives and work.

Saint Francis was born in 1181 or 1182, the son of Pietro di Bernardone, a wealthy textile merchant. In his early years, Francis's love of life and worldly pleasures made him a popular figure and a leader of Assisi's youth. But after being imprisoned at about the age of 20 during intercity fighting between Assisi and Perugia, and later falling seriously ill, he became dissatisfied with his life and entered a period of deep self-analysis and prayer.

His conversion in 1205 followed a vision: At the Church of San Damiano, he heard a voice from a crucifix saying, "Go, Francis, and repair my house, which is in ruins." He renounced his possessions, broke relations with his father, and began a life of rebuilding churches and of service to the poor.

His love of man and nature and his mystical approach to poverty and simplicity soon drew others to him, and the first order was formed. Francis called his followers "friars minor" (lesser brethren). In 1209 or 1210, the order received the approval of Pope Innocent III, who gave the friars permission to preach and made Francis a deacon.

The order expanded quickly. Francis devoted himself to its spiritual growth and continued to travel and preach widely, but frequently he retreated to a solitary hermitage. On September 14, 1224, during a prolonged period of fasting and prayer, he received the stigmata—the imprint on his own body of the wounds suffered by Christ in the Crucifixion. His was the first documented occurrence of stigmatization.

At the end of his life, Francis was blind and seriously ill. He died at Assisi on October 3, 1226, and was canonized on July 16, 1228, by Pope Gregory IX, who the following day laid the cornerstone of the church that would contain Francis's remains.

His generosity, his love of nature, his humility, and his devotion to God and man place Francis among the most beloved of saints. He was proclaimed patron of Catholic Action in 1916, and in 1939 he was named patron of Italy. More recently, Pope John Paul II proclaimed him the patron saint of ecologists. In addition to establishing the Franciscan order, he is commemorated in the names of numerous other religious organizations. His feast day is October 4.

Clare and the Second Order

Like Saint Francis, Saint Clare was born to a well-to-do Assisi family. In 1211, after hearing Francis speak a Lenten message, she became one of his fervent followers.

The two perfectly understood each other's desire to flee from a worldly life and to give themselves fully to a life of contemplation.

About a year later, on the night after Palm Sunday (March 18, 1212), 18-year-old Clare and a close friend secretly went to the Portiuncula, a small chapel that had become the cradle of Francis's movement. There, he and his friars dressed her in the Franciscan robe, cut her hair to consecrate her to a life of penance, and thus formed what is known as Francis's second order. The friend who accompanied her, Pacifica di Guelfuccio, was the first sister to join the order.

Clare's example was soon followed by her sister Agnes and later by their mother, Ortolana, and another sister, Beatrice. The order took as its mother house the Church of Saint Damian and initially was called the Poor Women of Saint Damian's. In 1215, Pope Innocent III granted Clare the privilege of taking the vow of poverty, and her rule was approved in 1253, just a few days before her death.

Clare was canonized two years later. She is venerated as the patron of good weather and of television, and her intercession is sought in cases of eye disease and in childbirth. Her feast day is August 11.

The Poor Clares followed Francis's ideal of poverty: Individual sisters, and their community, were forbidden to hold property of any kind and were to live "as strangers and pilgrims in this world . . . content to serve the Lord in poverty and humility."

Assisi's Shrines

Assisi, which now has a population of about 25,000, is a major spiritual and artistic center and has long been a favored pilgrimage destination. In some years marking anniversaries of major events in Saint Francis's life, the number of pilgrims to Assisi approaches five million.

Assisi's fortunes have varied since the time of Saints Francis and Clare, but in the past century its importance as a center of the faith has increased.

Despite the great damage caused by the 1997 earthquakes, much of ancient and medieval Assisi is intact. Even during World War II, when the central and northern portions of Italy were heavily bombed, Assisi escaped damage because the Germans designated it a hospital town.

Assisi's religious buildings are particularly noteworthy. The Basilica of San Francesco, which enshrines Saint Francis's remains, is one of Italy's most famous monuments. Richly decorated and ornamented, its features include a fresco cycle by Giotto—a precursor of the Italian Renaissance—and members of his school. Sadly, parts of the fresco cycle fell in the earthquakes and were shattered. Restorers immediately began the task of piecing them back together as part of the mammoth task of restoring the basilica. The work was largely complete in time for the Jubilee Year of 2000.

The thirteenth-century Basilica of Santa Chiara contains Saint Clare's remains and the crucifix that spoke to Francis and led him to a religious life. (That event took place about a mile away at the eleventh-century Oratory of San Damiano.)

The Basilica of Santa Maria degli Angeli (built 1569–1676 and rebuilt in 1836) is a massive baroque structure enclosing the Portiuncula, the little chapel restored by Francis that became central to the formation of his order and years later was the place of his death.

About two miles from Assisi is the Hermitage of the Carceri, a monastery on the thickly wooded slopes of Mount Subasio at the place where Francis and his followers first lived and to which he often returned.

Shrines elsewhere in Italy honor the founders of two other religious orders—the shrine of Saint Benedict at Monte Cassino and the shrine of Saint Dominic at the church of San Domenico in Bologna.

In the Region

Umbria, "The Green Heart of Italy," is a picturesque region of hills and valleys that contains some of Italy's most memorable scenery as well as noteworthy medieval and earlier buildings and other man-made structures.

Perugia, a well-preserved medieval city and Umbria's largest, is situated atop a group of hills. The Duomo (cathedral) and its adjoining museum are among the old town's principal features. Other sites of historical and artistic importance are the Collegio del Cambio with its late fifteenth-century frescoes and the Archaeological Museum of Umbria, which offers artifacts dating back beyond the Roman era to the city's Etruscan origins. Near Perugia is the wine-making center of Torgiano.

Northeast of Perugia is the medieval mountain town of Gubbio. The thirteenth-century Duomo and the Palazzo Ducale are among its best-preserved buildings.

South of Assisi is Spoleto, another scenic medieval town whose walls enclose quaint cobbled streets and centuries-old buildings. Spoleto is dominated by a fourteenth-century castle (until recently used as a prison) and known for its Ponte delle Torri (Bridge of the Towers), built in the same era as the castle on Roman foundations. Spoleto is known as a quiet place except during June and July when it hosts an arts festival, the Festival of Two Worlds, which packs the town and its environs with visitors.

Near Spoleto is the Church of San Salvatore, one of Italy's oldest. Built by Eastern monks in the fourth century, it has changed little since a renovation in the ninth century.

Loreto in the neighboring province of the Marches, known to pilgrims for its House of the Blessed Virgin (see the following chapter) is within easy reach of Assisi.

Transport and Accommodation

Assisi and other major towns and cities in Umbria are easily accessible from Rome by train, bus, and automobile. Hotel and inn accommodation of various classes is plentiful in most of Umbria, but reservations are recommended, particularly in summer and during festivals. Restaurants are also numerous and many of them are of superior quality.

LORETO

Saints-to-be, princes, and more than 50 popes are among the countless pilgrims who have visited the Italian town of Loreto and its Holy House of the Blessed Virgin, one of the most revered monuments of Christianity.

Loreto's significance dates back more than 700 years to the late thirteenth century. The Holy House is believed to be the home of the Blessed Virgin, flown from the Holy Land to its present site by a band of angels.

According to tradition, the angels felt that the house—which had been turned into a church by the Apostles in the first century—needed to be moved because Nazareth had fallen into the hands of Muslim invaders with the fall of the Latin Kingdom of Jerusalem in 1291.

The legend, as recorded by Pietro di Giorgio Tolomei in 1470, says that the angels first took the house—containing a statue of the Virgin made by Saint Luke—to Tersatto, near Rijeka (Fiume) in present-day Croatia, in 1291. When it was not properly venerated there, it was moved about three years later (again by angels) to a wooded area near the Italian village of Recanti overlooking the Adriatic coast. Eight months later, it was moved again, to a nearby hillside, but this spot also was deemed imperfect and the angels moved the house a fourth time, a short distance to its present location.

Within about a year, the Virgin revealed the origin of the 31- by 13-foot house to a holy man in a dream. Word spread, and the people of Recanti took steps to protect the building and sent a 16-member delegation to Nazareth to look into the matter. The delegation returned to report that the building was no longer where it had been in Nazareth, having "vanished," and that the foundation left behind there was of the same dimensions as that of the house that had mysteriously appeared near their village.

The Holy House quickly became a shrine. Its rough stone walls are now enclosed in a elaborate marble tabernacle, which in turn is enclosed in the magnificent Basilica of the Holy House. The basilica, begun in 1468 and completed in 1587, includes the work of many of Italy's foremost architects. Its facade is by Donato Bramante, the dome is by Giuliano da Sangallo, and beneath the dome is the marble tabernacle executed by Andrea Sansovino and more than two dozen other artists. The frescoes decorating the cupola are by Melozzo da Forli and Marco Palmezzano (1477), and the sacristy was painted by Luca Signorelli in 1479. Numerous other painters and ceramists of noted Renaissance schools also contributed their artistry.

The shrine was made a parish in 1482 and placed under papal protection two years later. It became a collegiate church in 1514 and was made a minor basilica in 1728. An Office of Loreto in the Breviary and Missal (1699) was extended to all of Italy in 1916.

In 1920 Our Lady of Loreto was declared the patron of airmen and air travelers. A prayer for safe flight, composed by Pope John Paul II, is available at the shrine in numerous languages.

Investigations in recent times have shown that the stone of which the house is built is not found near Loreto but is commonly found around Nazareth and that the house has clearly been moved from another site. A hypothesis raised is that the house was brought to Italy not by angels but by Crusaders.

Whatever its precise origin, the shrine has been the scene of many miraculous cures and has drawn pilgrims from far and wide and from every level of society for centuries. The throngs reach their peak at Easter and at the Feast of the Holy House on December 10.

In the Region

Loreto is north of Rome and east of Umbria, in the region of the Marches. While scenic, the region is not among Italy's most-frequented tourist destinations and is highly recommended as an off-the-beaten-track locale.

The city of Urbino is the Marches' second most popular destination. The hilltop city has been a center of learning for centuries and is still home to a university and a number of respected fine-arts academies.

In appearance, Urbino is much as it was in its fifteenth-century heyday. It centers on its famed Ducal Palace, built in that era by Duke Federico da Montefeltro. The palace, considered an example of the spirit of the Renaissance at its height, now houses the National Museum of the Marches. The museum's large and well-displayed collection of sculpture, paintings, and other works of art includes numerous noteworthy pieces, among them Paolo Uccello's "Profanation of the Host," Titian's "Resurrection" and "Last Supper," and Piero della Francesca's "The Flagellation of Christ."

Urbino is also the birthplace of the painter Raphael, and the house in which he was born is open to visitors. Another well-known native of the city is the Renaissance architect Donato Bramante, who designed the facade of Loreto's basilica.

Ascoli Piceno is another Marches city of interest to tourists. In a valley on the Tronto River, Ascoli Piceno's historic center includes the Piazza del Popolo with its Palazzo del Popolo (a town hall dating back to the thirteenth century) and the Gothic church of San Francesco. Ascoli Piceno is also known as the place of origin of the liqueur anisette.

Ancona is a busy port on the Adriatic that was largely rebuilt after being very heavily bombed during World War II. Although little of the old city remains, it is a handy point of embarkation by ferry for Venice or other Adriatic ports.

Assisi in neighboring Umbria (see preceding pages) is within easy reach of Loreto.

Transport and Accommodation

The Marches is accessible from Rome by rail and road. Because of the hilly terrain and a relative lack of modern highways, however, travel within the region by road or rail is often slow.

As in neighboring Umbria, hotels, inns, and restaurants are numerous and many are of excellent quality. Seafood is a specialty, and in Loreto itself much of the local cuisine is game-based.

PADUA

Homage to Saint Anthony of Padua—preacher, teacher, and wonder-worker—draws throngs of pilgrims to the ancient Italian city of his surname. Padua (Padova) was Anthony's last home, and he is entombed there in the magnificent Basilica of Sant'Antonio.

Anthony was born to a noble family in Lisbon, Portugal, in 1195 and received his early education at Lisbon Cathedral School. In 1210, as a teenager, he joined the Augustinian Canons Regular and engaged in study at Coimbra, then the Portuguese capital.

In 1220, when the relics of the first missionary martyrs of the newly founded Franciscan order were brought to Coimbra for burial, Anthony was inspired to follow in their footsteps. He obtained his release from the Augustinians, became a Franciscan the following year, and embarked for North Africa. But he was not destined for martyrdom, and North Africa was not to be the place where he would do his work.

Illness forced Anthony to return, but his voyage was diverted when his ship was driven off course by bad weather and landed in Sicily. He made his way to Assisi, where Saint Francis had founded the new order. For a brief period he lived in solitude and penance in the hermitage of Monte Paolo near Forli, but his reputation as a scholar and inspiring preacher soon brought him to prominence. Francis commissioned him to preach against heretics in northern Italy and southern France and also assigned him to teach his brother friars as the order's first lector in theology.

Anthony was a short man, inclined to chubbiness and in frail health, but he had a powerful and attractive personality. This, combined with his superior knowledge of the scriptures and his great talent as a speaker, caused his reputation to grow. Wherever he went, throngs came to hear him speak, and many were brought to the faith. He became known as "the hammer of heretics" and often preached against usury and avarice.

After the death of Francis in 1226, Anthony remained at Padua, where he was greatly revered. His frail health gave out, however, and he died on a trip back to Padua from a retreat on June 13, 1231, at the age of 36.

A great popular devotion to him rose and he was canonized within a year. Many miracles were attributed to him, particularly after his death, and he continues to be revered as a worker of wonders. Saint Anthony is frequently invoked for the return of lost objects, and he is believed to protect the pregnant and travelers. He also is the patron saint of the poor, and alms given to obtain his intercession are frequently referred to as "Saint Anthony's bread."

At Saint Anthony's canonization in 1232, Pope Gregory IX called him a "teacher of the Church," and in 1946 Pius XII made him a Doctor of the Church with the title Doctor evangelicus. His shrine was visited by more than 5 million pilgrims in Holy Year 2000.

The City

According to legend, Padua was founded by the mythical Trojan prince Antenore. It received Roman citizenship in 49 B.C. and in the time of the emperor Augustus was probably the empire's second wealthiest city after Rome. Its fortunes varied, however. It was destroyed by the Lombards in the sixth century, then revived in the tenth. Over the following centuries, it was under the jurisdiction of various nation-states until it became part of the Kingdom of Italy in 1866. It was prominent among the northern Italian cities that were the cradle of the Renaissance.

The city is rich in sites of religious interest, many of which predate Saint Anthony. Notable among these is the ninth-century Chiesa di Santa Sophia. The Basilica of Sant'Antonio, which dates to Saint Anthony's time, is Romanesque-Gothic with Venetian and Byzantine elements; in its interior are sculptures by Donatello and Sansovino, paintings by Titian, and marble reliefs by Tullio Lombardo. (Donatello, who lived in the fifteenth century, executed a series of bronze reliefs illustrating Saint Anthony's life that are among the basilica's most famous treasures.)

Elsewhere in Padua are the Cappella degli Scrovegni, an early fourteenth-century chapel with frescoes by Giotto; Chiesa degli Eremitani, a thirteenth-century church with frescoes by Mantegna; and Chiesa di Santa Giustina, a sixteenth-century church with paintings by Veronese including the huge altarpiece "The Martyrdom of Saint Justine."

The University of Padua was established in the early thirteenth century and counts the poets Dante, Petrarch, and Tasso among its alumni.

In the Region

Padua is only about 25 miles to the west of Venice, which dominates the region and was once its ruler. Venice offers countless artistic and historical treasures, and the region as a whole is rich in art and architecture and is one of Italy's best-known wine-producing areas.

Another popular tourist destination is Verona (the setting for Romeo and Juliet), whose attractions include a well-preserved Roman amphitheater built in the first century. Among its notable churches are the Gothic Sant'Anastasia and the Romanesque Duomo.

Transport and Accommodation

The region's principal airport is Venice's Marco Polo, which handles international and domestic traffic. Padua is linked by rail to Milan, Florence, Bologna, and Rome; Venice is a rail trip of less than half an hour. Bus service links smaller centers as well as the major cities, and there is a modern and efficient highway system.

Padua offers a range of accommodation and restaurants, and both hotels and eating places are plentiful in the region as a whole. In and near Venice, prices are higher.

TURIN

The Holy Shroud, believed by many to be the burial cloth of Jesus Christ, has drawn countless pilgrims to the northern Italian city of Turin.

The shroud was on display from August 12 to October 22, 2000, to mark the new Christian millennium, and drew enormous crowds. It had last been on display for six weeks in 1998, when Pope John Paul II was among the more than three million pilgrims who came to Turin to see it.

The shroud is a rectangular length of woven linen cloth measuring 14 feet 3 inches (4.3 meters) long by 3 feet 7 inches (1.1 meters) wide. Normally, it is kept inside a sealed silver reliquary in the cathedral. On the shroud is the image of a man whose wounds correspond with accounts of the Crucifixion—whip marks, head wounds from the crown of thorns, nail wounds, a wound in the side.

The shroud's history is known with relative certainty back to the early 1350s, when it was displayed in Lirey, France. It came into the possession of the House of Savoy at Chambéry, France, in 1453 and in 1578 was taken to Turin. But several noted historians believe that it is in fact the Mandylion, or "Veronica," a piece of cloth bearing the likeness of Christ that was venerated by early Christians. The Mandylion was displayed in a wooden case, the face visible through an oval opening; the supposition is that the entire shroud was folded within the case.

That theory aside, the earliest references to Christ's burial shroud come from the fifth or early sixth century and are attributed to Saint Nino. Additional references come from the seventh century, when replicas of a such a shroud were used in the Byzantine liturgy. In 1171 William of Tyre reported that the burial shroud of Christ was preserved in the imperial palace in Constantinople.

In 1203 Crusaders reported that the shroud was displayed in Constantinople and that the image of the Lord was clearly visible. It is possible that when Constantinople seemed likely to fall back into Oriental hands the shroud was taken away. It disappeared during the fourth Crusade in 1203, and the Latin emperor's prime minister, who had access to it, returned to France at about that time. He was of the family of Geoffrey de Charny, who brought the shroud to Lirey about 1354.

The shroud has narrowly escaped destruction by fire three times, the most recent in 1997. The date of the first fire is unknown, but burn marks were already evident on the shroud before 1532, when the second fire took place. On that occasion, fire struck the Cathedral of Sainte Chapelle in Chambéry, and the reliquary was subjected to such extreme heat that it started to melt. Before it was taken from the burning church, molten silver had dropped onto the shroud, causing burns along both sides of the image.

The third fire, in April 1997, extensively damaged Turin's fifteenth-century cathedral. The fire began in either the dome of the chapel, which was undergoing renovation, or in the west wing of the Royal Palace, which adjoins it. The fire quickly spread through the complex and approached the place where the shroud had been temporarily placed during the renovations.

The reliquary was sealed within a large enclosure of bulletproof glass an inch and a half thick; a fireman wielding a large sledge hammer managed to smash through the glass and the shroud was carried to safety as pieces of the burning dome fell around its rescuers. Authorities later said that if the shroud had been in its normal resting place it would have been consumed by the flames. It is now in a new display area that is designed to be more secure.

The shroud is probably the world's most-studied artifact. It has been subjected to scientific tests of many kinds, but none have conclusively proved or disproved its origins. Although radiocarbon dating in the late 1980s indicated that the cloth might be only about 700 years old, research a decade later indicated that it may well be centuries older. In 1997 several eminent scientists cast doubt upon the results of the earlier radiocarbon-dating tests for a number of reasons.

When he viewed the shroud on May 24, 1998, Pope John Paul II called for further studies and meditation on its origin.

It has been said, however, that for unbelievers, no amount of proof is sufficient, and for believers no amount of proof is necessary. Whether or not the shroud is the burial cloth of Christ, it is one of the world's most venerated objects. As Pope Paul VI said in the 1970s, "Aside from what scientists and researchers have said or may yet say about the shroud, this incomparable portrait of the Man of Sorrows will continue to touch the minds and hearts of people for ages to come. It will speak to them of the boundless love of Christ for mankind."

In the Region

Turin, on the Po River 320 miles northwest of Rome, is Italy's fourth largest city and dates back to pre-Roman times. It is the regional capital of Piedmont, the center of several of the country's leading industries, particularly automobiles, chemicals, and metals. But Piedmont and neighboring Valle d'Aosta also offer some of Europe's most spectacular Alpine scenery and historical attractions, from the Matterhorn and Mont Blanc to the well-preserved Roman city of Aosta.

Turin's 500-year-old Cathedral of Saint John the Baptist, the Chapel of the Holy Shroud, and Royal Palace are in the heart of the city. Nearby is the seventeenth-century Church of San Lorenzo, designed by Guarino Guarini, the priest and master of baroque architecture who also designed the chapel. Also among his creations are Turin's Palace of the Academy of Sciences, which now houses two museums, and the Palazzo Carignano, the birthplace of two kings and the meeting place of Italy's first parliament.

About 12 miles west of Turin is the Abbey of Sant'Antonio di Ranverso, founded in the twelfth century as an abbey hospital to care for victims of the crippling disease Saint Anthony's Fire. Over the centuries, it was the destination of throngs of pilgrims seeking cures or giving thanks for recoveries.

A short journey from there leads to the secluded and impressive Abbey of Saint Michael (Sacra di San Michele), built in the eleventh century on Monte Pirchiriano.

North of Turin are the Matterhorn (Monte Cervino), which straddles the border of Italy and Switzerland, and Mont Blanc (Monte Bianco), Europe's highest peak.

The small city of Aosta, founded as a Roman garrison in the first century B.C., retains many of its ancient structures, including the Arch of Augustus built in 25 B.C. Ecclesiastical buildings include the Collegiata di Sant'Orso, dating from the sixth century and added to or modified numerous times since and thus exhibiting a wide variety of architectural styles. The oldest parts of the city's cathedral date from the tenth century.

Transport and Accommodation

Turin is a major transportation hub, with road and rail connections in all directions. The region's international airport, Aeroporto Caselle, is about 10 miles from the city. Turin is also on the main rail line from Rome to Paris and is only about an hour and a half from Milan. Rome to Turin is a six- to nine-hour rail trip.

As a major city, Turin has plentiful lodging and many restaurants of all classes. Outlying areas of Piedmont and Val d'Aosta, because of their numerous tourist attractions, also offer abundant and varied accommodation and notable cuisine. Both winter and summer are prime seasons for tourism.

BARI and APULIA

For centuries, pilgrims have journeyed to the Adriatic port city of Bari in southeastern Italy to honor Saint Nicholas of Myra, one of the most popular saints in Christendom.

And visitors to Bari will find that Apulia (or Puglia), the region of which it is the capital, includes a number of other places of pilgrimage. Prominent among them are Monte Sant'Angelo—whose countless visitors over the ages have included Saint Francis of Assisi—and San Giovanni Rotondo, which in recent decades has drawn many to the shrine and tomb of Padre Pio, now Saint Pio of Pietrelcina.

Saint Nicholas, despite his great popularity, is a somewhat mysterious figure. It is known with certainty that he was bishop of Myra in Lycia (now part of Turkey) in the first half of the fourth century, but details of his life and his ancestry are sketchy. Accounts abound, but many conflict or are given little credence.

His legend holds that he was born in the port city of Parara, in Lycia, and as a youth made pilgrimages to Egypt and Palestine. He became known for his zeal and piety, and was soon named bishop of the metropolitan church at Myra. He is said to have been imprisoned during the persecutions of the church during the reign of the emperor Diocletian, and to have taken part in the First Council of Nicaea in 325.

The date of his death is uncertain; some accounts give it as 345, others as 352. He was entombed in his cathedral at Myra, and his shrine there became well-known and revered.

It was more than seven centuries later that his connection with Bari came about. Myra had fallen into the hands of the Saracens, and several Italian cities saw this as a justification and an opportunity to acquire the saint's relics for themselves. In 1087 Italian sailors or soldiers removed Saint Nicholas's body from the shrine at Myra and "translated" it to Bari.

By that time, devotion to the saint had already spread far and wide; his cult had been brought to Germany a century earlier by the Byzantine Princess Theophano, wife of Otto II, and accounts of numerous miracles circulated throughout the Christian world. Once Saint Nicholas's relics were enshrined at Bari—in the presence of Pope Urban II—devotion greatly increased. The Basilica di San Nicola quickly became an important center of pilgrimage.

Over the centuries, the saint's popularity continued to grow. He is patron of children, scholars, sailors, captives, merchants, bakers, virgins, and pawnbrokers. In the Middle Ages, he was regarded by thieves as their patron saint. He is patron of Greece, Russia, Sicily, Lorraine, the Diocese of Liäge, and of numerous cities in Italy, Germany, Austria, Belgium, and across Europe. More than 2,000 churches are dedicated to him in Germany, France, and England. In Christian art, he is said to have been represented more frequently than any saint except for the Blessed Virgin.

Probably because several of Saint Nicholas's legends involve the giving of gifts, he is the figure upon whom Santa Claus is based. The transformation of Saint Nicholas into Santa Claus or Father Christmas occurred initially among Protestants, particularly where Reformed churches were in the majority. In Germany, the Netherlands, and Switzerland, he was known as the secret purveyor of gifts to children on December 6, his feast day. Later, Dutch settlers in New Amsterdam—now New York City—replaced Nicholas (Sinter Claes) with the figure who became the benevolent magician known as Santa.

The City

Bari is ancient. Established in the fourth century, it went to the Ostrogoths after the fall of the Roman Empire, was sacked in the mid-seventh century by the Byzantines, then passed to the Lombards. There was a Moslem occupation in the mid-ninth century, after which it returned to Byzantium before being taken by the Normans in 1071. Later it came under the control of Aragon, Spain, the Hapsburgs, and the Bourbons. The city was a main port of embarkation for many pilgrims and Crusaders on their way to the Holy Land in the Middle Ages and remains a principal port for travelers taking ferries across the Adriatic to Greece.

The Basilica di San Nicola is the foremost monument of Apulia and was the only building in Bari to survive destruction by the Normans under William the Bad in the mid-twelfth century. The basilica logically became the focal point of the city's reconstruction.

Bari's cathedral, roughly the same age, was badly damaged in that sacking but was rebuilt over the following decades and was restored early in this century. It has a shrine centering on an icon, Santa Maria de Costantinopoli. Near the cathedral is the impressive Byzantine-Norman castle built in the thirteenth century by Holy Roman Emperor Frederick II.

In the Region

Apulia, the heel of the Italian "boot," has been a place of importance and a crossroads of civilization for well over 2,000 years. Its original inhabitants were probably Illyrian. The province was taken by Rome in the fourth century B.C. and was subject to numerous invasions before being joined to the Kingdom of Sicily by Frederick II.

Its attractions are varied, and numerous tours operate from Bari. For religious travelers, the chief attractions are Monte Sant'Angelo on the Gargano Peninsula, which has drawn pilgrims for some 1,500 years, and the ancient village of San Giovanni Rotondo, where pilgrims in increasing numbers pay homage to Padre Pio (see following chapter).

Apulia also offers some of Italy's best beaches, pristine scenery, and historic sites.

Transport and Accommodation

Bari is accessible by train from northern Italy, and there are air connections via Alitalia from other Italian cities.

Apulia is known for its cuisine, which draws on centuries of influence from its many occupiers, and hotels and inns are plentiful and generally inexpensive.

SAN GIOVANNI ROTONDO

Padre Pio, the revered Capuchin priest and mystic, is now Saint Pio of Pietrelcina. He was canonized on June 16, 2002, by Pope John Paul II, who is among his devoted advocates.

The priest's elevation to sainthood answered the prayers of many who have venerated him for decades. Millions have been drawn to San Giovanni Rotondo, the hillside town in southern Italy where he spent most of his life. In recent times, the shrine has drawn more than seven million pilgrims a year—more even than the famed Marian sanctuary at Lourdes.

Decades ago, the pope—as a young Polish priest, Karol Wojtyla—sought Padre Pio's help in person, asking him to intercede for a friend who was dying of cancer. The friend recovered, and the future pope was ever after among his supporters.

"We inscribe the Blessed Pio of Pietrelcina in the roll of saints," John Paul II told the multitude that thronged Saint Peter's Square in Rome for the canonization, "and we declare to the entire church that he is to be honored with devotion."

Pio was born in the town of Pietrelcina on May 25, 1887, the son of farmer Grazio Forgione and Giuseppina Di Nunzio. In the ancient village church, Santa Maria degli Angeli, they baptized him Francesco.

Francesco was a sickly child and deeply pious. He felt an early call to a religious life; at age 15, he entered the novitiate of the Capuchin Friars in Morcone, where on January 22, 1903, he donned the robe of the Franciscans and became Brother Pio. On January 27, 1907, he took solemn vows, entering the order for life.

His health continued to be weak, but he worked diligently toward becoming a priest and took the Holy Orders in the Cathedral of Benevento on August 10, 1910, becoming Padre Pio. Six years later, on July 18, 1916, after a number of prolonged illnesses, he arrived at the monastery at San Giovanni Rotondo, where he remained until his death on January 23, 1968, at the age of 81.

The principal event that led to his widespread reputation occurred on September 20, 1918, when he received the stigmata—the appearance on his body of Christ's wounds from the Crucifixion. He was the first priest to bear the stigmata since Saint Francis in the thirteenth century. As word spread, pilgrims began arriving from around the world.

Numerous miracles and intercessions were credited to him, and his following rapidly grew. But Padre Pio was controversial, and there was great concern within the church. The Vatican ordered at least a dozen investigations and issued several reprimands; it even bugged the padre's confessional and opened his mail. Padre Pio was also banned from saying mass for many years. Nonetheless, his reputation as a mystic and miracle worker continued to spread.

Offerings from his devotees made possible the founding of the House for Relief of Suffering (Casa Sollievo della Sofferenza) at San Giovanni Rotondo in 1956.

San Giovanni Rotondo itself dates back to the eleventh century. Founded by the Pirgians, it was named for a small, round temple they originally built to honor the god Janus and later, after they were Christianized, to honor their patron saint, Saint John the Baptist. That building still stands.

But such is the level of pilgrimage that a huge church—capable of holding as many as 30,000 people—is under construction on top of the hill overlooking the town. Designed by noted Italian architect Renzo Piano (whose work includes the Georges Pompidou Center in Paris), the church will be near the modest Capuchin monastery in which Padre Pio spent half a century.

The vast building may seem a far cry from the life of poverty and devotion of Padre Pio's order. Late in his life, as his legions of admirers steadily grew, he once said, "I want to be only a poor friar who prays." Prayer was his life. "In books we learn of God," he said, "in prayer we find Him. Prayer is the key that opens the heart of God."

In the Region

Religious travelers will be interested in a nearby town, Monte Sant'Angelo, which has drawn pilgrims—including Saint Francis of Assisi in 1216—for some 1,500 years. At its center is the Santuario di San Michele, which was erected over a grotto where the Archangel Michael is said to have appeared in an apparition in the year 490. Crusaders on their outward journey often stopped there. Also nearby is Bari, where the Basilica di San Nicola (Saint Nicholas) has been a pilgrimage destination since the eleventh century (see preceding chapter).

The coast of the nearby Gargano Peninsula offers attractive resort towns (among them is Manfredonia) and some of Italy's most attractive beaches and villages.

Transport and Accommodation

The best way to reach San Giovanni Rotondo and Monte Sant'Angelo is probably by road. They are about a five-hour drive from Rome, but rental cars are available in major nearby centers, such as Bari, that are connected to the capital by train. Accommodation can be scarce near the two destinations but is more plentiful along the coast and in more urban centers.

BOLOGNA

The city of Bologna, at the foot of the Apennines in northern Italy, has a long Christian history and for centuries has drawn pilgrims to its many churches and shrines—particularly to the tomb of Saint Dominic, founder of the religious order of Friars Preachers, or Dominicans.

Dominic died in Bologna in 1221, and his remains are enshrined in the thirteenth-century church named in his honor. His tomb is a treasury of the work of some of the greatest artistic masters, including the young Michelangelo.

The future saint was born Domingo de Guzman in Calaruega, Spain, about 1170. As a child he received religious training from an uncle who was an archpriest, and at about age 17 he entered the University of Palencia to study philosophy and theology. In about 1196 he became a canon in the chapter of the Cathedral of Osma and was elected subprior about 1201.

In 1203 he went with the bishop of Osma, Didacus of Acebes, on a religious mission to Rome and on the return trip was dismayed at the state and needs of the church, particularly in the region of Languedoc in southern France where the Albigensian heresy had taken hold.

Albigensianism, probably the single most important heresy within the Christian church during the Middle Ages, took its name from the Languedoc town of Albi, a center of the movement. Albigenses followed a dualist doctrine that originated in eastern Europe, believing in the independent existence of a god of good and a god of evil, and believing that existence was a struggle between the two. The god of light, goodness, and spirit was usually associated with Christ and the God of the New Testament; the god of evil, darkness, and matter was identified with Satan and the God of the Old testament. All material things—possessions, food, even the human body—were evil. Importantly, Albigenses were steadfastly in opposition to the Roman church and the widespread corruption of the clergy at that time.

Dominic was commissioned by Pope Innocent III to work among the Albigenses. He returned to Languedoc in 1206 and began his task, training and supplying preachers against the heresy. He envisioned an order of men who were not necessarily priests and not contemplatives like monks, but who would concentrate on sacred studies, preaching, and teaching.

The order was formed and based at a monastery he had founded at Prouille. In October 1216 it was confirmed by Pope Honorius III, who also granted the friars special privileges, among them the right to preach and hear confessions anywhere without obtaining local authorization—something for which Dominic had seen a need in his work among the Albigenses. The order's motto became "To contemplate and to give others the fruits of contemplation."

The following summer Dominic dispatched most of his small band of friars to the field. Seven went to Paris, two to Toulouse, four to Spain. Two stayed at Prouille, and Dominic himself went to Rome, where he quickly built a reputation as a preacher and where the order quickly began to grow. During 1218 and 1219 he personally established friaries in Spain, Italy, and France. He arrived in Bologna late in the summer of 1219, and the first general chapter of the order was held there. By 1221 there were about 60 friaries, some as far afield as Palestine, Hungary, England, Poland, and Scandinavia.

Dominic died on August 6 of that year at the age of about 52, his order well established. He was canonized in 1234. By the end of the century the Dominicans had reached Russia, Greece, and Greenland, always working as teachers and upholders of orthodoxy. Today, the Dominicans are found at work around the world. Scores of members of the order have become cardinals; four have become popes.

(It should be noted that while the Dominicans became an eminently successful order, their early efforts to reconvert the Albigenses by peaceful means met with little success. The strength of the heretical movement led Pope Innocent III to launch the Albigensian Crusade—1209–1229—which pitted the nobility of northern France against that of the south, brutally repressed the Albigenses, and laid waste to much of southern France.)

The Shrine

The Church of San Domenico is on Piazza San Domenico, off Via Garibaldi, near the Dominican convent in which Dominic died. His tomb, called the Arca di San Domenico, includes the work of many artists over numerous generations. One of them, Niccolo di Bari, changed his name to Niccolo dell'Arca to note his connection with the work. In addition to contributions by dell'Arca and Michelangelo, the tomb includes a casket carved by Nicolo Pisano. The church is open daily.

The City

Bologna, capital of Emilia-Romagna, is a city rich in attractions both religious and secular.

Its university, founded in the eleventh century, is Europe's oldest, and gives the city the nickname "Bologna the Learned." Religion and learning have always been at the forefront, and seven popes were born there: Gregory XV, Benedict XIV, Honorius II, Lucius II, Alexander V, Gregory XIII, and Innocent IX.

Many believe Bologna to be Italy's gastronomic capital. It is so renowned for its cuisine that it is also nicknamed "Bologna la Grassa"—Bologna the Fat.

There are many attractions for the religious pilgrim in addition to the shrine of San Domenico.

- The Church of Santo Stefano is actually several churches contained in one building. The oldest of them is the eighth-century Church of Santi Vitale e Agricola, followed by the eleventh-century Church of the Crucifix, and the twelfth-century Church of San Sepolcro, which contains the tomb of Saint Petronius (San Petronio).

- The Basilica di San Petronio on Piazza Maggiore was begun in 1390 but is still incomplete; six centuries later, its facade still lacks most of the marble facing the designers intended. Among its many notable artworks is the main doorway carved by Renaissance master Jacopo della Quercia. The basilica is huge, more than 430 feet long and 185 feet wide.

- The Church of San Giacomo Maggiore, built in the thirteenth century and much altered since, is filled with art treasures. It contains the burial chamber of Bologna's foremost family of the Middle Ages, the Bentivoglios. The sculptor della Quercia carved its most impressive tomb, that of Antonio Bentivoglio.

- The Church of Corpus Domini was founded by Saint Catherine de'Vigri (Saint Catherine of Bologna), whose body is entombed there.

- The Shrine of the Madonna di San Luca, which draws many pilgrims, takes its name from an icon attributed to Saint Luke, brought to Bologna in the twelfth century from Byzantium. On Monte della Guardia overlooking the city, it is reached via an arcade more than two miles long with more than 600 arches. The present shrine dates from about 1730.

In the Region

About 25 miles northwest of Bologna is the city of Modena, home to the famous racing cars Ferrari and Maserati. Heavily bombed during World War II, the city has largely been rebuilt, but among its surviving earlier structures is its noted Romanesque cathedral.

The cathedral was consecrated in 1184 and dedicated to the fourth-century Saint Geminiano, the city's patron saint, whose tomb is in the crypt. The cathedral's exterior is richly decorated with Renaissance sculptures.

Thirty-five miles further northwest is Parma, famous as a center for the arts—particularly opera—and the home of two well-known Italian delicacies, prosciutto and parmigiano. Marie-Louise, widow of Napoleon, was its ruler in the early 19th century and her art collection is on display at the Galleria Nazionale. The cathedral, on Piazza del Duomo, is an eleventh-century Romanesque treasure. Antonio Corregio, one of greatest painters of the high Renaissance, contributed a fresco, "Assumption of the Virgin." Other religious buildings include the richly frescoed Baptistery (Battistero), which is among northern Italy's greatest Romanesque buildings and includes sculpture by Benedetto Antelami.

Transport and Accommodation

Bologna has a major international airport and is well connected with the rest of Italy and other European cities by road and rail. As a major center, it offers accommodation of all types and every kind of restaurant.

LOURDES

The town of Lourdes, in the French Pyrenees, is among the most frequented pilgrimage sites of the Catholic world.

The town has a population of only 18,000, but between Easter and October each year it draws between four million and five million visitors, making it France's most often visited city after Paris.

Lourdes has been drawing pilgrims since 1858, when the Blessed Virgin appeared to 14-year-old Bernadette Soubirous, the daughter of an impoverished local miller, in the Massabielle grotto along the Gave de Pau river. There were 18 further apparitions over the following few months. During the ninth of these, Bernadette dug at the ground with her hands and a gush of water was released from a previously unknown spring. Belief spread that the water had miraculous healing powers, and crowds began to accompany her to the grotto. As the apparitions continued, the throng grew to about 8,000 and armed soldiers had to escort her.

Local church authorities remained skeptical for some time. After a four-year investigation, the miracle was authenticated by Rome, the visions proclaimed authentic, devotion to Notre Dame de Lourdes authorized, and a sanctuary erected over the grotto. The first organized procession was held in 1864.

The grotto has since been restored to the condition it was in at the time of Bernadette's visions, although the river has been diverted some distance from its entrance. A statue of the Virgin stands in the natural recess in which the apparition first appeared. At the statue's foot are inscribed the words in the Gascon dialect that Bernadette heard on March 25, 1858: "Que soy era Immaculada Councepciou (I am the Immaculate Conception)."

Bernadette became a nun and died in 1879, at age 35, at a convent in Nevers, France. She was canonized in 1933.

The annual pilgrimage season begins at Easter, when Lourdes is the site of the Festival International de Musique Sacrée, and continues through October. There are now six official annual pilgrimages, the most important on August 15, the Feast of the Assumption, and that date marks the height of the season.

The Caverne des Apparitions, better known as La Grotte, where Bernadette experienced the apparitions, is the focus of the town. During the pilgrimage season there are long lines, including many elderly or ailing pilgrims seeking miraculous cures.

Among other sites related to Bernadette in Lourdes is the Musée Bernadette, a museum that is devoted to her life and that also offers an illustrated history of the pilgrimages. There is also the Moulin des Boly, the mill where she was born on January 7, 1844, and the "shabby little room" in the Cachot, a disused jail where her family lived at the time of the apparitions; both are open to visitors.

Lourdes has two nineteenth-century basilicas (Basilique Supérieure, 1871, and Basilique du Rosaire, 1889) in the New Gothic and Romano-Byzantine styles, respectively (one guidebook comments: "Their spiritual function far outweighs their aesthetic appeal"), as well as the vast underground Basilique Saint-Pie X, the world's largest underground church. The latter was consecrated in 1958 to mark the centenary of the apparitions and can hold up to 20,000 worshippers.

In season, particularly during the weeks following August 15, Lourdes is extremely busy and crowds can be daunting. While many visitors are true pilgrims, many are simply sightseers.

In a mixture of religion and commerce, there are scores of souvenir shops offering religious keepsakes ranging from the inexpensive to the quite expensive. Restaurants of all types abound, from haute cuisine to pizza.

Lourdes has more than 350 hotel rooms at all prices. Some hotels are run by religious organizations and are specifically for pilgrims as opposed to tourists.

Out of season, there are few pilgrims or tourists. As a consequence, most shops are shuttered and the majority of the restaurants and hotels are closed.

Earlier History

Before 1858, Lourdes was a much-disputed fortress. A former feudal chateau, Lourdes Castle, perched on a rocky outcrop, became a prison in the seventeenth century and was later a barracks. It is now Musée Pyrénéen, considered to be one of France's best provincial museums, devoted to popular customs and arts throughout the Pyrenees and Béarn regions.

In the Region

Lourdes has been called the Gateway to the Pyrenees, and the region is known for its dramatic mountain scenery. It is an easy day trip to nearby Pau or Cauterets, and train and bus service are excellent in season. Other nearby destinations offer points of scenic, religious, and historic interest.

One of France's most renowned spas and resorts, Cauterets is 19 miles (an hour by bus) from Lourdes and only about eight miles from the Spanish border. It is located in a scenic valley on the edge of the Parc National des Pyrénées Occidentales, which attracts international crowds to its green pastures and extensive network of hiking trails.

Since Roman times, Cauterets has been known for its hot springs, revered as a miracle cure for female sterility and ailments of the throat, sinuses, and ears. The town and spa were visited and lauded by Rabelais, Victor Hugo, George Sand, and Viscount François René de Chateaubriand. The Cauterets region also offers some of the best skiing in the Pyrenees, both downhill and cross-country. In some years, skiing lasts until May.

About 25 miles northwest of Lourdes, Pau is the historic capital of Béarn. Early in the nineteenth century, it became popular as a winter resort for the wealthy British, who once made up a third of its population. The vacationers created France's first golf course there in 1856, introduced fox hunting, and launched the Pont-Long steeplechase, which remains a popular attraction. Pau's chateau, built in the fourteenth century, was turned into a Renaissance palace in the sixteenth century by Marguerite d'Angoulême, sister of King François I. Her grandson, Henri IV, was born there in 1553.

Gavarnie, about 20 miles from Cauterets, is at the foot of the Cirque de Gavarnie, one of the world's most remarkable examples of glacial erosion. When the upper snows melt, numerous streams cascade from the cliffs to form spectacular waterfalls, the longest of which falls nearly 1,400 feet.

Among other towns of note in the area are Saint-Savin, an important religious center in the Bigorre region; Argelès-Gazost, a popular summer resort and spa with a church dating from the tenth and eleventh centuries; Barèges, which offers a spa, casino, and winter sports; Bagnères de Luchon, an area known for its shooting, hiking, and ski resorts (and where the spa waters are said to benefit the vocal cords); and Bagnères de Bigorre, another popular spa known since Roman times, which boasts a fifteenth-century church and convent, and the remains of the thirteenth-century Cloître Saint-Jean.

POITIERS

The ancient city of Poitiers in west central France has been an important religious center since the fourth century, largely because of its first bishop, the scholarly Saint Hilary.

Its roots go considerably deeper. Poitiers sits on a promontory at the confluence of the rivers Clain and Vienne that was occupied from very early times. In the Roman era, it was known as Limonum and was the seat of the propraetor of Aquitania from Caesar's conquest of Gaul until the barbarian invasion of 276.

But it was Hilary—the leading theologian of Western Christianity of his time—whose influence brought the city to prominence as the destination of pilgrims and a hub of religious activity in the early days of Christianity in Europe. Many signs of that early importance remain, among them the oldest Christian building in France: the Baptistère Saint-Jean (Baptistery of Saint John).

Hilary was born into a distinguished family at Poitiers in 315 and trained in philosophy and the classics. He married and had a daughter, Abra, before his conversion to Christianity in early manhood. His conversion came about, he wrote, through his study of the Bible and how its teachings contrasted with the materialism of pagan mythology.

Hilary became Bishop of Poitiers in 353 and soon became embroiled in the controversy over Arianism, a heresy that negates the Holy Trinity by denying the divinity of Christ. His anti-Arian efforts resulted in his exile to Phrygia (in what is now central Turkey) from 356 to 359 by Emperor Constantius II. His opposition to Arianism continued, however; he was released from exile in large part because his enemies in Phrygia regarded him as a "sower of discord and the troublemaker of the Orient." He was allowed to return to his episcopacy at Poitiers in 360, and his persecution over Arianism ended with Constantius's death the following year.

Hilary spent the rest of his life repairing the damage Arianism had done to the church in Gaul and Italy. He preached, wrote, and suffered exile in defense of the divinity of Christ, strengthening the faith of the clergy and laity in this fundamental dogma.

Soon after his return to Poitiers, Hilary had one of his disciples, who was later to be Saint Martin of Tours, found the nearby monastery of Ligugé, probably the first monastery in France.

Hilary died at Poitiers in 368 (the date is uncertain) and was proclaimed a doctor of the church by Pope Pius IX in 1851. His tomb is in the eleventh-century Church of Saint-Hilaire-le-Grand, one of Poitiers's many noteworthy religious monuments.

Poitiers's importance increased over the centuries. Clovis defeated the Visigoths near the city in 507, and it became part of the Frankish kingdom; in 732, Charles Martel stopped an Arab expedition from Spain near Poitiers; as the capital of the Duchy of Aquitaine, it was fought over for years by the French and English. Charles II often held court there and founded a university. Joan of Arc went there in 1429 to have her mission studied and approved.

Benedictine abbeys arose in Poitiers, then other religious houses founded by Jesuits (1604), Calvairiennes (1617), and Brothers of Saint John of God (1619). John Calvin was among numerous scholars associated with Poitiers, and the first Calvinist confession of faith was composed there in 1558.

Noteworthy Buildings

Radegunda (later Saint Radegunda), wife of King Clothar, founded a convent of nuns at Poitiers in 552, and in 569 it was dedicated to the Holy Cross upon presentation of a relic of the Cross by Emperor Justin II. Radegunda founded the Church of Saint Mary outside the convent's walls and was buried there in 587. Pilgrimages to her tomb are as popular as those to Saint Hilary's. A stone at her tomb is said to bear the footprint of Christ, left when he visited her just before her death.

The oldest religious building in Poitiers—and in all of France—is Saint Hilary's Baptistery of Saint John. Begun in the fourth century and enlarged in the seventh and eleventh centuries, it includes an octagonal baptismal pool fed by a Roman aqueduct. It is now a museum dedicated to the Merovingians, the first dynasty of Franks to rule that part of Europe.

At the church of Notre-Dame-la-Grande, built in the eleventh and twelfth centuries, one finds the venerated sixteenth-century statue of Our Lady of the Keys, commemorating the deliverance of Poitiers from a siege. The building is held to be one of France's most outstanding examples of Romanesque architecture.

Saint-Hilaire-le-Grand, consecrated in 1049, which contains Saint Hilary's tomb, is noted for its twelfth-century murals.

Other religious buildings include Saint-Jean-de-Montierneuf, consecrated in 1096, Saint-Porchaire (1520), and a seventeenth-century Jesuit college, now a lyceum.

Transport

As a major center, Poitiers is easily reached by road and rail. The journey from Paris, which has the nearest international airports, is about 160 miles.

In the Region

Poitiers is equidistant from a number of noteworthy cities. Within 80 miles are Angoulême, Limoges, and Châteauroux. Tours and the Loire valley are also nearby.

Niort, about 45 miles southwest of Poitiers, contains the remains of a castle built by the English kings Henry II and his son, Richard the Lion-Hearted. It now houses a museum with a major collection of costumes and arms.

West of Niort is the region known as Marais Poitevin, also called the Green Venice because of its extensive network of canals running through a patchwork of fields. Small boats can be rented in local villages, with guides and without. In the region are the ruins of the Abbaye de Maillezais, once a bishop's seat as well as an influential monastery. The earliest part of the ruins dates from the eleventh century.

West of the Marais Poitevin, on the sea, is La Rochelle, with its picturesque harbor buttressed by two fourteenth-century towers. Boats leave daily in summer for the islands of Ré (with its oyster beds and vineyards), Aix, and Oléron.

The former Abbey of Ligugé, founded by Martin under Hilary's direction and probably France's earliest monastery, is about five miles south of Poitiers. Gallo-Roman remains have been identified, including the apse of the fourth-century basilica built by Martin, as well as some fifth- and sixth-century Merovingian tombs. The nearby Church of Saint-Martin dates from the sixteenth century.

Tours, about 80 miles north of Poitiers, was a highly frequented pilgrimage site and religious center from the fourth century. It is known for its numerous churches and other religious buildings, including the tombs of Saint Martin and Saint Gregory.

TOURS

In the early Middle Ages, Tours—in the Loire valley of west central France—was the most famous and most frequented pilgrimage center in Christendom. For centuries, monarchs and popes were among those who came to pay homage or seek favor at the shrine of Saint Martin.

Martin was Bishop of Tours from 371 to 397, and two aspects of his episcopacy are of basic importance: He evangelized the countryside, establishing the first six rural parishes in France, and he gave monks an important role in this apostolate.

Born about 316 along the Danube in Upper Pannonia, now part of Hungary, Martin was raised in Pavia, Italy. His parents were pagans, but he became a catechumen on his own initiative at about the age of 10. When he was 15, he enrolled in the imperial cavalry, a move that may have been required because he was a Roman officer's son.

While Martin was stationed at Amiens, an incident is said to have taken place that tradition has made famous. According to the legend, on a bitter winter day he saw an old man at the gates of the city, starving, nearly naked, and begging for alms. Martin removed his own cloak, cut it in half with his sword, and gave one piece to the beggar. That night, in his sleep, he saw Christ—dressed in the half of the cloak he had given away—and heard him say, "Martin, yet a catechumen, has covered me with this garment."

According to the contemporary historian Sulpicius Severus, the young soldier "flew to be baptized." Thereafter, he described himself as "a soldier of Christ" rather than of Caesar, and within five years he was discharged.

He went to Poitiers, where the future Saint Hilary was bishop, and became one of Hilary's disciples. Some time later, he returned to his home and converted his mother and others to Christianity, but his zealous activity there against Arianism (a heresy that negates the Holy Trinity by denying the divinity of Christ) put him in disfavor and forced him into exile.

Martin entered the monastic life at Milan but was driven away by the Arian bishop Auxentius, whereupon he went to the island of Gallinaria in the Gulf of Genoa. Hilary, meanwhile, had been exiled by the Arian Emperor Constantius II and was away from France during the same period. When Hilary was allowed to return to Poitiers in 360, Martin also returned.

Martin established at Ligugé (about five miles south of Poitiers) what may have been the first French monastery, a community of monk-hermits. He lived there for a decade, preaching throughout the countryside, and numerous miracles were attributed to him.

In 371, having been drawn to Tours by a ruse, Martin was consecrated its bishop, an office he is said to have "accepted with great reluctance." Soon afterward, he established another monastic center at nearby Marmoutier and lived there as a monk while carrying out his duties as bishop.

Every year he traveled through the district, visiting each of the outlying parishes. His apostolate extended to Chartres, Paris, Autun, Sens, and Vienne, and he was in a remote part of his diocese—and more than 80 years old—when he died at Candes on November 8, 397.

Legend holds that as his body was being carried by boat to Tours, trees suddenly sprouted leaves, flowers bloomed, and birds sang. In France, the warm period after frost has since been known as "Saint Martin's Summer."

A vast crowd attended Martin's burial at Tours. According to Sulpicius Severus, who had become one of his disciples, more than 2,000 monks were among the mourners.

The Abbey of Saint-Martin became famous. Successive kings of France preserved Martin's cape and kept for themselves the title Abbot of Saint Martin. Martin became the patron saint of France and his feast is November 11, the date of his burial.

The shrine was highly frequented for the next 800 years, but it lost importance in the early thirteenth century as Rome, the Holy Land, Santiago de Compostela in northwestern Spain, and Mont-Saint-Michel in Normandy became more popular.

The monastic community founded at Ligugé grew into a great monastery that continued until 1607 and was revived by the Solesmes Benedictines in 1852.

In 853, a Norman invasion led to the saint's relics being moved to Auxerre, but they were returned in 885. In all, the relics were dispersed three times: in 853, in 1562, and in 1793, during a campaign of dechristianization late in the French Revolution. The saint's tomb was rediscovered late in 1860.

The modest sanctuary built to hold Saint Martin's remains was replaced in the thirteenth century by a sumptuous basilica. It was sacked by the Huguenots in 1562 during the Wars of Religion, and all that remains are two restored towers. Today, the new Basilica of Saint-Martin, completed in 1924, occupies a corner of the old structure and claims to preserve the tomb in its original location.

Transport

The closest international airports to the Loire valley are the two principal Paris airports, Charles de Gaulle and Orly. The region is served by regular trains from Paris and other major cities. By road, the journey from Paris is about 80 miles.

In the Region

The city of Tours has been an important center since ancient times. It was the capital of the Gallic tribe Turones and a Gallo-Roman civitas under the name Caesarodunum (Caesar's Hill). It increased in importance—particularly as regards the church—throughout the Middle Ages and the Renaissance. Although it suffered heavy damage during World Wars I and II, its surviving monuments have been preserved and restored.

Tours was the home of a number of other saints (among them Saint Gregory, one of Martin's successors as bishop), the monk Alcuin, who was an advisor to Charlemagne and Abbot of Saint-Martin in the eighth century, and such later figures as the painters Jean Fouquet and François Clouet. Another native was Honoré de Balzac, who set much of his writing in Tours.

Old Tours, which includes the basilicas of Saint-Martin, centers on Place Plumereau, with its fifteenth-century half-timbered houses, shops, restaurants, and cafes.

Other religious sites in Tours include the Cathedral of Saint-Gatien, begun in the thirteenth century and completed nearly 300 years later, which shows the full evolution of the Gothic style. The interior includes thirteenth- to fifteenth-century stained-glass windows.

Near the cathedral are the Cloître de la Psalette, with fifteenth- and sixteenth-century frescoes, and the Musée des Beaux-Arts, one of the leading art museums of the Loire valley.

Other cultural attractions, restaurants, and accommodations are plentiful.

Tours is a central point for the exploration of the Loire valley, westward to Angers or eastward to Orléans. The region is known for its wines, scenery, and châteaux.

Angers is about out 70 miles west of Tours. Its attractions include a Gothic cathedral, a number of art galleries, and a medieval fortress filled with noted tapestries, among them the 120-yard-long Apocalypse Tapestry, completed in 1390, which illustrates 70 scenes from the Book of Revelation.

Saumur, known for producing about 100,000 tons of mushrooms a year, is between Tours and Angers. Among its sights is an elegant fourteenth-century château, its Musée des Arts Décoratifs, and its Musée du Cheval, which traces the history of the horse.

Nearby is Fontevraud, known for its medieval abbey. Founded in 1099, the abbey contains the tombs of Henry II of England; his wife, Eleanor of Aquitaine; and their son, Richard the Lion-Hearted. Napoleon made the abbey a prison, and it remained one until 1963.

Among the picturesque towns east of Tours are Amboise, with its numerous hotels and restaurants, busy market, and noted château (built on the site of a Stone Age fortress and once a royal palace); Chenonceaux, also the location of a famed château; Loches with its noteworthy Church of Saint-Ours; and the larger center of Blois, whose château is among France's most famous.

Poitiers (see preceding chapter), which is closely connected with Saint Martin, is about 80 miles south of Tours. It offers the oldest Christian building in France, Saint Hilary's Baptistery of Saint John, begun in the fourth century. The baptistery is now a Merovingian museum. Among its other noteworthy religious buildings are the Cathedral of Saint-Pierre, built between 1162 and 1271, and Saint-Jean-de-Montierneuf, consecrated in 1096.

LA SALETTE

On September 19, 1846, two peasant children were tending a small herd of cows in a mountain glen near the village La Salette in the French Alps. Suddenly a "beautiful lady," resplendently dressed, appeared before them in a globe of shining light. She was weeping.

The lady gave the two children a message: Unless there was repentance from widespread religious apathy, there would be universal calamity. She asked them to pray and told each of them a secret.

The children—15-year-old Melanie Mathieu-Calvat and 11-year-old Maximin Giraud—were generally disbelieved. But when a spring suddenly appeared at the spot where they saw the apparition and numerous miraculous cures were ascribed to its waters, word spread and pilgrims began coming to the spring in growing numbers.

There was considerable skepticism; it was noted that the children had virtually no secular or religious education—a factor that was argued both in favor of the authenticity of their vision and against it.

The bishop of nearby Grenoble, Philibert de Bruillard, began an inquiry that proved unusually exhaustive, continuing without any announcement for five years. He then ruled that the apparition had the appearance of truth and that there were grounds for believing in it and in the resulting miracles. The result was the authorization of devotion to Our Lady of La Salette.

The children passed the secrets the lady had told them to Pope Pius IX, who confirmed La Salette and the cult. A proper Mass and Office was granted nearly a century later, in 1942.

Neither Maximin nor Melanie became manifest saints, but the authenticity of a vision is not dependent upon the persons to whom it is revealed. Maximin, who died at age 40 in nearby Corps, was quoted as saying "Our Lady left me as I was." Melanie, who lived until 1904, made several efforts to become a religious but did not succeed. Neither ever repudiated their account of the vision.

In 1852, after completing his investigation, Bishop de Bruillard organized a group of diocesan priests to serve at the church being built on the spot at which the apparition took place. From this group grew the Missionaries of Our Lady of La Salette. Their early work was in Norway and Switzerland, and missions were established later in Madagascar, the United States, Canada, Poland, and South America. In the United States, the order has established a number of seminaries and colleges.

In the Region

In any season, the Grenoble region offers much for the visitor, from world-famous ski resorts in winter to spas, lakes, and Alpine scenery in the summer.

Grenoble itself is a large, cosmopolitan city. A cable car climbs to the Fort de la Bastille, a vantage point for panoramic views of the city and the River Isère. Other attractions within the city are the Musée Dauphinois, a regional museum housed in a seventeenth-century convent; the Musée de Peinture et de Sculpture, which offers a noted collection of modern art that includes the work of Picasso, Gauguin, Matisse, and Modigliani; and the church of Saint Laurent, whose sixth-century crypt is one of the oldest Christian structures in France.

North of Grenoble, in the Chartreuse Mountains, is the old town of Chambéry with its fourteenth-century Château des Ducs de Savoie. The Gothic château has impressive stained glass and a replica of the Shroud of Turin.

The spa town of Aix-les-Bains on the Lac du Bourget has had thermal baths since Roman times. The Roman Temple of Diana, dating to the second and third centuries, now houses an archaeology museum.

Across the lake from Aix-les-Bains, and accessible by regular boat service, is the Abbaye de Hautecombe, where mass is celebrated with Gregorian chant.

Within easy access of Grenoble are numerous Alpine reserves, among them the Parc du Vercors, the Parc des Ecrins, the Parc du Queyras, and the Parc de la Vanoise. The Italian Alps are to the east, Lyon and the Rhone valley to the west, and Provence to the south.

Not far from La Salette is Annecy, where Saint Francis de Sales and his friend and spiritual student Saint Jeanne de Chantal are venerated.

ARS-SUR-FORMANS

As a young man, Jean-Marie Vianney seemed an unlikely candidate for the priesthood, let alone for sainthood. But his piety, dedication, and zeal made his small parish in south-central France a magnet for pilgrims even during his lifetime.

The shrine of Saint Jean-Marie Vianney, the Curé of Ars, is in the small town of Ars-sur-Formans, where he worked tirelessly for more than 40 years. Soon after he was canonized in 1925, he was declared the "heavenly patron of all parish priests" and today the town, near Lyon, draws about half a million pilgrims each year from around the world. Pope John Paul II made the pilgrimage as a young priest in 1947, and again as pope in 1986.

Jean-Marie was born to a farm family in 1786 in the nearby village of Dardilly. The French Revolution, which began when he was four years old, meant that he had little formal schooling. As a result, when he began to study for the priesthood at about age 20 he found Latin—which was considered essential—virtually impossible to learn. Despite this major drawback, and despite consistently being at the bottom of his classes, his sincerity and devotion greatly impressed his bishop and he was ordained in 1815.

About three years later, he was sent to the village of Ars. During the anticlerical times of the revolution, the people of Ars had largely abandoned the practice of their faith, and his assignment was to try to remedy this situation.

The young priest set about his task both by exhortation and by example. From the pulpit, he preached fervently against the town's neglect of religion, as well as against widespread profanity, immodesty, immorality, and drunkenness. It was a long battle, but he prevailed. By the end of a decade, Ars had changed considerably for the better and was again a thriving Christian community.

The example of piety and simplicity that the curé set was impressive. He slept on the floor, and slept very little, spending long hours in prayer. He ate meagerly and regularly fasted for days at a time. He scourged himself with chains. He took charge of the local school, which had been open only for a few months at a time, and founded a separate institution known as La Providence that became a great success as a shelter and school for orphans and deserted children.

Although he faced opposition from those who preferred Ars as it had been before his arrival, his reputation spread. He built a shrine to Saint Philomena, a child martyr who had recently been canonized, and miracles were attributed to it. Soon pilgrims began arriving in Ars, first a trickle then a flood. Through the 1840s they numbered in the hundreds every day, nearly all seeking to have the curé hear their confessions. Special trains and coaches were needed to handle the crowds.

Taking care of the pilgrims now took most of the curé's time—he was in the confessional more than 16 hours a day, in addition to his other priestly duties.

Many spoke of the curé's apparent ability to "read souls" and said he had a gift of prophecy. It was widely believed that he accomplished miracles during his lifetime, although he credited Saint Philomena with them.

In his last years his health failed badly, but the pilgrims kept arriving and he continued to hear their confessions, even on his deathbed. In the year before his death, the throngs are said to have numbered at least 80,000.

The Curé of Ars died on August 4, 1859, at the age of 73, and his funeral was attended by 300 priests and 6,000 mourners. Pilgrimage to Ars declined after his death, but revived when he was declared venerable in 1872 and beatified in 1905, and grew further with his canonization and designation as patron of the world's parish priests in the 1920s. Today the largest annual gathering—tens of thousands—is on his feast day, August 4.

The little church he restored from near ruin at Ars was typical of the Roman churches of the area. Shortly before his death, he approved plans for a basilica to be added to it by architect Pierre-Marie Bossan, who later built the famed Basilique Notre-Dame de Fourvière at Lyon. The basilica was begun in 1862. Two chapels in honor of Saint Jean-Marie Vianney feature paintings by Paul Borel illustrating the saint's life. The statue and bas-reliefs of the altar are the work of the sculptor Emilien Cabuchet.

Other places of pilgrimage in the town include the modest quarters in which the curé lived, the school and orphanage he founded, a wax museum highlighting events of his life, the presbytery, and a semi-subterranean crypt built on the centenary of his death to accommodate gatherings.

In the Region

Not far north of Ars is Paray-le-Monial, one of France's most-visited pilgrimage destinations. Its romanesque Basilique du Sacré-Coeur, a smaller version of the long-since demolished abbey church of Cluny, houses the shrine of Saint Marguerite-Marie Alacoque. The saint, as a young nun, had four visions of Christ between 1673 and 1676 that led to the now universal Adoration of the Sacred Heart.

The city of Lyon, a major center since Roman times, is at the confluence of the Saône and Rhône rivers and is France's second-largest city. It has a wealth of restaurants, museums, shops, and other attractions for the secular as well as the religious traveler. One of the most popular sites is Bossan's ornate late-nineteenth-century Basilique Notre-Dame de Fourvière. Other noteworthy churches include the twelfth-century Cathédrale Saint-Jean with its towering fourteenth-century astronomical clock whose moving figures portray the Annunciation.

Transport and Accommodation

Hotel and other accommodation is available but not plentiful in Ars, but Paray-le-Monial and Lyon offer numerous choices. Ars can be reached by fast train (TGV) from Paris or Lyon, via the Villefranche-sur-Saône station; a taxi will be necessary from Villefranche to Ars itself. The Lyon international airport, which handles some nonstop flights from the eastern United States, is usually less than an hour's journey from Ars.

SAINTE-ANNE D'AURAY

Even in the earliest days of Christianity in Europe, Brittany had a strong tradition of venerating Saint Anne, the mother of the Blessed Virgin. A chapel was dedicated to her in Ker Anna ("Village of Anne") in the early sixth century. It was destroyed about a century later, but devotion to the saint remained strong, and—after another thousand years went by—she is said to have appeared before a local villager seeking to have her chapel rebuilt.

Her wish was heeded, and today—after nearly four more centuries and times of upset, war, and destruction—the shrine of Sainte-Anne d'Auray is still a popular place of pilgrimage.

The visionary was a peasant farm laborer, Yves Nicolazic. One night in 1623, Yves was awakened by a light in his room. All he could make out was a hand holding a wax torch. No one spoke. Similar visions followed, and one night while Yves and another man were leading cattle to a drinking trough they caught a glimpse of "a lady wreathed in light," but she vanished without saying a word.

Eventually, in the early evening of July 26, 1624, there was a voice. Calling Yves by name, it said, "Do not be afraid. I am Anne, the mother of Mary. Tell your priest that in the parcel of land called Le Bocenno there once was a chapel dedicated in my name. I would like it to be rebuilt. God wants my memory to be honored there."

Village tradition had forbidden tilling that parcel of land for generations, although the reason for the ban had long been forgotten.

The priest and his superiors were skeptical, thinking at first that Yves had taken leave of his senses. But on the following March 8, late at night, a mysterious flame led Yves and some of his neighbors to the field and indicated a place on the ground. When they dug at the spot, they unearthed a small statue of Saint Anne. It was greatly decayed but still identifiable, and they decided it had been there since the original chapel was destroyed 900 years earlier.

The story spread throughout Brittany. Now, because of the discovery and the fact that there had been witnesses to several of the visions, church officials were impressed. Pilgrims began coming to the field in droves. The local bishop opened a formal inquiry and soon gave permission for the building of a chapel at the site where the statue was found.

When the first mass was celebrated at the chapel on July 26, 1625, it was attended by tens of thousands. King Louis XIII and his queen, Anne of Austria, enriched the chapel with many gifts, among them a relic of Saint Anne brought from Jerusalem in the thirteenth century. The number of pilgrims grew steadily, and even the French Revolution didn't keep people from making their way to the shrine. During the Reign of Terror, in 1793, the chapel was plundered, the Carmelites who served it were driven out, and the ancient statue found by Yves Nicolazic was burned by anti-church Republicans.

Through it all, the faithful still flocked there, and as the years went by the chapel eventually became too small. It was demolished in 1865 to allow to the construction of the present basilica. The cornerstone of the basilica was laid and blessed in 1866, and two years later Pope Pius IX crowned the sanctuary's much-revered statue of Saint Anne, which includes a rescued fragment of the original statue and has been credited with many miracles.

Consecrated in August 1877, the basilica is an impressive example of Neo-Renaissance architecture, designed principally by Edouard Deperthes, one of the creators of the Paris Hôtel de Ville. The marbles of its high altar are the gift of Pius IX, and many of the bas-reliefs, as well as statues of Yves Nicolazic, Saint Joseph, and Saint Joachim, are the work of the renowned sculptor Falguière. Stained-glass windows illustrate the life of Saint Anne and tell the story of Yves's visions. The persecution of the Catholic Church during the Revolution and the resistance of local Bretons to the Republican onslaught is also a theme.

Yves's tomb is within the basilica. At the top of the towering steeple is a 20-foot-high statue of Saint Anne, installed in 1976 to replace an earlier one that showed signs of toppling and was placed on the ground elsewhere in the basilica compound.

Saint Anne is Brittany's patroness, and Sainte-Anne d'Auray is a sacred place to the region's Catholics. Still today it is rare to find a Breton family in which someone hasn't made the pilgrimage. There is a Breton saying: "A Sainte-Anne, une fois, doit aller tout Breton" (All Bretons must visit Sainte-Anne at least once).

Pilgrimage processions, or "pardons," involve the solemn carrying of the statue of Saint Anne through the streets, as well as masses, hymns, and prayer. The principal pardons take place at Pentecost and on July 26, in commemoration of the day when Saint Anne delivered her message to Yves. Pope John Paul II made his pilgrimage to Sainte-Anne d'Auray on September 20, 1996.

In the Region

Pardons have played a major role in Breton religious life for many centuries. While the Grand Pardon of Sainte-Anne d'Auray is chief among them, several others are of comparable importance. These include

- The Pardon of Sainte-Anne La Pelud in the small seaside town of that name, near Quimper
- The Pardon of the Black Virgin, Notre-Dame de Bon Secours, at Guingamp, a torch-lit night-time procession
- The Pardon of Notre-Dame du Rocier (Our Lady of the Bramble Patch) at Josselin, based on a miraculous statue of the Blessed Virgin found in the ninth century in a patch of briars
- The annual Troménie and the elaborate Grand Troménie (held every six years) at Locronan, which scholars say are probably based on Druid ceremonies held there before the region was Christianized
- The Pardon of Le Folgoëte (the Madman of the Wood), at Le Folgoëte, which evolved around the legend that a patch of lilies spelling out the name of the Virgin grew from the grave of a pious simpleton called Salaun in the fifteenth century
- The Pardon of Saint Mathurin at Moncontour, honoring a saint who is said to have particularly helped the mentally ill
- The Pardon du Beurre (the Butter Pardon) and the Pardon du Coq (the Cockerel Pardon) at Pestivien, which involve a revered Breton saint, Saint Blaise (in years past, butter was offered to the saint on the former; and on the latter, for obscure reasons, a rooster was thrown from the church tower to the congregation below)
- The Pardon of Saint-Jean-du-Doigt near Lanmeur, which has drawn thousands of pilgrims because of the presence of a notable relic—one of the index fingers of Saint John the Baptist

A feature of numerous Breton towns is the enclos paroissial (parish close), an architectural ensemble that includes church, cemetery, ossuary, and calvary (a free-standing structure with carvings illustrating Bible scenes), all grouped in a square entered through an arch. These elaborate fixtures were a matter of strong local pride in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries and provoked intense rivalry between neighboring villages. Several of the most noteworthy are along a route starting at Morlaix signposted as the Circuit des Enclos Paroissiaux. The calvary at one of them, Guimiliau, features more than 200 sculpted bibilical figures.

Brittany has been the scene of battle many times, and the town of Auray has often been in the thick of it. The Battle of Auray, which ended the Breton War of Succession in 1364, was fought near the town. Not far away is the Champ des Martyrs, where between 800 and 1,000 royalists were massacred in 1795; a mausoleum was built in the nineteenth century to commemorate the event. And a famous memorial honoring the nearly 250,000 Bretons killed in World War I was erected near Auray by the five dioceses of Brittany between 1922 and 1932, engraved with thousands of names of the war dead.

Brittany is also home to the famous abbey of Mont-Saint-Michel (see following pages).

Transport and Accommodation

Reaching Brittany, in northwestern France, by air from the United States will involve a flight to a major airport, probably in Paris or London, from which connecting flights to three Breton airports are available. Train and coach connections from Paris are good, and there are also connections from several ferry ports in Britain (the English Channel crossing time is as little as four hours). Accommodation in Brittany is plentiful, although the region is very popular with tourists and can become busy in mid-summer. The Bretons are widely known for their cuisine, particularly seafood dishes.

MONT-SAINT-MICHEL

Silhouetted against the sky atop a towering crag off the Normandy coast, Mont-Saint-Michel is one of the world's most impressive sights.

Historian Henry Adams wrote in 1913 that it was an "assertion of God and Man in a bolder, stronger, closer union than ever was expressed by other art."

More than 500 years in the building, the abbey has withstood storm, war, revolution, fire, and neglect. But through it all, as the principal shrine of the Archangel Michael, it has drawn pilgrims from far and wide for nearly 13 centuries.

The abbey's origins go back to the early eighth century when the archangel appeared in a vision to Aubert, bishop of nearby Avranches, and commanded him to build a chapel in his honor on the rocky hill. At the time the hill was known as Mont Tombe and rose from a dense forest. But not long afterward the sea inundated the forest and the hill became an island, isolated from the mainland by fast-moving tides that rise as much as 45 feet.

The bishop built a small circular oratory, which soon attracted pilgrims. Two centuries later, in 966, Richard I, Duke of Normandy, established a Benedictine abbey at the site and replaced Aubert's small chapel with a rectangular Carolingian structure. In 1017, Richard II was married there and ordered construction of a Romanesque church. This took 60 years to build, and was no sooner complete than Abbot Hildebert II ordered that the 250-foot summit of the rock be leveled to build still another new church, the first step in a plan to cover the rock with monastic buildings. That goal was finally accomplished in 1520 with the elaborate Gothic and Romanesque complex that remains today.

In the meantime Mont-Saint-Michel had become a center of medieval intellectual life and was drawing pilgrims from across Europe. Thus it remained for about a century, until a long period of decline set in; discipline waned and the size of the abbey community dwindled, although Maurists (given charge of the abbey in 1622) remained there in decreasing numbers until the French Revolution.

During the eighteenth century the abbey was used in part to imprison enemies of the crown, and its status as a prison became official with the Revolution. It continued to serve only that function, notoriously, until Emperor Napoleon III—responding to a public outcry—shut it down in 1863. A decade later, it was declared a public monument and restoration began.

Since 1922 the monastery church has been once again a place of worship, and monks have been able to live and work on the Mont for the past quarter century.

The complex includes the Church of Saint Michael at the top, a cloister, a medieval refectory and crypts, great halls, and the monks' residence. A town clusters at the feet of the abbey, complete with inns, restaurants, and a profusion of religious and secular souvenir shops.

Because of the throngs who visit Mont-Saint-Michel during the summer, many pilgrims opt for the off-season, from September to May.

In the Region

Because of its location on the sea at the western edge of Normandy, Mont-Saint-Michel has been at the crossroads of conflict time and again. In 1066 Norman forces en route to the Battle of Hastings made their last stop there before crossing the Channel to England. During the Hundred Years War (1337–1453) it was attacked repeatedly. In more recent times, it was near heavy fighting during the Invasion of Normandy in World War II.

About 45 miles northeast of Mont-Saint-Michel is Saint-Lo, which played a pivotal role in the Battle of Normandy in 1944 and was almost totally destroyed in the process. It lies inland, but near the Calvados Coast beaches of Operation Overlord, known by the code names Utah, Omaha, Gold, Juno, and Sword. Omaha, where nearly 10,000 American troops died, is near the town of Colleville-sur-Mer. The Monument du Débarquement near there stands among the largely undisturbed remains of bunkers and trenches. The Musée du Débarquement at Arromanches chronicles the invasion, and remnants of one of the floating harbors built for the invasion can still be seen in the bay.

A short distance inland is Bayeux, which offers the Bayeux Tapestry, a 225-foot scroll embroidered in 1067 that depicts the story of William the Conqueror's victory in the Battle of Hastings the year before. Other attractions in Bayeux include the Cathédrale Notre-Dame, a notable combination of Gothic and Norman design, and another museum tracing the events of June through August 1944, the Musée de la Bataille de Normandie.

Seventeen miles from Bayeux is Caen, which also has a museum on the Normandy Landings (the Mémorial). The town is also known for its Abbaye aux Hommes (Men's Abbey), a monastery built by William the Conqueror, and Abbaye aux Dames (Women's Abbey) built by his wife, Matilda.

The nearby coastal towns of Cabourg, Honfleur, Trouville, and Deauville have long been among northern France's preferred vacation spots.

Farther along the coast is Fecamp, an ancient fishing port that was once Normandy's principal pilgrimage destination. The pilgrims were drawn by what was believed to be a vial of Christ's blood, brought there in the seventh century. The town became the home of the monastic order of the Précieux Sang et de la Trinité, and its impressive Eglise la Trinité stands as evidence of Fecamp's religious history. The town is also where the liqueur Benedictine originates.

In another direction, Mont-Saint-Michel is also within reach of Chartres and its renowned cathedral. Chartres has drawn pilgrims since the earliest years of the Christian era (see following pages).

CHARTRES

Few cathedrals equal the grandeur of Notre-Dame de Chartres, often called the supreme monument of High Gothic architecture. For centuries, pilgrims making their way to Chartres have been inspired by the sight of its soaring towers, visible from miles away.

But pilgrims were traveling to Chartres long before the present cathedral was built in the late twelfth century. Druids had considered the place sacred as early as 100 B.C., and were converted to Christianity about 45 A.D. Then, in 876, according to tradition, the Sacred Tunic, worn by the Blessed Virgin at the time of Jesus's birth, was given to Chartres by Emperor Charles II (Charles the Bald). Over the centuries, this holy relic drew throngs of pilgrims from across Europe.

By the eleventh century Chartres had become a leading religious and intellectual center. When much of the town was devastated by fire in June 1194, its cathedral—the fifth to occupy the site—was left in ruins. However, word went out that the Sacred Tunic had been miraculously spared and the resulting religious fervor was such that a new cathedral was built in the exceptionally short period of 26 years.

In the Middle Ages religious and worldly matters were tightly interlinked, and this was very much so in Chartres. The rebuilding of the cathedral drew contributions of every kind, from financial support to physical labor. Thousands of the faithful came to Chartres from far and wide, and peasants and nobles worked side by side at such tasks as pulling carts laden with building stone from remote quarries. By 1220 the new cathedral, the building that exists today, had risen from the ashes.

Pilgrimage continued and increased over the next five centuries, but came to a virtual halt with the French Revolution of 1789 and its aftermath. During that era, in 1793, the Sacred Tunic was cut up and dispersed; part of it, however, has been recovered and pilgrimage is once again on the rise.

The Cathedral

Notre-Dame de Chartres embodies a history of High Gothic architecture from the twelfth century to the sixteenth. While most of its construction was in the early years of the thirteenth century, numerous features were added later—the taller (and more ornate) of its famed spires, for example. The cathedral also includes several important features of the twelfth-century Romanesque church it replaced, among them its west facade with its noteworthy sculpture and stained glass.

The cathedral's twelfth- and thirteenth-century stained glass is among its best-known features, particularly the rich "Chartres blue" used in many of its 176 windows. Much of the glass has been cleaned and restored in recent years.

The total length of the building is 428 feet, and its vault rises to 118 feet. Built on the Latin-cross plan, it was largely inspired by the Abbey of Saint-Denis in Paris.

Also in Chartres, and also a magnet for pilgrims, is a holy well that is reputedly the resting place of first-century martyrs.

Behind the cathedral is the former Bishop's Palace, now the Musée des Beaux-Arts (Museum of Fine Arts), dating from the eighteenth century.

Other churches in Chartres known for their outstanding architecture and early stained glass are the Eglise Saint-Aignan and the Eglise Saint-Pierre.

Transport and Accommodation

Chartres, a small city of about 30,000 population, is about 50 miles southwest of Paris and easily accessible from the capital by car, train, or bus. Accommodation and restaurants are plentiful in all price ranges.

In the Region

North of Chartres is Evreux, a town that has stood in the path of war for centuries. The town was repeatedly ravaged by the Vandals, the Normans, the English, and several French monarchs, and saw action as recently as World War II. Its Cathédrale Notre-Dame has been a victim of hostilities from the twelfth century on, but in its present state is a prime example of Flamboyant Gothic architecture.

Les Andelys, on the banks of the Seine on a byway between Evreux and Rouen, offers the remains of Château de Gaillard, a castle built by English king Richard I (Richard the Lion-Hearted) in 1196.

Rouen, although it suffered considerable damage in World War II, is known as the City of a Hundred Spires. Chief among its many religious buildings is Cathédrale Notre-Dame, a Gothic masterpiece. Among others considered noteworthy are the flamboyant Eglise Saint-Maclou and the modern Eglise Jeanne d'Arc, dedicated to that saint and built on the spot where she was burned at the stake in 1431.

Also within reach of Chartres is the famed Abbey of Mont-Saint-Michel on its rocky coastal island near the border of Normandy and Brittany (see preceding pages).

SHRINE OF THE MIRACULOUS MEDAL, PARIS

The story of a 24-year-old novice through whom the world received the Miraculous Medal has drawn pilgrims to a chapel in Paris for more than a century.

Zoé Labouré was born May 2, 1806, at Fain-les-Moutiers, near Dijon, to the large family of a prosperous farmer, Pierre Labouré. Her mother died when she was a small child and Zoé managed the busy household, never attending school. In her early teens she felt called to a religious life and lived piously, keeping the commandments, attending daily mass, and spending hours in prayer.

Her father was against her taking religious vows and in late 1829 sent her to Paris to work in a cafe operated by his brother. Discontented, she fled after a short time to relatives in Chatillon-sur-Seine, where she joined the Daughters of Charity of Saint Vincent de Paul. She took Catherine as her religious name and was sent to the order's convent on the rue du Bac in Paris after her postulancy.

It was there, in July 1830, that she had the first of a series of visions of the Blessed Virgin. She said she was awakened by an angel in the form of a small child, who led her to the convent's chapel. The Virgin appeared, and as the young novice knelt at her knee they talked for more than two hours. The Virgin warned that difficult times lay ahead—France was about to enter a period of renewed unrest—and that Catherine would be given a mission.

About four months later, on November 27, Mary appeared to Catherine again in the chapel, this time manifesting herself as if in a picture. She was standing on a globe, crushing a serpent beneath her foot; rays of light were streaming from her hands, and around her were the words: "O Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee." The picture turned, revealing the reverse side; it showed the letter M surmounted by a bar and cross, below which were two hearts—one pierced by a sword, the other crowned with thorns.

Catherine heard a voice say, "Have a medal struck after this model. All who wear it will receive great graces. They should wear it around the neck." This vision was repeated several times over the next year, always with the same basic message.

Catherine told only one person, her confessor, M. Aladel, about the visions. He accepted her word as true and the visions as authentic and obtained permission from the archbishop of Paris to have the medal struck. An initial 1,500 were made in June 1832, and four years later a canonical inquiry ruled favorably on the authenticity of Catherine's visions.

The medal's popularity quickly grew, spurred in part by its role in the conversion of an outspoken atheist, Alphonse Ratisbonne, in 1842. Soon it was being worn by tens of thousands across Europe and beyond; today, its devotees are in the millions and numerous miracles have been ascribed to it.

Catherine remained at the convent at rue du Bac only about a year, then was transferred to a convent at Enghien-Reuilly where her duties were menial. She acted as doorkeeper, looked after the convent's poultry, worked in the kitchen and laundry, cared for elderly people in the convent hospice, and cleaned the chamber pots. Her superiors described her as hard working and virtuous but noted that she seemed "insignificant" and "cold, even apathetic."

For more than 40 years she didn't speak about the visions, not revealing her role in the creation of the Miraculous Medal until a few months before her death at Enghien-Reuilly in November 1876.

She was beatified in May 1933 and canonized on July 27, 1947, by Pope Pius XII. Her incorrupt body lies in the chapel of the Daughters of Charity motherhouse on rue du Bac where her first vision occurred.

She spoke once of her method of prayer: "I tell [God] what comes into my mind. I tell him my troubles and my joys, and I listen to him. If you listen to him, he will speak to you, too. He always speaks when one goes to him sincerely and simply."

There are numerous shrines dedicated to Our Lady of the Miraculous Medal, among them the National Shrine of the Miraculous Medal in Perryville, Missouri, where the Venerable Felix de Andreis, first superior of the Vincentians in the New World, is buried. The Web site of the Association of the Miraculous Medal is at www.amm.org.

Paris has a wealth of great churches. Among the most noteworthy are

- Sainte-Chapelle. King Louis IX, who was to become Saint Louis, built this chapel to house what he believed to be Christ's Crown of Thorns from the Crucifixion and some fragments of the True Cross. The church is considered to be one of the great ecclesiastical buildings of the Middle Ages and is usually thronged by visitors. Its stained glass is of special note.

- Sacré-Coeur. Sacred Heart Basilica, at the height of Montmartre, is among the city's best-known landmarks. Built by public subscription and government funds, it was begun in 1873 at the conclusion of the costly and disastrous Franco-Prussian War in part to symbolize confidence that times would improve. Construction went on until World War I. The basilica is known for its outstanding mosaics and its commanding views of the city.

- Basilique de Saint-Denis. This huge cathedral in the suburb of Saint-Denis was built between 1136 and 1286 and is important in part as a very early example of Gothic architecture. Several kings of France chose the basilica as their final resting place, and their richly sculpted tombs can be seen in the choir at the building's east end. The basilica's thirteenth-century nave is particularly noteworthy, and the facade has a small rose window believed to be the earliest in France.

- Notre-Dame. This great cathedral, possibly the world's best-known church, has been at the center of Paris life for eight centuries. It was begun in the early 1160s on a site that had held numerous earlier religious buildings including a Roman temple (Roman settlement of what is now Paris dates back to the first century). Notre-Dame remained essentially unaltered until the French Revolution, when anything thought to be "anti-Republican" was removed from it or destroyed. It has been the site of numerous historical events, including Napoleon's coronation as emperor in 1804.

Transport and Accommodation

Paris, of course, is among the greatest of cities and for generations has drawn visitors from all points of the globe. It is also a principal starting point for tours of other regions of France, a country rich in attractions for religious pilgrims (see preceding chapters).

International travelers will find frequent connections to Paris by air, road, and rail. The city's variety of accommodation is vast, and dining opportunities run the gamut from fast food to the highest of haute cuisine.

CZĘSTOCHOWA

More than a million pilgrims are drawn each year to Częstochowa in south-central Poland by the renowned icon Our Lady of Częstochowa, also known as the Black Madonna.

The wooden icon is said to have miraculous powers and has been the object of veneration for centuries. It was brought to Częstochowa in 1382 by Prince Ladislaus Opolszyk (Wladyslaw of Opole) from his castle in Belz in the Ukraine. The prince founded a monastery of Paulite monks to care for the icon, and the original shrine church on Jasna Góra (Bright Hill) was built in 1386.

According to tradition, the icon was painted by Saint Luke on a tablet manufactured by Saint Joseph for the Holy Family, was taken from Jerusalem to Constantinople, and in the late tenth century was given to Princess Anna, wife of Vladimir of Kiev.

Soon after its arrival in Częstochowa, the icon—known as the Black Madonna because the faces and hands of the Virgin and Child are dark—began attracting pilgrims. Cuts on the Virgin's right cheek are said to have resulted from desecration in 1430 by thieves who became enraged when they found the icon becoming heavier and heavier as they tried to carry it away. Another version of the legend says that a Hussite soldier, unable to dislodge the picture, slashed the face with his sword, whereupon blood issued from the wounds.

The monastery was fortified in the 1620s and in 1655 withstood a siege by invading antipapal Swedes who by that time had subdued much of Poland. The icon was credited with keeping the monastery unconquered, and this further increased its popularity as an object of devotion. Our Lady of Częstochowa was acclaimed Queen of Poland the following year and became the symbol of Polish nationalism and religious liberty. In 1717, the icon was crowned in the name of Pope Clement XI.

The icon now hangs above the altar in the north chapel of the monastery church. Twice daily, a protective cover is ceremoniously drawn up before a large congregation.

Today, the monastery walls are covered with small replicas of arms, legs, and other parts of the body left by pilgrims in thanks for miraculous cures. Considered one of the richest of shrines in terms of such tributes, its museum and treasury contain an array of offerings presented by generations of the faithful as well as a noteworthy collection of church vestments and furnishings.

The priory established by Prince Ladislaus in 1382 founded numerous daughter houses in Poland and elsewhere and received numerous grants from successive kings of Poland who came there to venerate the icon. The existing church on Jasna Góra dates from 1644 and its 344-foot tower from 1701.

The icon was restored in 1925, making a full examination possible. Until then, only the faces and hands of the Virgin and Child had been visible, much of the remainder of the icon having been encased in precious metals. According to the New Catholic Encyclopedia, the icon probably is of ninth-century Greek or Greek-Italian origin with thirteenth-century overpaintings. Many icons have been attributed to Saint Luke the Evangelist, but the church cautions that the origin of this tradition cannot be traced with certainty.

Nonetheless, the shrine is considered the holiest in a nation that is 90 percent Roman Catholic. The high point of the pilgrimage season is August 15, when hundreds of thousands arrive in Częstochowa—many of them on foot as a sign of penance—for Assumption Day observances that coincide with a celebration of the harvest. Vendors selling fresh fruit, vegetables, and flowers set up shop next to others offering statuettes, likenesses of the pope, and other religious mementos.

In the Region

The city of Częstochowa, on the River Warta, is a growing industrial center with a population of more than 250,000. It lies about 68 miles from Cracow and about 135 miles from Warsaw.

The route from Częstochowa to Cracow passes through some of Poland's most scenic country, the Cracow Jurs, the Pradnik valley, and the Ojców National Park. Fourteen medieval castles (nicknamed eagles' nests) perch on cliffs along the route. Most are in ruins, but one—Pieskowa Skala (Dog's Rock)—has been restored and is open to the public.

Also along the route is Wadowice, the small village about 35 miles from Cracow that was the birthplace of Pope John Paul II and has itself become a popular pilgrimage destination.

Cracow—a city of about 750,000 and long the intellectual and historic heart of Poland—is emerging from years of hardship and repression and is again becoming one of Europe's favored tourist destinations.

Cracow's streets offer medieval and Renaissance churches (more than 60 in all), castles, and stately homes. There are also a sixteenth-century synagogue and the Jagiellonian University, founded in 1364, which numbers Copernicus and Pope John Paul II among its alumni.

An outstanding attraction is the thirteenth-century Wawel royal castle and its cathedral, which overlook the city from a high limestone hill above the Vistula River. A complex of Gothic and Renaissance buildings, this was Poland's royal residence for more than five centuries (until the end of the sixteenth century, when the capital was transferred to Warsaw). Sharing the cathedral's vaults with most of the Polish kings and their families are the revered nationalist leaders General Tadeusz Kosciuszko (1746–1817) and Marshal Józef Pilsudski (1867–1935).

It was from the cathedral that Karol Cardinal Wojtyla set out in 1978 for the Vatican conclave that elected him pope.

Among Cracow's other noteworthy religious attractions are the two-tiered Church of Saint Andrzej (eleventh century) and, next door to it, the Church of Saints Peter and Paul, Cracow's first baroque structure. On the nearby market square are the imposing Mariacki Church, with its towers of uneven heights, and the smaller Saint Adalbert's.

The city's old Jewish district, Kazimierz, is a short walk from Wawel.

Only about 15 miles from Częstochowa is Oswiecim, notorious under its German name, Auschwitz, as the site of the Nazis' principal concentration camp. There, and at nearby Birkenau, between two million and four million people were put to death between 1940 and 1945. The camp at Auschwitz is now a national museum dedicated to the memory of those who died in the Nazi Holocaust.

Warsaw, the Polish capital, is 135 miles northeast of Częstochowa. Unlike Cracow, which remained largely unscathed, Warsaw was 75 percent destroyed during World War II. It was rebuilt during the 1950s and 1960s under Russian domination; then, as economic times grew harder, it fell largely into disrepair. During the 1990s, however, it has been getting a facelift and is regaining popularity with foreign visitors.

Since Poland's emergence from Communist rule, changes in the Warsaw streetscape have been dramatic, with boutiques, fast-food restaurants, and modern cafes taking the place of the shops of butchers, tailors, and shoemakers.

Among noteworthy Warsaw sites are the Palace of Culture and Science (a gift from Stalin during the 1950s) and the great square surrounding it, the elegant Aleje Ujazdowski leading to the Belvedere Palace (now the official presidential residence), and the Lazienki Palace and park.

As Poland's capital, Warsaw is well served by bus, train, and air transportation and has regular connections with major cities not far from its borders, among them Prague and Vienna.

A route between Warsaw and Częstochowa (avoiding the major manufacturing city of Lódz) passes through the picturesque Holy Cross Mountains.

Just across the Czech border is Brno (population about 385,000), at the confluence of the Svratka and Svitava rivers in the eastern foothills of the Bohemian-Moravian region. Several churches survive from the nineteenth century, when Brno was a monastic center. The botanist Gregor Mendel (1822–1884) performed his genetic experiments at the Augustinian monastery there.

KYIV AND LVIV

For centuries, Ukraine has been the scene of conflict. It has been repeatedly invaded, occupied and ruled by foreign powers, and divided by changing allegiances.

Divisions have also existed within the church for nearly a thousand years. More than 97 percent of Ukraine's religious communities are Christian, and about half of these—nearly 13,000 communities—are of the Orthodox tradition. The remaining half are largely Catholic, but again divided—between the Ukrainian Greek Catholic Church, with more than 3,000 communities, and the Roman Catholic Church, with fewer than 900.

Since the collapse of the Soviet Union, of which it was a part, the newly independent nation has made considerable but difficult progress toward unity within itself and closer ties with the rest of the world. The Greek Catholic and Roman Catholic churches quickly rejuvenated in the late Soviet era as official attitudes liberalized, and even more quickly after Ukraine became independent in 1991. By the new millennium, they had an estimated 4 million adherents, or about 20 percent of believers in a nation of about 50 million. As economic and social life in Ukraine has improved in recent times, so have relations among the various religious communities, but a continuing need for still closer unity and coexistence was stressed by Pope John Paul II during a five-day visit to Kyiv, the capital, and Lviv in western Ukraine in June 2001.

The pontiff's visit made a considerable impression. An editorial in the Kyiv Post commented that ". . . suddenly the world was talking about Ukraine as a possible catalyst for healing the schism that has divided Christianity for a millennium. There is no question that the pope's visit was a great event for this country—probably the greatest moment the country has seen since it declared independence in 1991."

When he arrived in Kyiv, John Paul II called for an end to the longstanding schism between the eastern and western churches. Although there was opposition to his visit from some Orthodox leaders, the Pope received a warm welcome in Kyiv, and an estimated 500,000 pilgrims turned out to see and hear him.

While in Kyiv, the pope visited nearby Babi Yar, the scene of a Nazi massacre of 33,000 Jews in a three-day period in 1941. A total of more than 150,000 Jews, gypsies, and others were killed there before World War II ended, and it is now the site of a national memorial. The pope prayed at the site, accompanied by Ukraine's chief rabbi, Yaakov Dov Bleich.

At Lviv, before an audience of more than a million, the pope beatified 28 martyred priests, nuns, monks, and bishops, most of whom died during the 1940s and 1950s as the Soviet Union brutally suppressed Greek Catholic and Roman Catholic belief. The previous day, he had beatified two Lviv clerics who died for their faith in the 1920s.

In his homily at the beatifications of the 28, the pope said, "These brothers and sisters of ours are the representatives that are known out of a multitude of anonymous heroes—men and women, husbands and wives, priests and consecrated men and women, young people and old—who in the course of the twentieth century, the 'century of martyrdom,' underwent persecution, violence, and death rather than renounce their faith."

The pope's messages during his pilgrimage stressed tolerance and closer unity among the various faiths. In Lviv, the national center of the Greek Catholic and Roman Catholic faiths, he urged Ukrainians to work to "build a future of mutual respect, fraternal cooperation, and true solidarity."

Ukraine's Christian history can be dated with certainty to the tenth century, although legend holds that the Apostle Andrew preached, founded parishes, and built churches in the region nearly 1,000 years earlier. It was in the year 988—before the east-west Schism of 1054—that Christianity was proclaimed the official religion of the country, then known as Kyivan Rus, and many of Kyiv's and Lviv's religious sites date back nearly that far.

Kyiv

Kyiv, also known as Kiev, is Ukraine's largest city and its capital. Settled since prehistoric times. Kyiv quickly became important because of its position on major trade routes between the Baltic and Mediterranean. Viking invaders in 860 made it the center of the newly established Kyivan Rus, and before the year 1000 it had become a leading religious center.

Over the following centuries, it was repeatedly invaded and occupied. In the last century, it was held by Germany during World War I, then became part of the Soviet Union. During World War II, it was again occupied by German forces from 1941 to 1943 with considerable loss of life. After the war, it returned to its position as a principal Soviet economic and cultural center. In 1991, with independence, Kyiv became Ukraine's capital. It remains a major industrial and cultural center.

The Percherska Lavra (Monastery of the Caves) in Kyiv, along the banks of the Dnieper river, was founded in 1051 and is one of the most sacred places of the Ukrainian Orthodox Church. The monastery is built over caverns and underground passages cut into cliffs along the river, and in its early years became a thriving cultural and religious center of eastern Europe and a popular site of pilgrimage. From the twelfth century it was known for its scriptorium, where works of ancient writers were translated, and for its icon-painting studios.

The monastery spreads over more than 60 acres and includes numerous churches, towers, museums, and the maze of tunnels and caves in which the monks lived and worked. The museums include the Museum of Ukrainian Decorative and Applied Art, the Museum of Ukrainian Books and Printing, and the Museum of Historical Treasures. The complex today again houses a functioning monastery, Kiev Theological Seminary, and the headquarters of the Archbishop of the Ukrainian Orthodox Church.

Saint Sophia Cathedral in Kyiv is an impressive 13-domed church built on the site of a battlefield in 1037 by Prince Yaroslav the Wise on the site of a battlefield to commemorate a Kyivan Rus victory over invading Asian tribes. It quickly became both an important place of worship and a political and cultural center, and housed the country's first library and school. Many of its ancient mosaics and frescoes are intact despite the many uses to which the building has been put over the centuries; today it is principally a museum.

Another of Kyiv's many noted Orthodox churches is Saint Cyril's, which dates from 1146. Although it was rebuilt in the Ukrainian baroque style in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, its interior remains predominantly original. Also noteworthy are the late-nineteenth-century Cathedral of Saint Vladimir with its seven domes and the eighteenth-century Church of Saint Andrew.

Kyiv's principal Roman Catholic church is the Gothic-style Cathedral of Saint Nicholas, completed in 1909. It was restored in 1980 and is now used both as a church and a concert hall. Services are held daily.

Another point of interest is the rebuilt eleventh-century Golden Gate, which was once the main entrance to the fortified city.

Kyiv is home to several academic institutions, chief among them the University of Kyiv, founded in 1834. Kyiv's museums include the Historical Museum of Ukraine and the Museum of Ukrainian Art. The city also boasts an opera house, a music conservatory, and a large sports stadium.

Lviv

Founded in the Middle Ages, the city of Lviv (also called L'viv, Lvov, Lwiw, Lwow, and Lemberg) is in western Ukraine between the Dniester and Bug rivers and not far from the border with present-day Poland; in fact, for prolonged periods in its history it has been part of Poland. For several centuries it was a thriving government, commercial, and religious center.

Lviv's Saint George Cathedral is the principal sanctuary of the Ukrainian Greek-Catholic Church. Over the centuries, several churches at the site have been destroyed and rebuilt; the present sanctuary was erected in the eighteenth century. One of its most precious relics is a seventeenth-century icon of the Blessed Virgin that is believed to work miracles. The elaborate rococo interior of the cathedral was restored in 1996.

The city's principal Roman Catholic church is the Latin Cathedral, the first stone of which was laid in 1349. Over the following centuries, as construction and alteration continued, it came to incorporate various styles from Gothic to baroque. The Armenian Church, now the Church of the Dormition, is one of the most ancient churches in Lviv.

In November 1998 Lviv was added to the UNESCO List of World Monuments of Architecture. The UNESCO citation called Lviv ". . . an outstanding example of the fusion of the architectural and artistic traditions of eastern Europe with those of Italy and Germany . . . The medieval urban topography has been preserved virtually intact . . ." Sometimes called the "Pearl of Europe," the city has more than half of all of Ukraine's architectural monuments.

In the Region

Ukraine is the second-largest country in Europe, after Russia. In recent years it has enjoyed considerable economic growth. Politically, it continues to walk a fine line between the Western nations and Russia. Among its objectives is membership in the European Union, and in May 2002 it announced that it intended to abandon neutrality and apply formally for NATO membership.

Almost all of Ukraine is in a vast plain, apart from the Carpathian mountains in the far west and the Crimean peninsula in the south. The climate is temperate, except for the semitropical southern Crimea. Ukraine has long been a principal source of agricultural products as well as the home of major heavy and light industry.

Near Kyiv is the Museum of Folk Architecture and Rural Life, an open-air museum opened to the public in the 1970s. Still growing, the museum features more than 200 structures moved there from various locations around the country or rebuilt on the site, as well as some 40,000 ethnographic exhibits ranging from folk costumes to household articles. It is divided into two departments, "Architecture and Life in the Ukrainian Village Before the Revolution" and "Folk Architecture and Life in the Socialist Village."

Not far from Lviv are several notable castles. Olesko Castle, built between the thirteenth and eighteenth centuries, now houses a museum containing with hundreds of works of art, among them icons, portraits, great battle canvases, and a large sculpture collection. The late Renaissance Pidhoretsky Castle is in a complex including a baroque cathedral and ancient monastery. Szirzh Castle, on a hill overlooking a lake, was built between the fourteenth and seventeenth centuries.

Also in the Lviv region is the seventeenth-century fortress town of Zhovkva, with its remains of early fortifications, castle, and cathedral as well as its Dominican and Basilian monasteries and early synagogue.

Transport and Accommodation

Kyiv is well connected to other European capitals by air, road, and rail. Regular international flights are available from New York, as well as from major European airports. Nearly all international flights arrive at Kyiv's Boryspil International Airport. The city's other main airport, Zhulyany-Kiev, handles domestic flights. Lviv is about an hour by air from Kyiv and is also well connected by road and rail.

Both cities have the facilities to cater to a growing tourist trade. Hotels and bed-and-breakfasts are readily available, as are restaurants in all price ranges. Little English is spoken, however.

Ukraine was the focus of world attention in April 1986 when a malfunction at the Chernobyl nuclear power station, about 60 miles from Kyiv, caused a massive release of radioactivity. Radiation remains a concern, but the effects of the catastrophe have now been largely overcome. As of spring 2003, regular monitoring showed no elevated levels of radiation in the region although residents and visitors were advised to avoid wild mushrooms, berries, and game, all of which can retain radiation. Evidence of lessened concern was the fact that minibus tours of the reactor (now encased in concrete) and the deserted town of Pripyat became available in 2002. Those who take the tour are given personal radiation monitors.

The U.S. State Department advises travelers to Ukraine that the country's transition to a market economy has led to improved facilities for visitors but not to the level of most Western nations. Visitors from the United States, Canada, and the European Union must first obtain a visa from a consular office of Ukraine.

PILGRIMAGE CHURCH OF SAINT JOHN OF NEPOMUK, ZELENA HORA

For nearly three centuries, devout pilgrims have traveled to Zelena Hora (Green Hill) in Western Moravia to visit the Pilgrimage Church of Saint John of Nepomuk. The church is not only an outstanding monument to the patron saint of the Czech lands, but is also considered to be the crowning achievement of its master architect, Jan Blazej Santini.

Saint John of Nepomuk (also known as Saint John Nepomucene, Saint Jan Nepomucky, and Saint John of Pomuk) was a priest who rose to become vicar general of the archbishop of Prague. In 1393 he fell afoul of the bad temper of King Wenceslaus IV of Bohemia who had him tortured, then bound at the hands and feet and thrown from a bridge into the Vltava River at Prague.

According to legend, on the night of John's death, March 20, five stars hovered over the place where he had drowned; some sources say his body floated on the surface for some time, surrounded by a halo of five stars. Soon reports began to be heard of miracles occurring through John's intercession, and eventually—in 1729—he was canonized by Pope Benedict XIII.

The future saint was born at Nepomuk in Bohemia about 1340. He studied at the Universities of Prague and Padua, was ordained, and became a canon. It was while he served as vicar general to Archbishop John of Jenzenstein at Prague that his martyrdom occurred.

There are two accounts of the events that led to his death. The most popular holds that he was killed for refusing—even after being promised great riches and then being tortured nearly to the point of death—to reveal to the king what his wife, Queen Sophie, had said in the confessional. The king, it seems, suspected that his wife had been unfaithful to him.

The second account has John involved in a dispute when Wenceslaus planned to convert a Benedictine abbey into a cathedral for a new diocese he had proposed to create for a court favorite. The archbishop and John were firmly opposed to the idea.

Some scholars hold that both accounts are correct—that the king was already furious with John over his refusal to reveal the queen's confession and became further enraged when thwarted in his plans for the new diocese.

In any case, in March 1393 Wenceslaus summoned John and two other clerics to a meeting during which he flew into a rage and ordered the clerics tortured. He is said to have taken part in the cruelties, applying a burning torch to John's side. The other two clerics were not badly hurt, but John was grievously injured and the king ordered him thrown into the river to drown.

A few years later, Wenceslaus IV was deposed by his own subjects and is said to have died an unrepentant and miserable death.

Although Saint John of Nepomuk's feast was suppressed from the calendar of the universal church by the Sacred Congregation of Rites in 1961, he remains revered and celebrated throughout much of the world, particularly in Bohemia and Moravia, which, with Silesia, compose today's Czech Republic. Churches throughout the world, several of them in the United States, bear his name.

Saint John of Nepomuk is invoked against lies, indiscretions, floods, and slander, and is the patron of confessors, boatmen, bridge builders, and bridges. His likeness, often with a halo of five stars, appears on many bridges throughout Europe. The most famous is a statue on the Charles Bridge in Prague, marking the spot from which he was thrown into the river to drown. Passersby habitually touch a plaque at the base of the statue for luck.

He is entombed at Saint Vitus's Cathedral in Prague. When his original tomb was opened in 1719—330 years after his death—the flesh had disappeared from his body, but his tongue is said to have been found intact and incorrupt. The effort to have him declared a saint then began in earnest.

Saint John is often portrayed in art as an Augustinian canon and usually near a bridge. He may hold a finger to his lips, or—particularly in Bohemia and Austria—wear a padlock holding his lips closed. His feast is May 16.

The Church

The Pilgrimage Church of St. John of Nepomuk on Zelena Hora is near Zdár nad Sazavou, a town of about 24,000 on the Moravia-Bohemia border. It is situated on a steep hill near a Cistercian Abbey founded many years earlier. Consecrated in 1722, it became the saint's first major shrine upon his canonization in 1729. Its architect (also known as Giovanni Santini and Jan Blazej Santini Aichel) was a member of a family of Italian artists and stonemasons who had settled in Prague in the 1600s.

The highly unusual building, whose style combines elements of the Baroque and neo-Gothic, has been described as "a timeless and absolute masterpiece, free from any of the conventional elements of the architecture of its period."

Encircled by a cloister built on a ten-point star ground plan, the chapel itself is on a five-point star ground plan, based on the legend that five stars appeared at the spot where John died. The premises are accessible through five gates, and there are five chapels and five altars inside the church.

At the top of the cupola, Saint John of Nepomuk's symbol, a large tongue, is encircled with flames. Tongue-shaped windows top the entry vestibules.

The shrine was included in the UNESCO World Heritage list in 1994.

In the Region

Since the end of the Communist era more than a decade ago, the ancient city of Prague has again become a magnet for tourists and pilgrims from around the world. The city, which is the national capital, is rich in places of artistic and spiritual importance. Among the most noteworthy are the Charles Bridge and Prague Castle, which includes Saint Vitus's Cathedral within its walls.

The early fourteenth-century Charles Bridge over the Vltava is well known not only because of Saint John of Nepomuk. The 1,700-foot span is lined with Baroque statues, principally religious; Saint John's is the oldest of them, dating to 1683. Open only to pedestrians, the bridge is a popular meeting place and center of outdoor activity, lively with strolling musicians and dozens of people selling everything from trinkets to spices. At night, it offers stunning views of the city.

Prague Castle is actually a group of buildings, the earliest of them dating to the tenth century. It was founded as a small fortified city by the first Christian prince of the Przemysl family, Borivoj, and became the principal residence of that dynasty. In 1158 it became the central seat of power when Vladislav II came to the Czech throne. In 1344, under the reign of Charles IV, it became the Imperial Seat for the Holy Roman Empire, and it has witnessed political and social turbulence over much of the next six centuries.

Saint Vitus's Cathedral, which towers above the walls of the castle complex, is probably the city's most notable landmark. Construction began in 1344 and continued for nearly 600 years. It is considered one of Europe's finest Gothic buildings.

The cathedral houses Saint John's tomb, an elaborately ornate sepulchre made of nearly two tons of wrought silver, designed by the Viennese architect Fischer von Erlach. The saint's tongue is kept in a separate reliquary.

Also within the cathedral is the tomb of the tenth-century king Wenceslaus I, the "Good King Wenceslaus" of the yuletide carol, who became Saint Wenceslaus. A devout Christian in an era of great conflict between paganism and Christianity, he was known for his pro-Christian works until, in 919, a group of knights under the leadership of his non-Christian brother Boreslav assassinated him on the doorstep of a church. From the moment of his death, Wenceslaus I was considered a martyr and venerated. Numerous miracles were attributed to him, and his tomb became a major pilgrimage site.

Within the castle complex and elsewhere in Prague there are numerous churches and other buildings of historical, artistic, and religious note, among them the Baroque Loreto Church (a shrine dedicated to the Blessed Virgin), the Tyn Church, the Church of Saint Nicholas, the Archbishop's Palace, and the Royal Palace.

The medieval town of Kutna Hora, about 40 miles east of Prague, was once one of the richest places in all of Europe. Its wealth came from vast deposits of silver ore, and in the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries it was the economic and cultural center of Bohemia, rivaling Prague in importance.

Silver was discovered there in the twelfth century and was mined heavily for about 400 years before petering out. The wealth taken from the ground made Kutna Hora one of the most splendid cities of the Middle Ages, as well as funding the transformation of Prague into a city worthy of being the capital of the Holy Roman Empire.

While all of the town's Baroque buildings are impressive, its indisputable masterpiece is the late Gothic Saint Barbara's Cathedral, built in the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries. It was dedicated to Saint Barbara as the patron saint of miners, and silver mining is a theme carried out in decoration throughout the building. Statuary and frescoes depict life in the medieval mining town. Other sites in Kutna Hora include the Czech Museum of Silver, and the Italian Court, once the Czech state mint and a royal residence.

Kutna Hora is also on the UNESCO World Heritage List, as is the historic center of Prague.

A short distance from Kutna Hora is Sedlec, with its famous ossuary—a small chapel decorated with art objects fashioned from thousands of human bones. A Cistercian monastery was founded at the site in 1142 and its graveyard became very popular when an abbot brought some earth from Jerusalem and sprinkled it there. The cemetery eventually became overcrowded, and the older remains were removed. The monks decided to use the exhumed bones for decoration, and in 1870 a woodcarver, Frantisek Rint, arranged them artistically to decorate the interior of the chapel. It is estimated that the bones of 40,000 people were used to create such objects as an altar and a massive chandelier.

Transport and Accommodation

The Czech Republic—which is only about the size of the state of Maine—has become a popular destination in recent years for tourists from around the world. Prague is accessible by direct flights from major U.S. airports, and by air or train from other European centers.

Accommodation is plentiful in Prague, but it may be best to avoid July, August, and the Christmas and Easter holidays, when the city is often overcrowded with sightseers. There are restaurants at all price ranges, but the choice is wider in Prague and other major cities than in smaller places such as Zdár.

Non-Czech-speaking travelers may be able to get by in English, but German is much more commonly spoken.

No visa is required for U.S. citizens for stays of up to 90 days.

FÁTIMA

On May 13, 1917, in the desolate landscape near the small Portuguese village of Fátima, three shepherd children saw a light shining from just above the branches of a holm oak. The Blessed Virgin appeared, "a lady brighter than the sun," and asked them to pray for world peace.

War was raging across Europe. Russia was in the midst of the Bolshevik revolution. Portugal itself had been experiencing political violence and a succession of short-lived governments. The monarchy had been overthrown in 1908 and the country was ruled by anti-clerical factions; since 1911, as many as 1,700 priests, monks, and nuns had been murdered.

All three children—10-year-old Lúcia dos Santos and her cousins Francisco, 9, and Jacinta, 7—saw the figure standing on a cloud just above the tree. Lúcia and Jacinta heard her speak.

The lady asked the children to return to the same spot on the thirteenth of each month and said that in October she would reveal her identity and what she desired.

The children did as they were asked. About 50 people accompanied them in June, 1,000 in July. On August 13, the children were kidnapped by the civil prefect of Outrem and interrogated for two days, but the lady appeared to them on August 19 and promised that in October a miracle would occur. By September the throng accompanying the children had grown to 30,000, and by October it exceeded 50,000.

On a wet and bleak October 13, the lady announced to the children that she was Our Lady of the Rosary. According to the New Catholic Encyclopedia, "the sun appeared and seemed to tremble, rotate violently, and finally fall, dancing over the heads of the throng before it returned to normal."

Each time, only the children saw the apparition, but others said that they saw movement in the tree and the appearance and disappearance of the cloud. Many in the crowd of October 13 said they had witnessed what became known as "the Miracle of the Sun."

During the apparitions, the Virgin asked the children to encourage people to "pray a great deal and make many sacrifices," to "pray the rosary every day to obtain peace for the world." She promised that if her requests were heeded, the result would be "the salvation of many souls, the conversion of Russia, and world peace." Otherwise, she warned, a second great war would erupt and Russia would "spread her errors throughout the world, fomenting wars and persecutions against the church. The good will be martyred, the Holy Father will have much to suffer, various nations will be annihilated . . . but in the end, my Immaculate Heart will triumph. The Holy Father will consecrate Russia to me, it will be converted, and a period of peace will be given to the world."

Despite opposition from Portugal's strong anti-clerical movement, word quickly spread and pilgrims began visiting Fátima in the thousands. Miracle cures were proclaimed. In 1922 a canonical process of enquiry was opened that lasted seven years. In 1930 the bishop of Leiria pronounced the visions worthy of credence and authorized the cult of Our Lady of Fátima; four decades later, the occurrences at Fátima were declared to be "an affirmation of the Gospel" by Pope Paul VI.

Francisco died in 1919 and Jacinta the following year, both of influenza. In 1928 their cousin Lúcia entered the Carmelite convent in Coimbra, Portugal, where she remains.

On May 12 and 13, 2000, Pope John Paul II traveled to the shrine to preside at the beatification of Francisco and Jacinta.

"The message of Fátima is an appeal to conversion," the pope said in his homily at the beatification ceremony. "In her motherly solicitude, the Blessed Virgin came here, to Fátima, to ask men not to offend God any more. It was a mother's sorrow that obliged her to speak."

Just before the ceremony, which was attended by a congregation estimated at 600,000, the pope prayed at the graves of Francisco and Jacinta. He also met privately with the third seer, Sister Lúcia, then 93, who was present for the beatification.

During his visit the pope made headlines by disclosing the content of the "third secret" of Fátima: a vision that essentially predicted the attempt on his life by an assassin in Saint Peter's Square on May 13, 1981—the feast of Our Lady of Fátima.

Each year, the major pilgrimages to Fátima take place on May 13 and October 13, when the roads leading to Fátima are choked with pilgrims, most of them on foot. The months between, particularly around the thirteenth, are also busy.

The pilgrims converge on Cova da Iria, the site of the apparitions. There, a neoclassical basilica (begun in 1928 and consecrated in 1953), topped by a 213-foot tower surmounted by a bronze crown and a great crystal cross, now stands at one end of a vast paved square. The square has seen up to a million pilgrims at a time; many cross it on their knees.

One published tour guide notes that the basilica and its surroundings are "of no architectural interest; Fátima is not for observers. An official notice puts it like this: 'If you come simply as a visitor, respect the pilgrims at prayer. This place has nothing to satisfy mere curiosity. What matters here is the heart.'"

Transport and Accommodation

Fátima is on the Entroncamento–Coimbra-B train route. Passengers from Lisbon (about 70 miles south) change at Entroncamento, from which Fátima is a train ride of only about 15 minutes. Coimbra is about 90 minutes from Fátima by train. There are also frequent buses from Lisbon and between Fátima and nearby towns.

Although it is popular as a pilgrimage destination, Fátima remains relatively isolated. Apart from vendors of religious medals, figurines, and sacred images, the village is predominantly made up of religious houses and hostelries for the accommodation of pilgrims and the infirm. There are many places to stay, but reservations are needed far in advance for the major pilgrimage dates. Restaurants are also plentiful, but the majority of them are in the hotels.

In the Region

Batalha, 11 miles west of Fátima, is home to the former Dominican cloister of Santa Maria da Vitoria. In 1385, at Aljubarrota, King John I of Portugal vanquished the Spaniards who were attempting to incorporate his country into the Castilian kingdom. In fulfillment of a vow to the Virgin in return for the victory, he began the building of Santa Maria da Vitoria as a monument to Portuguese independence. The work, which progressed under successive monarchs, is regarded as an outstanding example of Iberian art.

Alcobaça, about 11 miles from Batalha, offers one of Portugal's most impressive religious monuments, the Monastery of Saint Mary of Alcobaça, also built in fulfillment of a vow made in gratitude for victory in a battle—against the Moors in 1147 for Santerém. Finished in 1178, it is Portugal's largest church.

Coimbra, about 60 miles north of Fátima, was Portugal's first capital. It is essentially a university town and is at its best when school is in session. Students at the University of Coimbra wear traditional black capes and adorn their briefcases with ribbons, whose color denotes which faculty they attend (red for law, yellow for medicine, and so forth). In May, after final exams, they burn their ribbons in a ceremony called Queima das Fitas that amounts to a city-wide party.

Coimbra's highlights include the Sé Velha (Old Cathedral), designed and built in the twelfth century; the Sé Nova (New Cathedral), a seventeenth-century Jesuit church; and the Museu Machado de Castro, originally built to house the prelates of Coimbra, which offers one of Portugal's finest collections of sculpture.

Leira, situated between the rivers Lena and Lis 14 miles northwest of Fátima, is the center of a region known for its handicrafts, particularly fine hand-blown glassware. Its castle, Renaissance cathedral, and former royal palace are among its attractions.

The Four Caves Circuit, eight miles from Fátima, near the village of Mira de Aire, is a series of caverns segmented into many smaller caves, some with lakes. The best known of these is the Lake of Pearls, which has rock formations unique in Europe.

Lisbon is Portugal's capital, largest city, and chief port. There was a major settlement on the site before the Romans arrived in 205 B.C., but the oldest part of the present city dates from the 300-year occupation of the Moors, which began in the eighth century. Historic attractions from every subsequent period abound, although much of the city was destroyed by an earthquake and tidal wave in 1755.

Notable among Lisbon's buildings are Castelo de São Jorge (Saint George's Castle), the Sé (Cathedral), Belém Tower, Jerónimos Monastery, and the Gulbenkian Museum.

SANTIAGO DE COMPOSTELA

Santiago de Compostela in northwestern Spain, where the remains of the Apostle James are said to be enshrined, came to prominence as a pilgrimage destination in the Middle Ages. For centuries it was surpassed in importance only by Jerusalem and Rome.

Making the arduous journey along the Camino de Santiago (Way of Saint James) was believed in medieval times to be an assurance of a place in heaven. Pilgrims obtained a compostellana, a document that not only certified that the holder had completed the pilgrimage but also served as a plenary indulgence, offering remission from purgatory.

The shrine reached its peak as a pilgrimage destination during the twelfth century, when it attracted an estimated two million pilgrims a year from across Europe and from all levels of society. It was during that era that the pilgrimage to Santiago de Compostela became the basis for the first known guide book, part of the Codex Calixtinus, a collection of texts relating to Saint James and his worship.

The numbers of pilgrims have varied over the centuries, but today the shrine is thronged once again, particularly in "jubilee years," when the feast day of Saint James (July 25) falls on a Sunday. In all years, the shrine and the city are at their busiest in July and August.

Legend has it that the Apostle James the Greater traveled from the Holy Land to convert Spain to Christianity and remained there for seven years before returning to Judea, where he fell victim to King Herod in A.D. 44 and was beheaded. His disciples are said to have returned to Spain with his remains. The burial site was lost to memory until the early ninth century, when a star is said to have guided Bishop Theodemir of Iria Flavia to it. The relics found there soon gave rise to a cult, and the site—then called Libredón—became a popular object of pilgrimage.

Legend also holds that in 844 Don Ramiro I was leading Spanish troops in an attack on the occupying Moors near Logroño when a knight in armor, mounted on a charger and bearing a white standard with a red cross, appeared on the battlefield and beat back the infidels. The Spanish recognized the knight as Saint James, gave him the surname Matamoros (Slayer of Moors), and gave the reconquest of Spain a patron saint.

This added greatly to the significance of the remains at Santiago. King Alfonso II of Asturias (792–842) built a church over the tomb, and Alfonso III (866–911) built a larger one. It was razed by the Moors in 997, along with the rest of the city, but—according to Islamic as well as Christian sources—the Moors were afraid to touch the tomb of Saint James.

The remains were secure until 1589, when they were taken from Santiago de Compostela to a place of safety because Sir Francis Drake had attacked the nearby port of La Coruña. Their whereabouts were unknown for nearly 300 years, until they were found in 1879 and returned. In 1884 Pope Leo XIII recognized the legitimacy of the relics and the tomb of Saint James.

Although modern scholars disagree on the authenticity of the legend, exploratory excavations in recent times indicate that some remains at the site date to the first century.

It is still possible to obtain a compostellana, the certificate that identifies one as a true pilgrim to Santiago de Compostela, and several thousand are issued each year. The requirements are stringent: Intending pilgrims must acquire a "pilgrim's passport," which is necessary both to obtain the compostellana at the end of the journey and to stay at any of the many pilgrim refuges along the way; in addition, the pilgrim must walk, cycle, or go on horseback for a minimum of 100 kilometers (about 60 miles) of the route.

The Cathedral

The present cathedral, begun in 1075 and consecrated in 1211, is regarded as both an architectural and a religious treasure, and it is unique in all of Spain because it can be seen from plazas on all sides. Like most ancient churches, it has numerous later additions, but most of them blend well with the original. Of particular note is the Obradoiro facade, a Baroque masterpiece that since 1750 has framed the cathedral's main entrance, raised two stories above the Plaza del Obradoiro. Between twin towers, Saint James—in pilgrim costume—looks down from a lofty height.

Inside the entrance is the twelfth-century Pórtico de la Gloria, the original entrance completed in 1188 by Maestro Mateo, its three arches carved with biblical figures from the Last Judgment and purgatory. In the center, Christ is flanked by his apostles and the 23 Elders of the Apocalypse. Just below Christ is a serene Saint James, poised atop a richly carved column that includes the humble face of Maestro Mateo at the bottom.

The interior of the cathedral is richly ornamented. The high altar is surmounted by a thirteenth-century statue of Saint James, and beneath the altar a crypt has been built into the foundations of the ninth-century church that contained the Saint James's tomb and now enshrines the relics of the saint and his two disciples, Saint Theodore and Saint Athanasius.

Santiago de Compostela is one of the most impressive and intact of Spain's old cities, and the plazas and streets surrounding the cathedral offer considerable variety. Among noteworthy buildings are the San Martin Pinario Monastery and its church, the Plaza de España, a spacious square bordered by the cathedral, and numerous other buildings of architectural interest, including the bishop's palace (Palacio Gelmírez).

Transport and Accommodation

There is an international airport near Santiago de Compostela, with regular flights to London, Paris, Zurich, Geneva, and Frankfurt, as well as daily service to Madrid and Barcelona. The journey to Santiago de Compostela is about 11 hours by train from Madrid. There is also regular bus service from major cities in Spain and elsewhere in Europe.

There is a wide variety of accommodation in Santiago de Compostela and in the surrounding region, from small guest houses and hostels to Paradors, a government-run chain of luxury hotels. Among the latter is the former Pilgrims' Hospital near the cathedral and the Hotel de los Reyes Católicos (Catholic Monarchs), both of which were built in the early sixteenth century by Ferdinand and Isabella in gratitude to Saint James for having finally expelled the Moors.

In the Region

The camino francés (French route) to Santiago de Compostela within Spain covers a distance of about 250 miles from the Pyrenees through the regions of Navarre, the Rioja, Old Castile, and Galicia. Along it are some of the most outstanding buildings in Spain: churches, monasteries, cathedrals, hostels, and hospitals, all associated with the pilgrimage.

The Asturian route, which runs roughly parallel but farther to the north, near the coast, offers similar scenic attractions. The two routes join at León, which is about 200 miles east of Santiago de Compostela.

León, in the high plains of Old Castile on the Bernesga River, was founded in A.D. 70 as a permanent camp for the Roman legions. The city's richest era was early in the reconquest, when the capital was moved there from Oviedo, in the far north, in the early tenth century. Sections of the medieval ramparts can still be seen. A wealthy provincial capital today, it offers the variety of modern city life alongside its half-timbered old town. Among the city's architectural features are its impressive Gothic cathedral on the Plaza de Regia, dating from 1205. Along the Bernesga is the Antiguo Monasterio de San Marcos, a former monastery that is now a five-star hotel in the Parador chain.

Astorga, about 276 miles southwest of León, is worth a visit because of its Neo-Gothic Palacio Episcopal (Archbishop's Palace), a fanciful building designed by Antoni Gaudí a century ago. The building contains the Museo del Camino (Museum of the Way), which offers a history of the pilgrimage.

The nearby Galician Coast offers scenic harbors, seaside towns and fishing villages, among them Muros, Padrón, and La Coruña. The latter offers Sobrado de los Monjes, one of Galicia's vast monasteries, built between the Renaissance and Baroque periods. Also on the coast, at the Portuguese border, is Túy, which according to legend was founded by Diomedes, son of the Homeric hero Tydeus. It shows signs of habitation by Greeks followed by Romans and Visigoths.

COLOGNE and AACHEN

The cities of Cologne (Köln) and Aachen in west central Germany share a number of distinctions. Both were early centers of the Christian faith in Europe, both became the repositories of holy relics, and both over the centuries have been important centers of pilgrimage.

And although both cities were devastated by heavy bombing in World War II, their imposing cathedrals—among Europe's most noteworthy—both survived.

Cologne has been a center of influence since Roman times. Settled by the Romans in 38 B.C., it achieved prominence within a century. In 15 A.D. it was the birthplace of Julia Agrippina, who was to become the wife of the Roman Emperor Claudius; in her honor, Claudius made it a Roman capital (called Colonia Claudia Ara Agrippinensis) in 50 A.D.

The city had Christian churches as early as the fourth century, when Emperor Constantine I began the Christianization of the empire. Under the Franks (from about 400 A.D.) it became a royal residence, famous for its many churches. Under Charlemagne (from about 775 A.D.) it was the center from which Saxony was conquered and evangelized. From the eleventh to sixteenth centuries it was the Holy Roman Empire's largest and richest city.

Its importance as a center of pilgrimage grew enormously after its acquisition in 1194 of relics of the Three Magi, the Wise Men who brought gifts to the infant Jesus. For a time, it was a pilgrimage destination second only to Rome.

It was felt that the relics needed a home worthy of their importance, and work began in 1248 on the Kölner Dom, a Gothic cathedral that would rise on a magnificent scale. The relics remain there today, in the same huge reliquary, heavily worked in silver and gold, in which they were originally displayed.

The cathedral—dedicated to Saint Peter and the Blessed Virgin—was built on the site of several previous churches dating to the sixth century. An aim of the design was to accommodate large numbers of pilgrims at one time, and the cathedral's measurements are impressive: 470 feet in length, 147 feet wide at the nave, and with an interior peak of 140 feet, making it larger even than Notre-Dame de Chartres, which had been completed a few decades earlier. At the time they were built, the Kölner Dom's twin west towers, at 515 feet, were by far the tallest man-made structures in the world.

Construction continued off and on until 1880, and the cathedral stands today virtually as it was then—the only one of Cologne's more than 100 churches to have emerged virtually undamaged from nearly three years of bombing.

Aachen

Pilgrims in countless numbers came to Aachen from across central Europe in the Middle Ages largely because of a rich trove of holy relics that have been there since the reign of Charlemagne, the first Holy Roman Emperor.

The story of Aachen, in fact, is inseparable from the story of Charlemagne, his father Pepin the Short, and the empire itself.

The earliest traces of Christianity date to a fifth century chapel at an ancient bath shrine. King Pepin replaced that chapel with a small palace chapel in the eighth century and Charlemagne a few years later built an eight-sided chapel (modeled on the church of San Vitale in Ravenna, Italy) that now forms the core of Aachen's cathedral, a structure that was built over the course of the next 1,000 years.

The most important of its relics are the swaddling clothes of Christ, the loin cloth of the Lord, the cloth for John the Baptist's head, and the Blessed Virgin's cloak. They have been kept in a Gothic Marian shrine in the cathedral since 1239. Also in the cathedral is a fourteenth-century statue of the Virgin that is venerated as miraculous.

The Domschatzkammer (cathedral treasury) is unusually rich; Charlemagne himself journeyed to Rome to be crowned Holy Roman Emperor in 800, but the next 32 Holy Roman Emperors were crowned at Aachen and each of the coronations brought sumptuous gifts to the cathedral. The cathedral's notable tenth-century altar painting, for instance, was donated by Otto III, and the richly decorated golden shrine that contains Charlemagne's remains by Frederick II.

The cathedral also holds Charlemagne's marble throne, modeled after the throne of Solomon.

In the Region

Cologne and Aachen, less than 45 miles apart, are two of the principal cities of Germany's Rhineland.

Cologne—known for eau de cologne, the toilet water first produced there in the early eighteenth century—is also a center of European and international trade fairs.

A lively and cosmopolitan city, it is as famous for its restaurants, bars, and shops as for its cultural attractions. Among the latter, in addition to the famous cathedral, are the Museum Ludwig and the Wallraf-Richartz-Museum, which together have the Rhineland's most significant art collection. The Wallraf-Richartz-Museum has paintings from the past six centuries; the Ludwig concentrates on the twentieth century, with an emphasis on Picasso. Near the cathedral is the Römish-Germanisches Museum, built on the ruins of a wealthy Roman businessman's villa.

The city has 12 distinctive Romanesque churches, and while all but the cathedral were heavily damaged during the war, all have been substantially rebuilt. Notable among them is Gross St. Martin, part of which dates to the thirteenth century. It is in the Martinsviertel, the reconstructed old city that is now a center of Cologne night life.

Aachen, near Germany's border with Belgium and Luxembourg, is also known by its French name, Aix-la-Chapelle. It still has the hot springs that drew the Romans and Pepin the Short. Their waters are said to be capable of curing an assortment of ailments; over the ages, some have preferred to drink them, others to bathe in them.

Aachen's Rathaus (Town Hall), near the cathedral, features a Gothic hall first used in the fourteenth century for the coronation banquet of Emperor Karl IV. The town also has several museums; one specializes in German, Flemish, and Dutch art and early woodcarvings, another in Rococo and Biedermeier furnishings, and a third (the Internationales Zeitungsmuseum) offers a vast and international collection of newspapers.

Bonn, about 15 miles south of Cologne, the capital of West Germany until reunification in 1990, is well known as a government and intellectual center and also had its beginnings before the Christian era, as a Roman outpost known as Castra Bonnensia. Its medieval cathedral is said to be built upon the spot where two Roman soldiers, Cassius and Florentius, were martyred in 251 for their Christian beliefs.

Ludwig van Beethoven was born in Bonn; his birthplace is now a museum dedicated to his memory.

A third city within easy reach of Cologne and also on the Rhine is Düsseldorf, an economic capital of post-war West Germany famous for its classy shops and cafes, particularly along the broad double boulevard called the Königsallee. Among Düsseldorf's noteworthy churches is St. Lambertus, a Gothic thirteenth-century house of worship now designated a basilica minor.

Transport and Accommodation

The region is served by International Airport Köln/Bonn and Düsseldorf International Airport. Numerous train and bus services connect with other points in Germany and Europe. Travel on the Rhine itself is popular with many visitors.

These are "world-class" cities, offering accommodation and restaurants of all types and in all price ranges.

MUNICH and BAVARIA

The churches and shrines of Bavaria and its capital, Munich, have attracted the faithful for centuries.

Bavaria's long history is closely tied with the church. Religious communities have existed there since the time of Roman rule, and formal ecclesiastical organization dates back to the era of Charlemagne in the eighth century. During the eleventh century, three princes of the church coming from the Bavarian territories became popes: Clement II, Damasus II, and Victor II. Always a bastion of the faith, Bavaria remains predominantly Roman Catholic today.

Religious fervor was particularly high during the Counter-Reformation of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. Following the Thirty Years War (1618–1648) the region and its churches and monasteries (most of them Benedictine) drew growing numbers of pilgrims, leading to a long period of intensive church building. Despite the ravages of subsequent wars, most of these structures and shrines are with us today.

The region stretching from Munich toward Germany's borders with Switzerland, Austria, and the Czech Republic is so rich in shrines and other places of worship—many of them architectural masterpieces—that it is sometimes called the Pfaffenwinkel (Priests' Corner).

Munich (München in German, a name derived from Munichen or "home of the monks") is Germany's third-largest city and one of its most attractive; with Bavaria as a whole, it is by far the country's most popular tourist destination.

The city's churches are famous. Although Munich was heavily bombed during World War II, its damaged buildings—particularly its religious buildings—have been faithfully rebuilt with great attention to authenticity. The following are among the city's most noteworthy.

Frauenkirche (Church of Our Lady), with its towering twin onion-domed steeples, is a symbol of Munich. The late-Gothic brick structure was consecrated just over 500 years ago and the steeples added about a century later. The cathedral entombs several early rulers of Bavaria as well as its original architect, Jörg von Polling.

Asamkirche may be Munich's most famous church. An outstanding example of rococo architecture dating from about 1730, it is known formally as the Church of Saint Johannus Nepomuk but takes its popular name from its two builders, the brothers Cosmas and Egid Asam. A relatively small church, it is sandwiched neatly between residences on Sendlingerstrasse and attached to what was the Asams' home. Its interior is one of the most richly decorated rococo churches in existence. The skeleton of the saint for which it is formally named (a fourteenth-century Bohemian monk) is enshrined there in a glass case.

Sankt Michaelkirche on Neuhauserstrasse was built in the late sixteenth century, on a monumental scale, by Duke Wilhelm V and is one of Germany's largest Renaissance churches. It includes his tomb as well as those of many other Bavarian notables.

Theatinerkirche is newer, a baroque structure noted for its twin towers, dome, and elegant but subdued stuccowork and sculpture.

Dreifaltigkeitskirche (Holy Trinity) is a baroque structure with frescoes by Cosmos Asam.

Franziskanerklosterkirche Sankt Anna im Lehel is a Franciscan monastery church dating from 1737 that also shows the work of the Asam brothers.

Peterskirche, Munich's oldest parish church, was built in the early fourteenth century on the site of four earlier churches. Its tower, Alter Peter, is a downtown landmark.

Munich's other attractions are widely known. The city is a center of art, music, and commerce, famed for many sites and events, including its annual beer festival, Oktoberfest.

In the Region

Andechs, with its hilltop Benedictine monastery and pilgrim church, is one of southern Bavaria's most frequented shrines, attracting more than 600,000 pilgrims each year. Large wooden crosses, carried there over long distances by penitents, line the walls of the abbey.

The fifteenth-century pilgrim church at Andechs, which features rococo decoration added during the eighteenth century, houses religious relics said to have been brought from the Holy Land 1,000 years ago. Among them are three communion wafers, one said to bear the fingerprint of Christ.

The monks of Andechs are famous for their dark beer, brewed according to a 400-year-old recipe, and their cheese; both are served in the popular monastery tavern.

Near Andechs is Diessen, a small town with a baroque abbey-church known for its impressive gilt and marble altar.

Oberammergau, about 50 miles from Munich, is famous for its Passion play, a portrayal in 16 acts of the final days of Christ's life, from the Last Supper to the Crucifixion and Resurrection (see following chapter).

Between Oberammergau and Neuschwanstein (site of King Ludwig II's most famous castle), near the villages of Rottenbuch and Steingaden, is a pilgrim church considered to be the finest example of Bavarian rococo architecture. As such, it draws hundreds of secular as well as religious visitors year round. The Weiskirche (Church in a Meadow) was built by Dominicus Zimmermann in the mid-1700s near a place where a local woman saw tears streaming down the face of a picture of Jesus in 1739.

About 45 miles east of Munich, roughly on the route to Salzburg, is another famous shrine: The Chapel of Mercy in the village of Altötting houses a thirteenth-century statue of the Blessed Virgin to which numerous miraculous cures are credited.

Devotion at Altötting followed two miracles. In 1489, a three-year-old boy apparently drowned in a nearby river; his mother carried his body to the chapel and prayed fervently for his life, and the child opened his eyes and recovered. The second miracle involved a six-year-old who fell under the wheels of a heavily laden wagon; this child, too, was rushed to the chapel and was spared.

Our Lady of Altötting draws at least 500,000 pilgrims a year, and thousands of votive offerings at the chapel indicate the success of pilgrims' petitions. In recent years, the pilgrims have included Pope John Paul II.

The chapel, which dates to the ninth century, also houses a number of silver urns containing the hearts of a long line of monarchs of the Kingdom of Bavaria: the Wittelsbachs, who ruled for more than 700 years (1180–1918). There also is the Golden Horse, a noted piece of French Gothic workmanship dating from about 1400.

Another attraction for pilgrims within reach of Munich is Benediktbeueren, whose monastery has been there for 1,200 years. Double "onion" domes crown its baroque church, the interior of which features the work of several noted eighteenth-century German masters.

Transport and Accommodation

Munich is one of Europe's most popular cities and is easily reached by air from the United States, or by air, train, or road from most European locations. Bavaria similarly is well served by road and rail.

Accommodation in the city and in Bavaria as a whole is abundant and varied, and restaurants of many types and all classes are plentiful.

OBERAMMERGAU

For nearly four centuries, the story of Christ's Passion has been elaborately told in the famed Passion Play staged in the village of Oberammergau in the Bavarian Alps.

In 1632, amid the chaos of the Thirty Years War, Bubonic plague—the Black Death—was raging across Europe. Swedish troops were laying waste to the Bavarian countryside, and the contagion came with them. It reached Oberammergau, and over the following year it took the lives of about 10 percent of the village's population.

Terrified, the devoutly Catholic people of Oberammergau vowed that if their village could be spared further deaths they would sacrifice a year every decade to stage a Passion play, re-enacting the final days of Christ. They made the promise not only for themselves but for their descendants, both as a plea for deliverance and as a penance.

On Whitsunday in 1634, the Passion play was performed for the first time in the cemetery next to parish church. Tradition is that there were no further deaths; Oberammergau was spared.

Ever since, the play has been performed in nearly every year ending in zero apart from three—1870, 1920, and 1940—when it was interrupted by war.

An outdoor auditorium seating nearly 5,000 was built in 1930 to stage the play and has recently undergone a thorough renovation. Its stage, 148 feet across and 98 feet deep, is the world's largest.

In 2000, the play was presented five times a week between May and October and was a sell-out. Total attendance was estimated at about 500,000.

Performances start at 9 in the morning and end at 5:30 in the afternoon, with brief morning and afternoon intermissions and a three-hour break for lunch. The 16-act play begins with Jesus' triumphal entry into Jerusalem and chronicles the events of his last days, from the Last Supper through the Crucifixion and the Resurrection.

Originally, the players had to be natives of Oberammergau; it is still necessary to have lived there at least 20 years to be eligible. All are amateurs, leaving their usual occupations to devote themselves full time to the production for at least a year. The parish council casts the roles.

An indication of the play's importance to Oberammergau is that more than 2,000 residents—nearly half the population—are actively involved in the production, as actors on stage, as singers in the chorus, in the orchestra, or backstage.

Oberammergau, of course, didn't invent the idea of the Passion play; it was a common phenomenon of the Middle Ages. And the day-long performances at Oberammergau set no record—at the height of their popularity, in the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, Passion plays often extended over three days.

Oberammergau is also famed for its wood-carvers, whose work is featured, among other places, in the Heimatmuseum of antique carved Christmas creches. The town's eighteenth-century Church of Saints Peter and Paul includes some of the finest work of rococo architect Josef Schmmuzer, with frescoes by Matthäus Günther. Many houses are also elaborately frescoed.

In years when the Passion play doesn't consume it, Oberammergau is a typically scenic and charming Bavarian alpine village and is within easy reach of northern European capitals as well as such well-known tourist destinations as Innsbruck, Garmisch-Partenkirchen, and Zugspitze (Germany's highest mountain). Among attractions near the village are Ettal with its Benedictine monastery, and Schloss Linderhof, the castle of King Ludwig II.

Bavaria as a whole is of considerable interest in religious history and is rich in its churches, monasteries, and shrines (see preceding chapter). In the eleventh century, it produced three popes.

Transport and Accommodation

Oberammergau is easily reached via Munich, and the region as a whole has excellent road and rail connections. Accommodation in Bavaria is plentiful and varied, and restaurants of all classes are easily found. It is important to remember, however, that the village of Oberammergau is crowded to overflowing during Passion play years.

ECHTERNACH

Each year, on Whit-Tuesday, thousands of pilgrims gather in the town of Echternach in Luxembourg to take part in the Springprozession, a curious dancing procession that honors Saint Willibrord, monk and missionary.

It is an ancient ritual and its origins are not known with certainty. The Springprozession was well established by the Middle Ages, but some scholars believe it dates back to Willibrord's own time in the late seventh and early eighth centuries.

The ritual begins at 9 a.m. with a sermon preached in the open air at an ancient cross near the river Sûre. The throngs of pilgrims, led by the clergy and other religious, then set out through the streets of the town for the basilica.

They go four or five abreast, holding hands, linking arms, or holding either end of a white scarf. Accompanied by groups of musicians playing a song that is as old as the procession itself, they bounce from foot to foot chanting "Holy Willibrord, founder of churches, light of the blind, destroyer of idols, pray for us!"

The form of the dance has not always been the same. At one time, the dancers would repeatedly stop and fall to their knees at the striking of a bell, then start out again. In the late 1700s, they performed their steps backward and slightly on the oblique. In more recent times, the dance has involved three bouncing steps forward and two back. And now there is a movement toward an all-steps-forward version (with occasional bouncing from side to side) to accommodate the growing number of participants; although the route is only about a mile long, the procession can take several hours.

When the participants arrive at the basilica, the dance continues around the tomb of Saint Willibrord. Prayers are recited, and the ceremony concludes with Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament.

The most popular legend is that the procession developed in the fourteenth century as an attempt to ward off plagues, such as the Black Death and Saint Vitus' Dance, that swept Europe during the Middle Ages. By imitating the symptoms of these ailments while seeking Saint Willibrord's intercession, it was thought, the dancers might be spared.

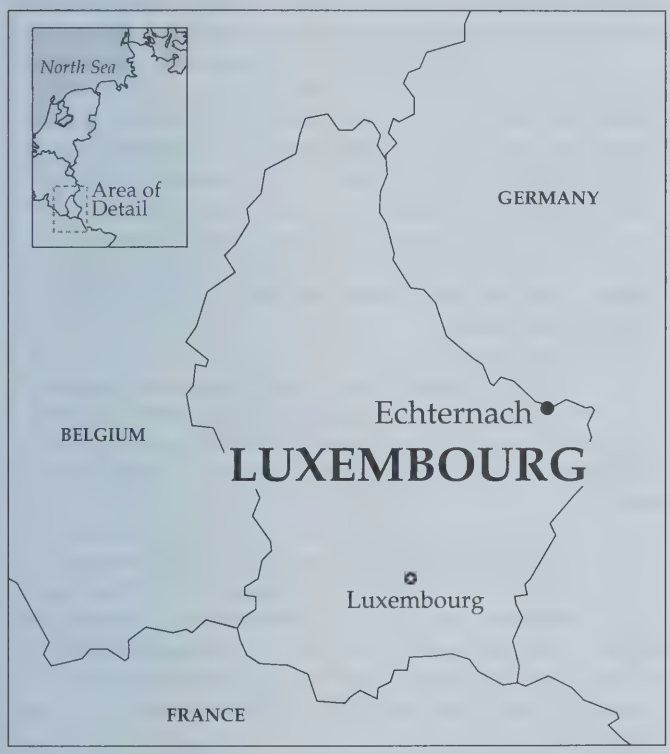
In more recent times the procession has been undertaken by the faithful as an act of penance or expiation, but it is still seen by many as a protection against nervous diseases, particularly epilepsy.

It is known to have taken place each year virtually without interruption from the mid-1300s until 1777, when its music and dancing were forbidden by the archbishop of Trier. In 1786 Holy Roman Emperor



Joseph II abolished it altogether, and then came the upheavals of the French Revolution. But it wasn't long before the procession began to be an annual ceremony once again; it was reinstated in 1802 and has continued ever since.

Saint Willibrord, of course, is known for much more than being the inspiration for the pringprozession. He was born in Northumbria in northern England in 658 and at the age of seven was placed in a monastery at Ripon in Yorkshire. When he was 20 he went to Rathmelsigi in Ireland where he became the disciple of Egbert of Iona. He was ordained as a Benedictine in 688, and the following year Egbert sent him with 11 others as missionaries to Frisia in what is now the Netherlands.

This proved a difficult and dangerous task. Willibrord established a mission at Wiltaburg and then one at Utrecht, but things went poorly until he went to Rome and obtained specific authorization for his mission from Pope Sergius I. During a subsequent trip to Rome, in 695, he was consecrated Archbishop of the Frisians by Sergius I, who also gave him the Latin name Clement. He returned to Utrecht, established his cathedral there, and in 698 founded the abbey of Echternach.

There were setbacks, however. In 715 the former pagan king of Frisia, Radbod, regained power, destroyed churches and replaced them with temples and shrines to pagan idols, and killed many of the Christian missionaries. Willibrord was forced to flee, but after Radbod's death four years later he returned and worked successfully to re-establish his mission.

Willibrord retired to the Benedictine abbey he had founded at Echternach. He died there in 739 at the age of 81 and was almost immediately honored as a saint. Canonized as Saint Willibrord of Utrecht, Apostle of the Frisians, he is distinguished as the first of a succession of Anglo-Saxon missionaries to northern Europe who were instrumental in introducing Christianity there in the face of considerable hostility and hardship. He is patron saint of the Netherlands, and of epileptics. His feast day is November 7, the date of his death.

The Town

Echternach, a town of about 4,000, is one of Luxembourg's most popular tourist centers. Willibrord's abbey became famous throughout the western world during the eleventh century for its school of copyists, which produced a number of illuminated masterpieces including the Golden Gospel Books. Examples can be seen in a museum in the abbey.

Saint Willibrord's relics are now entombed in the basilica (the abbey church), which was restored in the mid-nineteenth century, then almost completely rebuilt after being heavily damaged in World War II when Echternach was caught up in the Battle of the Bulge.

On a hill near the abbey is the Church of Saints Peter and Paul, built on the ruins of a large Roman villa. Each spring, the two churches host the world-famous Echternach Festival of Classical Music.

In the Region

The Grand Duchy of Luxembourg is a tiny country—at just under 1,000 square miles, it is smaller than Rhode Island. The object of political squabbles for hundreds of years, it became independent in 1839. It borders on Belgium, France, and Germany and in recent years has become increasingly prosperous as a banking center for the European Union.

Echternach is less than an hour's drive from the capital, Luxembourg City, a scenic and compact city of about 80,000 that can be easily explored on foot.

Of particular interest are the remains of Luxembourg City's ancient fortifications. As far back as Roman times, the city was a fortress. As recently as World War II, soldiers fought and died on ground that had seen many battles over previous generations. One such site is the Citadelle du Saint-Esprit (Citadel of the Holy Spirit), built in the seventeenth century on the remains of a monastery.

The Cathédral Notre-Dame is the city's religious center. A miraculous image—Our Lady, Comfort of the Afflicted (patron of both the city and the grand duchy)—has drawn pilgrims for more than three centuries. Also in the cathedral is the tomb of John the Blind, the revered fourteenth-century king of Bohemia and Count of Luxembourg.

The Chapelle de Saint-Quirin is built into a cliff face and is believed to have been cut from the rock by the Celts. It has housed a chapel since the fourth century, but the present structure was built in 1355 and has been renovated numerous times since.

Transport and Accommodation

Reaching Luxembourg by air from the United States usually involves flying first to Frankfurt, London, Paris, or Amsterdam, from which there are direct and relatively quick connections with Luxembourg City's Findel Airport. There are also good rail and road connections from major European centers.

Hotels and restaurants are plentiful in Luxembourg City and in and near Echternach, but can be busy during holidays, festivals, and spring and summer weekends.

BEAURAING AND BANNEUX

Between late November 1932 and early March 1933, the Blessed Virgin appeared to children in two Belgian villages, Beauraing and Banneux.

Both villages are in the Ardennes, only about 55 miles apart, and the second series of apparitions occurred shortly after the first ended.

In 1949 these became the last two cases of Marian apparitions to receive the full approval of the Vatican; several more-recent apparitions in various parts of the world have the approval of local bishops, but not of Rome.

In the nearly seven decades since the apparitions, both Beauraing and Banneux have drawn countless pilgrims, among them Pope John Paul II.

Beauraing

Beauraing is an out-of-the-way village only a few miles from the French border. On the early evening of a cold November 29, 1932, Fernande Voisin, 15, and her brother Albert, 11, walked to meet their sister Gilberte, 13, who was studying late at her convent school. On their way, they were joined by two friends, Andrée Degeimbre, 14, and her nine-year-old sister Gilberte.

When they reached the school, they made the sign of the cross as they passed a small Lourdes grotto in the convent garden near a stone railway overpass. Albert rang the school doorbell, then turned to see a woman apparently walking in the air above the railway bridge, her feet in a small cloud. "Look!" he exclaimed, "a lady in white is walking in the air!"

The three others laughed but looked—and saw the same thing. Then Gilberte Voisin came out of the school, accompanied by the sister doorkeeper; Gilberte saw the vision, but the sister didn't and scolded the children. Confused and frightened, they ran away.

At home, thinking they may have seen the Blessed Virgin, all five told their story but were accused of making it up. When they returned to the school the next evening, they saw the vision again, but again they faced disbelief and anger at home. On the third day, Mrs. Degeimbre, a widow, went along with the children, accompanied by her eldest daughter, Jeanne, 18, and several male relatives. They were determined to find out who was playing pranks and frightening the children.

When they got there, the children saw the vision again—this time closer, near a hawthorn tree—but no one else did. By now, the children were sure it was the Virgin. She was dressed in white, wearing a long veil, and bright rays of light formed a crown around her head.

Mrs. Degeimbre and Mrs. Voisin went to the local dean, who advised them to keep silent. But the children, excited, had told their friends, and the school and village were soon buzzing with the news. Alarmed, the school's mother superior forbade any talk of the visions on the school grounds and severely lectured the two eldest children, Fernande Voisin and Andrée Degeimbre.

The apparitions continued. The children, no longer afraid, spoke with the Virgin and were surprised that no one else saw or heard her.

By December 8, the crowds accompanying the children had grown huge. Contemporary photographs show streets thronged from side to side. The Virgin appeared, and the children were transfixed as they gazed at a vision no one else could see.

During the vision, doctors checked the children's pulses, shined lights into their eyes, and pinched and pricked them. None showed any reaction.

The visions went on. By January 3, the crowd had swollen to between 25,000 and 30,000 people. After that day's apparitions, the children were questioned individually by a panel of scores of doctors. Their stories remained consistent.

It was to be the last of 33 apparitions. The Virgin's messages to the children that day included "I am the Mother of God, the Queen of Heaven," "I will convert sinners," "Pray always," and "Do you love my son? Do you love me? Then sacrifice yourself for me."

In 1933 more than two million pilgrims journeyed to Beauraing. A chapel was built at the site of the apparitions and other facilities—including a retreat house and a Marian museum—have been built in the intervening years as pilgrims have come to Beauraing from around the world. Special international pilgrimages take place each year on August 21 and 22.

Banneux

Less than two weeks after the apparitions at Beauraing ended, those at Banneux began. There, the Virgin appeared eight times to 11-year-old Mariette Beco.

Mariette's visions began on the early evening of January 15. As she was watching from the kitchen window for her brother's arrival, she saw a radiant figure standing near the family's vegetable garden. It was a woman dressed in white and holding a rosary in her hand.

Mariette began to pray, and the woman beckoned to her. Mariette told her mother, who—not knowing what might be outside—told her to stay in the house and locked the door. When Mariette returned to the window, the woman was gone.

Mariette thought of little else, and three days later she went into the backyard, knelt, and prayed that the radiant woman would return. Her prayers were answered; the vision appeared in the distant sky and slowly moved closer until she was standing before Mariette. She beckoned Mariette to a nearby spring, where she spoke: "Plunge your hands into the water." As Mariette did so, the woman said, "This spring is reserved for me." During the next apparition, the woman told Mariette who she was ("I am the Virgin of the Poor") and explained that the spring was "reserved for all nations, for the sick." She also said she wanted a small chapel to be built at the site.

The apparitions continued. During the last of them, on March 2, the Virgin told Mariette "I am the mother of the Savior, Mother of God" and urged her to "pray hard."

Word spread, and the Becos' backyard became a place where scores of people came in hope of receiving the Virgin's blessing. Over the years many miracles have been attributed to the water from the spring, and today thousands come to Banneux to be healed and uplifted spiritually. A hospital at the shrine, built in 1993, houses nearly 250 patients.

Pilgrimages to Banneux start on May 1 each year, and a major international pilgrimage takes place on the Feast of the Assumption on August 15.

In the Region

The wooded hills, farms, and ancient towns and cities of the Ardennes are popular with tourists from neighboring France, Germany, and the Netherlands, as well as from across Europe and beyond. The region is close to Cologne, Bavaria, and Luxembourg (see preceding chapters), all of which are rich in shrines as well as scenic and secular attractions.

Chief among the major cities of the region is Liège in the Meuse valley, which goes back to the tenth century and was once an independent principality. The city is known for its churches. The Romanesque Eglise Saint-Barthélemy holds a masterpiece of Art Mosan, a baptismal font dating from the early twelfth century, and the Cathédral Saint-Paul has in its treasury a reliquary presented to the city by Charles the Bold in 1471. Among other churches worth visiting in Liège is the Eglise Saint-John, a heavily restored octagonal church dating from the tenth century that holds a noteworthy carving of the Virgin and Child from the early thirteenth century.

Other often-visited towns in the immediate region include Huy, Saint-Severin, Spa (the original spa, frequented by the Romans and later by royalty and the wealthy from across Europe), Dinant, and Namur, where the Institute of the Sisters of Our Lady houses the Trésor Hugo d'Oignies with its rich collection of religious objects made by Brother Hugo early in the thirteenth century.

Over the centuries the Ardennes has seen much warfare, particularly in World Wars I and II. Many who fell in those wars remain there, in the Cimitière Americain des Ardennes at Neuville-en-Condroz, where more than 5,000 U.S. soldiers are interred, and the Cimitière de Henri-Chapelle near Herve, where nearly 8,000 soldiers who fell in the Battle of the Bulge are buried.

Transport and Accommodation

The best way to see the region, particularly its smaller towns—such as Beauraing and Banneux—is by car. Train connections are good between Brussels and Liège (a journey of about an hour) and from there to other major destinations in the Ardennes.

The region is rich in restaurants and inns, and accommodation is plentiful.

CANTERBURY

The city of Canterbury in southeastern England has long been venerated as a holy place. It was the spot at which Christianity took root in England, but its huge popularity as a shrine came six centuries later at the time of Thomas Becket—archbishop, martyr, and saint.

The pilgrims of Chaucer's fourteenth-century Canterbury Tales were making a journey that was by then enormously popular throughout the British Isles and Europe. Other English shrines—among them Walsingham, Winchester, and Glastonbury—also drew worshippers, but not in the same vast numbers.

Canterbury's religious importance dates back to the year 597, when Pope Gregory I sent the monk Augustine (later to be Saint Augustine of Canterbury) from Rome with a group of monks to evangelize the Anglo-Saxons. When Augustine landed at Ebbsfleet in 597, the king, Ethelbert of Kent, gave him permission to preach, as well as a house and an old church in Canterbury. Although Augustine died only seven years after his arrival, the apostolate soon spread.

Thus, Canterbury had become of prime importance as the seat of the Roman Catholic Church in England by the time Thomas Becket was appointed its archbishop in 1162 by the young King Henry II. The two were bound by a strong mutual affection, and in 1154 Henry had made Becket lord chancellor. Becket resisted appointment as archbishop, but he was required to accept; the king wanted an agent and ally in his growing campaign to have a submissive church and thus more complete control of his kingdom.

Within a few years, Becket and Henry were seriously at odds, with Becket refusing to cooperate with the king's insistence upon supremacy. The differences between the two deepened, and Becket was forced into exile. He and the king reached sufficient agreement for Becket to return to Canterbury in 1170, but he was to die for his beliefs before the end of the year.

In late December, the exasperated king spoke the words that led to Becket's death: "Will no one rid me of this low-born cleric?" The comment was heard by four knights loyal to Henry and opposed to the archbishop. The four went to Canterbury and forced their way into the cathedral, where Becket was waiting for them. He was slain on the spot.

Becket's martyrdom was quickly followed by reports of miraculous cures through his intervention, and within a little more than two years he was canonized.

The murder of Becket caused such outrage that Henry had to give up his attempts to subjugate the church, and soon after Becket's canonization the king was forced to do penance for the murder, in the form of a flogging at the slain archbishop's coffin.

Not long afterward, the cathedral was destroyed by fire and a new and considerably grander one built to house the Shrine of Saint Thomas, financed by a growing pilgrimage trade.

Veneration grew steadily for three centuries, until King Henry VIII's quarrels with the Vatican led to formation of the Church of England with him at its head. He plundered and destroyed the shrine and secretly disposed of the relics of Saint Thomas, denouncing him as a traitor.

Today, the place in the cathedral that the shrine had occupied is marked by a single candle and an inscribed stone. Pope John Paul II and the Archbishop of Canterbury have knelt there together in prayer.

Transport

Canterbury is an easy trip of about two hours from London by road or rail. For international travelers, Gatwick Airport is considerably closer to the region than London's Heathrow.

In the Region

The city of Canterbury, in the Kent countryside on the River Stour, offers abundant historic treasures. The Romans originally landed in the area and stayed in England for four centuries; the Saxons followed and ruled until they were defeated by William the Conqueror at a battle near Hastings in 1066.

The cathedral, the first of England's great Norman cathedrals, was built during the twelfth through fourteenth centuries in the English Late Gothic style and is dominated on the exterior by the central tower, Bell Harry. The crypt is the largest and one of the finest in England. Next to the cathedral are two monastery buildings dating from the twelfth century. A series of thirteenth-century stained-glass windows illustrate Becket's miracles.

Several other churches are notable, among them the eleventh-century Saint Dunstan's (restored in the nineteenth century); Saint George's, where the writer Christopher Marlowe was baptized in 1564; Saint Martin's, a small church thought to be the oldest Christian church in England; and Saint Mildred's and Saint Peter's, both built in the thirteenth century.

At nearby Barfreston (five miles southeast) is the church of Saint Nicholas, a Norman village church with noteworthy twelfth-century carvings.

Chilham, between Canterbury and Wye, offers medieval jousting displays on summer holidays.

Canterbury is a good starting point from which to explore the English Channel coast, and nearby coastal towns of note include Sandwich, Margate, Broadstairs, Ramsgate, and Deal.

Hastings is another coastal town not far away, but the scene of the famous Battle of Hastings is a place some miles from it, called Battle. Its attractions include what remains of Battle Abbey, founded by the victorious William the Conqueror and positioned astride the actual field of combat. The abbey's gatehouse stands in the marketplace of the town that grew up around it.

WALSINGHAM

The shrine of Walsingham in the small town of Little Walsingham in Norfolk was once England's second most frequented place of pilgrimage. At its peak during the Middle Ages, it drew the faithful from all corners of the British Isles and from the Continent. Only Canterbury was more popular.

The Reformation led to destruction of Walsingham's religious buildings and virtually erased the town from the ecclesiastical map in the 1500s, but a rekindling of interest in the shrine in recent times is attracting pilgrims in ever-increasing numbers.

The event that led to Walsingham becoming a major shrine occurred about 1100 when Richelde de Fervaques, the wife of a local magnate, dreamed that she had been transported to the house in Nazareth where the Virgin Mary received the Annunciation of Christ's birth. She was told to build a replica of the Holy House in Walsingham, and she did so. But soon afterward, according to the legend, the wooden structure was moved about 200 feet by mysterious forces.

Word spread, and pilgrims began to arrive. In 1153, an Augustinian priory was established at the site by Richelde de Fervaques's son, Geoffrey, and the shrine steadily increased in popularity. King Henry III (1216–1272) frequently made the pilgrimage, as did his son Edward I (1272–1307), who had a great veneration for a statue of the Blessed Virgin there. They were the first of a succession of monarchs to show devotion to the shrine, and this royal interest redoubled Walsingham's fame and its fortunes.

In the fourteenth century, the shrine's church and priory were rebuilt and the Franciscans established a friary nearby. By some accounts, Walsingham actually surpassed Canterbury as a place of pilgrimage in the early sixteenth century.

Then came Henry VIII—who had made the pilgrimage to Walsingham himself, with his first wife, Catherine of Aragon—and the Reformation. Five years after Henry's separation of the English church from Rome, the shrine was despoiled of its wealth. Because of their roles in a conspiracy against Henry, Prior George Gysburghe and Sub-Prior Nicholas Mileham were executed. The statue of the Virgin was taken to London, where it was burned.

Today, only remnants of the priory and its church survive. The most impressive section of the ruins is the church's large east window, dating from the fourteenth century. Some remains of the refectory wall are all that survives of the priory.

Efforts to revive the pilgrimage began about a century ago, and two churches were established for this purpose. An Anglican church was built in 1931 and enlarged in 1938, while about two miles away Catholics installed and consecrated the Slipper Chapel in a fourteenth-century building (it takes its name from the pilgrims' ancient custom of removing their footwear a mile or so before reaching the shrine).

Transport and Accommodation

Walsingham is, and has always been, a small town. The Dutch scholar Erasmus visited the shrine in 1511 and wrote that it was "a town maintained by scarcely anything else but the number of its visitors." To a large extent, this is still true.

The town, near the North Sea coast, is a three- to four-hour drive from London. The nearest city, Norwich, is about two and a half hours from London by rail.

The region, however, offers ample accommodation ranging from hotels in major towns to bed-and-breakfast establishments in all price ranges.

In the Region

Norfolk and the bordering counties of Suffolk and Cambridgeshire are rich in historical importance and offer numerous sites of religious and secular interest. Few regions of England have a similar wealth of impressive churches and half-timbered buildings.

Norwich, founded by the Saxons, is known for its cathedral and its castle. The cathedral was begun in 1096 by Herbert de Losinga, who had come from Normandy in 1091 to be its first bishop and is entombed there. The cathedral is enclosed by high walls, and only its lofty spire is visible from a distance. The city also has more than 30 well-preserved churches dating from before the Reformation. The castle, like the cathedral, was begun by the Normans not long after the Conquest. It now houses a museum.

Bury St. Edmunds owes its name to the martyrdom of Edmund, the last king of the Anglo-Saxon kingdom of East Anglia. Edmund was murdered by the pagan Danes in 896 and was canonized. His shrine attracted numerous pilgrims, and eventually a town grew around it. In the eleventh century a Norman abbey marked the town's considerable status as a religious center; its ruins are now the site of the Abbey Botanical Gardens. Two of the original churches inside the abbey walls survive, both dating from the fifteenth century.

Cambridge, best known for its university dating from the early thirteenth century, blends medieval with later Tudor, Jacobean, and Georgian buildings. The university dominates the town and offers its major attractions for visitors, among them King's College Chapel—Perpendicular Gothic in style and regarded as one of the most beautiful buildings in England. The town, a crossing point on the River Cam, has been inhabited since prehistoric times.

Ely, about 15 miles north of Cambridge, is dominated by its cathedral, which can be seen for miles. Begun by the Normans in 1081, it was built on the site of a Benedictine monastery that dated to the sixth century and is considered a prime example of medieval architecture.

GLASTONBURY

Few places are as steeped in legend as the town of Glastonbury in England's West Country. A renowned place of pilgrimage, it once had England's largest and wealthiest monastery—now one of Europe's most famous ruins.

Glastonbury's origins are obscure, and the myths surrounding it are numerous and tangled. By some accounts, it was the first Christian settlement in England, founded by Joseph of Arimathea in the first century. It is said that Joseph brought to Glastonbury the Holy Grail—the chalice used by Christ at the Last Supper—and that it remains hidden there.

King Arthur and his queen, Guinevere, are said to be buried in the town, along with Saint Patrick the Younger and Saint Brigid of Ireland.

What is known with certainty is that Celtic monks were at Glastonbury from at least the fifth century and that Benedictine rule was instituted there in the eighth century. Saint Dunstan was made abbot in 940, and Glastonbury became the center of the great monastic revival; from there, missionaries spread Benedictine life throughout England and Scandinavia.

By the time of the Conquest (1066), Glastonbury had become a seat of considerable wealth and influence; as a measure of its importance, three Saxon kings had been buried there.

In 1184 the monastery complex was destroyed by fire, but this event spurred its heyday as a place of pilgrimage. Monks at Glastonbury spread the word that they had found the tombs of Joseph of Arimathea and King Arthur, and the resulting deluge of pilgrims brought enough wealth to enable construction of England's largest monastery of the time, completed in 1303. Glastonbury Abbey became known for its emphasis on intellectual development, its huge library, and its promotion of scientific farming.

The monastery thrived until the Reformation of the sixteenth century. Its last abbot, Richard Whiting, acquiesced to the gradual assumption of control of the English church by Henry VIII, but he made the error of holding back some of the abbey's material wealth. In 1539, Henry dissolved and plundered the abbey and executed the elderly Whiting, whose head was impaled on a spike on the abbey gate and his body quartered and sent to Bath, Wells, Ilchester, and Bridgwater as an example to others.

Glastonbury is among England's most popular attractions for tourists and pilgrims of every type.

The buildings of Glastonbury Abbey quickly fell into ruin after the mid-sixteenth century, and much of the stone was hauled away and used for construction of countless other buildings in the vicinity. What remains of the abbey are parts of several walls, arches, portals, and pillars. Portions of the Chapel of the Virgin remain, but the only virtually undamaged building of the complex is the fourteenth-century abbot's kitchen, which is among the best-preserved medieval kitchens in Europe.

The town is built around Glastonbury Tor, a grassy hill more than 500 feet high and topped by a single stone tower, all that remains of the Church of Saint Michael. The hill offers panoramic views of the town and the surrounding countryside; Arthurian legend holds that the king and his Knights of the Round Table are buried somewhere within it and that the chalice is hidden in a deep well at its foot.

Also in Glastonbury is the Lake Village Museum, in a fifteenth-century house, which has remains of an Iron Age settlement on the site. There is also the Somerset Rural Life Museum, housed in a fourteenth-century tithe barn built to store the one-tenth of the town's total harvest that was owed to the church.

Wells, England's smallest cathedral city, is only about five miles from Glastonbury. Wells's medieval character is largely intact. Its twelfth-century Cathedral Church of Saint Andrew, considered a masterpiece of Gothic architecture, rises behind the high walls of the moated Bishop's Palace, the earliest parts of which date to about 1235.

The towns of Somerset have some of England's most impressive church buildings, notable among which are the parish church of Saint Cuthbert in Wells and the church of Saint Mary Magdalene in Taunton.

The region is a good starting point for an exploration of the West Country, which offers some of Britain's most noteworthy scenery and buildings.

Transport and Accommodation

England's West Country (the counties of Somerset, Devon, and Cornwall) is an easy drive of about three hours from London, and its major towns are reachable by regular rail and bus service.

Accommodation is relatively plentiful, from hotels of various classes in urbanized areas to country inns and bed-and-breakfast establishments.

KNOCK

Until the night of August 21, 1879, the town of Knock in County Mayo, Ireland, was simply a quiet backwater. That night, 14 people saw an apparition of the Blessed Virgin, Saint Joseph, and Saint John on an outer wall of the parish church, and the town was changed forever.

As the 14 beheld the vision they were drenched by a heavy rain, but the immediate area where the apparition appeared remained dry. The Virgin, they said, was dressed in a white cloak and wore a golden crown.

The witnesses were devout Christians, and the apparition became a matter of deep belief locally and, over the next few years, throughout the region. The local archbishop, John McHale, convened a commission of enquiry; it found that found the apparition had been genuine.

The small parish church soon became a place of pilgrimage, initially from neighboring towns and villages, then from across Ireland and beyond.

It was largely through the work some decades later of a parish priest, John Horan, that Knock became known internationally. His efforts have led to a level of pilgrimage that has transformed the town into "the Lourdes of Ireland." A huge basilica, dedicated to Our Lady of Knock, opened in 1976 and holds 20,000 worshippers. Its construction involved contributions of every kind from every county of Ireland, including 32 pillars in the basilica's circular ambulatory representing the counties. The wall of the old church that was the site of the apparition has been enclosed in glass and is the object of constant veneration.

There are many reported visions of the Blessed Virgin—more than 200 since the early nineteenth century—and church authorities are careful about approv ing devotion at the places where they occur. Knock is one of fewer than a dozen to have received canonical sanction since 1842.

As is the case at several other well-frequented Marian shrines, there also has been considerable commercial development. The once-quiet village now has scores of parking lots, souvenir shops, chapels, and other businesses and religious facilities that cater to the more than one million pilgrims who visit Knock each year.

Soon after the basilica rose, a major airport with runways capable of handling jumbo jets was built not far from the town in a controversial project strongly backed by the same Father Horan. The facility opened in 1986, inaugurated with the outward-bound flights of two planeloads of pilgrims to Rome.

In the Region

Ireland is a favored tourist destination, and Knock is just one of its many attractions of religious significance.

County Mayo alone has numerous holy places. Among them are Cong, on Lough Corrib, which has an ancient abbey, founded in the seventh century and favored by a succession of Irish kings. While much of the abbey was rebuilt in the twelfth century, portions of the original structure remain. Ashford Castle in Cong is now a luxury hotel.

Ballintubber is the site of Ballintubber Abbey, founded in the early thirteenth century by Cathal O'Connor (Cathal of the Wine Red Hand), king of Connacht, and known as "The Abbey that Refused to Die." Mass has been said there continuously for nearly eight centuries, although the abbey was suppressed in the early days of the Reformation and attacked and burned by Cromwellian soldiers in 1653.

Some 20 miles from Ballintubber is Croagh Patrick, the mountain where Saint Patrick is said to have spent 40 days and nights in prayer and fasting in the year 441. Many pilgrims climb the mountain, some with bare feet, to reach a chapel at its summit and the broad vista of Clew Bay more than 2,500 feet below. The mountain is known to have drawn religious pilgrims even before the Christian era, particularly on the day of Crom Dubh, an ancient Celtic mythic figure.

The islands of Clare, Caher, and Achill are just off the coast west of Croagh Patrick. Caher, now uninhabited, features early monastic settlements; a small, roofless church is surrounded by a dozen stone crosses each at least a thousand years old. On Clare are the Holy Well at Toberfelabride and a fifteenth-century abbey. Achill, the largest and most frequented of the islands, is connected to the mainland by bridge; the others are reachable by boat.

The Connemara region lies not far from Knock in the western part of County Galway and is a scenic mountain area dotted with ancient monuments, tombs, and castles favored by Irish as well as international tourists.

Pilgrims are drawn to other sites associated with Saint Patrick, Ireland's patron saint, and there are many of them—including quite a few that scholars believe have no real connection with him. There is much speculation about details of Saint Patrick's life, including the precise years of his birth and death (generally thought to be 389 and 461), and much written about him is based on legend.

For example, question surrounds Station Island in Lough Derg, known as Saint Patrick's Purgatory. Thousands of pilgrims make their way there each summer, between Whitsunday and the Feast of the Assumption. They stay for three days, doing without sleep and without food (apart from plain tea and toast) and walking barefoot over stony ground to pray at a series of small shrines. But while the island has been attracting such devout pilgrims for at least 700 years, church scholars say the place probably has no direct connection with the saint.

Similarly, Saint Patrick is said to be buried in the churchyard of an eighteenth-century cathedral in Downpatrick, Northern Ireland. While the cathedral is believed to be on the site of a monastery Patrick built, and in fact is on the site of a number of earlier churches, many hold that it is more likely his resting place is in another Northern Ireland city, Armagh. More can be learned about these and other matters at Downpatrick's Saint Patrick Heritage Museum, near the cathedral.

International visitors will usually include the capital, Dublin, in any trip to the Irish Republic. Dublin's history goes back more than 15 centuries, and its for tunes have varied widely. It was occupied by the Vikings in the ninth century, taken by the Anglo-Normans in the twelfth, developed as a major trading center during the Middle Ages, was sacked by Oliver Cromwell in the seventeenth century, recovered and grew in size and importance in the eighteenth, declined sharply in the first half of the nineteenth, then saw a new period of expansion in the Victorian era. Today it is a major center of the arts and commerce.

Among Dublin's many sites of religious interest are the Carmelite Church, which contains the remains of Saint Valentine, patron saint of lovers—a gift from Pope Gregory XVI in the early nineteenth century; the Church of Saint Francis Xavier, built in 1829, the year of Catholic Emancipation; the Church of the Holy Trinity on the grounds of Dublin Castle; and the imposing Pro-Cathedral, built in the early nineteenth century and used for important state funerals.

Traveling between Dublin and Knock, many pilgrims make a stop at Clonmacnoise in County Offaly, the site of a monastic settlement founded about 548 by Saint Ciaran that is among Ireland's most noted holy places. A major pilgrimage is held on September 12, the Feast of Saint Ciaran. Clonmacnoise's cathedral dates from the early tenth century. Another common stop on the route is Maynooth, home to Saint Patrick's College, the training center for Ireland's Catholic diocese.

Transport and Accommodation

Regular flights from major U.S. airports connect with Dublin, and within Ireland there are connections by air from Dublin to Knock. Bus and rail services are also plentiful, as are organized tours.

Accommodation throughout Ireland is available at all levels, from luxury hotels to village inns and farm bed-and-breakfast establishments. Most towns offer a variety of eating places. In major centers, restaurants and pubs are plentiful and offer a wide range of cuisines and prices.

MEDJUGORJE

The small Bosnian village of Medjugorje, southwest of Sarajevo, was virtually unknown to the outside world until 1981. On June 24 of that year, a Sunday, six teenagers reported that they had encountered the Blessed Virgin on a hillside near the village. They said they had seen a beautiful woman with dark hair and blue eyes who seemed to be about 25 years old. She was dressed in gray and white, with a white veil; her feet were in a froth of clouds, and an arc of stars appeared above her head.

The teenagers—four girls and two boys—asked who she was, and she replied, "I am the Blessed Virgin Mary."

The apparitions continued. Members of the group, sometimes individually and sometimes together, continued to meet with the Virgin, going into trances for as long as 40 minutes. After each apparition, they would repeat the message they had received to an ever growing crowd. Repeatedly, the Virgin asked them to claim and exercise the power of prayer.

The civil war in the former Yugoslavia slowed but by no means stopped the flow of pilgrims. At times, the fighting came perilously close to Medjugorje, but the faithful continue to arrive; up to 20 million have come from around the world to worship there.

Although the Vatican has not recognized the authenticity of the visions, Medjugorje has been transformed into a center of pilgrimage and tourism.

The six then-teenagers—Vicka, Ivan, Jakov, Ivanka, Marija, and Mirjana—continue to have visions of the Virgin. Two of the women, now married with children, have less frequent visitations; the others have essentially devoted themselves to a life as intermediaries, relaying the Virgin's "locutions."

Visitations now take place, on a regular schedule and virtually every evening, in the Apparition Room of the parish rectory near the new village Church of Saint James. The Virgin's message is received by one or more of the visionaries and passed on—translated into several languages—to the attending crowds.

The basic message is consistent: The Virgin stresses that God is present in the world and that prayer and repentance are needed to bring peace—to Bosnia and the world.

Note: As of mid-2003, a travel warning from the U.S. State Department remained in effect for Bosnia and Herzegovina. Officials at the shrine, however, said that travel to Medjugorje was safe.

Transport and Accommodation

A number of tour operators include Medjugorje as an option in a package with Rome, from which it is a relatively short trip across the Adriatic, and the State Department suggests that visitors will be safest if they participate in a group tour.

In the Region

The twin-towered Church of Saint James is the focus of the village of Medjugorje. Nearby are scores of shops selling souvenir religious articles of all descriptions. Also abundant are tour company offices, fast-food restaurants, and accommodations at various levels.

Pilgrims can often visit with one or more of the six visionaries. The place of the original apparitions, Podbrdo (Hill of the Apparitions), is near the village, and many also trek up Krizevac (Hill of the Cross) near the church, on a "path of peace" that passes 14 crosses symbolizing the Stations of the Cross; the trip up and back can take more than three hours.

Tours usually reach Medjugorje via Split, on the Adriatic, a city that has drawn travelers since ancient times. The Roman emperor Diocletian was born in nearby Salona in the mid-third century, and his seaside palace at Split is among the region's most noteworthy sights. After Diocletian's death in 313, the palace became a residence for exiled Roman emperors and their families. The vast walled complex, covering more than seven acres, forms the city's core.

Nearby is the Venetian piazza, dating from the years of rule by Venice (1420–1797).

Conditions permitting, there are frequent boat tours of the Adriatic coastal towns (among them Hvar and Brac) from Split, as well as numerous bus tours to outlying areas of scenic or historical importance.

GUADALUPE

The image of Our Lady of Guadalupe is one of the most famous in Latin America and the world, and the sanctuary in Mexico City in which it is enshrined draws an ever-increasing number of pilgrims.

According to tradition, on December 9, 1531, the Blessed Virgin appeared to an Indian named Juan Diego at Tepeyac, a hill where the Aztecs worshipped the mother of their gods. The Virgin instructed Juan Diego to have the bishop, Fray Zumárraga, build a church on the site. The priests were skeptical, but three days later the Virgin appeared to Juan Diego again. This time, she told him to pick flowers and take them to the bishop. He did so, wrapping the flowers in his cloak. When he opened the cloak before the bishop, it bore the Virgin's image.

The visionary is now Saint Juan Diego Cuauhtlatoatzin. His canonization by Pope John Paul II took place in late July 2002.

Several early accounts of the event exist, the oldest of them left by Juan González, a young canon who was an interpreter at the meeting of Juan Diego and Bishop Zumárraga (Juan Diego knew no Spanish, and the bishop didn't speak the Indian language).

By the late sixteenth century, the tradition and the image had spread to various parts of the world. Its renown grew, and in 1737 the Most Holy Mary of Guadalupe was chosen as the patroness of Mexico City. Other important cities of Mexico followed suit, and in 1746 the patronage spread to all of New Spain, which stretched at that time from central California to El Salvador and Guatemala. In 1754 Pope Benedict XIV granted a Mass and Office proper to the celebration of the feast on December 12. In 1910 Pope Pius X declared the Virgin Patroness of Latin America, and in 1935 Pope Pius XI extended the patronage to the Philippines. Official coronation of the image took place in 1895, with pontifical authority.

At least a dozen popes have expressed veneration for the holy image and its tradition. Pius XII, on the fiftieth anniversary of the coronation in 1945, stated that the Virgin of Guadalupe was the "Queen of Mexico and Empress of the Americas" and that the image had been painted "by brushes that were not of this world."

Each year on December 12, millions of pilgrims now converge on the site of Juan Diego's vision, many crawling on their knees for the last few hundred yards, seeking cures and other favors.

The first sanctuary was built there not long after the apparitions took place. In 1556, Alonzo de Montúfar, the second archbishop of Mexico and a promoter of devotion to Our Lady of Guadalupe, began erection of a second church. In 1695, the cornerstone of a third sanctuary was laid on the site, and this church was dedicated in 1709. With additions made in the late nineteenth century and again in the 1930s, it stands today as the Basilica Vieja (Old Basilica).

The number of pilgrims grew in modern times to the extent that the Basilica Vieja was no longer large enough to accommodate them, so in 1976 the Mexican government built the Basilica Nueva (New Basilica), a modern structure of controversial design that can hold 10,000 worshippers. Juan Diego's cloak is enshrined there in its own altar, and is viewed from a moving sidewalk. The Basilica Vieja now houses a museum of votive offerings and religious art from the fifteenth to the eighteenth century.

In the Region

La Villa de Guadalupe, the site of the two basilicas of the Virgin of Guadalupe, is also the place from which the Spaniards besieged the Aztec capital, Tenochtitlán, about a decade before the apparitions. A plaque near the basilicas marking the fusion of Aztec and Spanish cultures reads, in translation: "On August 13, 1521, Tlatelolco—heroically defended by Cuauhtémoc—fell to the power of Hernán Cortés. There was neither triumph nor defeat in this. It was the painful birth of the present, mixed race of Mexico."

Close on the heels of the conquering Spanish forces came the priests and monks, who—largely with enslaved Indian labor—built hundreds of churches and convents, about 50 of which remain.

Mexico City has its share of problems—pollution, poverty, and crime among them—but it is also a cosmopolitan city of about 20 million people (including tens of thousands of expatriates) and is the cultural center of Mexico. There are restaurants of virtually every type and every price and a similar abundance of accommodations.

In central Mexico City, on the Zócalo (the largest paved square in the Western Hemisphere), is the Catedral Metropolitana (Metropolitan Cathedral), the oldest and largest cathedral in Latin American, begun in 1573 and built over the next three centuries. It is noticeably lopsided when viewed from across the square, having sunk into the spongy subsoil over the decades, but a project to stabilize it was completed in recent years. The building is a combination of Neoclassical and Baroque architecture, with five altars and 15 chapels. Nearby is the small Sagrario Church (similarly tilted), dating from the 1700s.

Also on the Zócalo is the Palacio Nacional (National Palace). The original structure was built by Cortés on the site of the home of Montezuma II, the last Aztec emperor, and the present building dates from 1693, with later additions and modifications. It is now the seat of national government, and it is open to visitors.

A block north of the Palacio Nacional are the ruins of the Templo Mayor (Great Temple of the Aztecs), unearthed accidentally during construction work in 1978 and now a frequented archaeological site and museum.

La Iglesia de San Francisco, on the site of Mexico's first convent (1524), is an eighteenth-century French Gothic structure.

Museums abound in Mexico City, from those marking ancient sites and cultures to the more modern, among them the Museo de Leon Trotsky, where the Russian revolutionary lived and was assassinated in 1940 and where his ashes remain.

Mexico City also has the Plaza México (the world's largest bullring), the floating gardens of Xochimilco, and the pyramids at San Juan Teotihuacán.

Guadalajara, Mexico's second-largest city, sits on the high plain of the Sierra Madre about 150 miles inland from the Pacific. It was the center of a silver-mining region, and, by the late sixteenth century, wealth poured in. Much of the wealth went to the creation of churches, monuments, and palatial homes. Its sixteenth-century cathedral is a focal point for visitors. Guadalajara is readily accessible from Mexico City.

In southeastern Mexico, the Yucatán peninsula is increasingly popular with tourists, both those seeking beach resorts and those interested in ancient ruins. There are regular connections from Mexico City by rail and air.

The Yucatán is internationally famed for the remains of the pre-Columbian cities of the Maya. There are hundreds of sites, only a few of which have been excavated. The best known is Chichén Itzá, once a large city, which includes huge pyramids and a Mayan astronomical observatory. Uxmal is smaller and has simpler but more elegant buildings. Less well-known ruins (less frequented by tourists) are found at Kabah, Sayil, Dzibilchaltún, and Cobá.

The other face of the Yucatán is its luxury resorts. Chief among them is Cancún, now Mexico's leading tourist attraction. Cancún didn't exist until 1974; it was created on a small barrier island, the site chosen by a computer fed with such variables as "beaches" and "distance from the United States." Cancún now has more than 20,000 hotel rooms and draws more than a million visitors a year.

FINCA BETANIA

Growing numbers of the faithful are journeying to Venezuela to visit Finca Betania, a rural shrine where many say they have seen apparitions of the Blessed Virgin. Many pilgrims to Betania are able to meet with Maria Esperanza, the visionary who first saw the Virgin there in 1976.

Maria Esperanza was born in the village of San Rafael, Barrancas, Venezuela, on November 22, 1928, and began to have supernatural religious experiences in early childhood. At the age of five, she saw an apparition of Saint Theresa of the Little Flower; she told her mother that the saint appeared from the waters of the Orinoco river and gave her a rose.

As she grew older, she felt a strong desire to become a religious and lived for a time with Franciscan nuns in Merida, Venezuela. But in October 1954 she had another vision of Saint Theresa as she prayed after mass. Saint Theresa, she said, told her that her vocation would not be as a religious, but as a wife and mother. At the same time, she felt drawn to Rome, and there, while studying at the Reginia Ravasco Institute of the Daughters of the Hearts of Jesus and Mary, she met Geo Bianchini Giani, who worked for a Vatican charity. They were married in December 1956 in the Chapel of the Immaculate Conception in Saint Peter's Basilica. The couple had seven children—a boy and six girls—now all grown with children of their own.

Over the following years, Maria Esperanza reported receiving a number of messages from the Blessed Virgin, who spoke about a "holy land" in north central Venezuela that would become "a place of constant prayer and pilgrimage" for the Venezuelan people and eventually for all people. When the family returned to Venezuela, Maria Esperanza was led to the place and recognized it from the messages—an old house, a sugar and coffee plantation, and a grotto with clear running water.

Two years later, on March 25, 1976, the Feast of the Annunciation, the Virgin appeared to Maria Esperanza at Betania for the first time, telling her that she wanted to be known under the title of "Reconciler of Peoples and Nations." She continued to appear to Maria Esperanza, and exactly eight years after the first apparition she appeared to others gathered at Betania. On that occasion, about 150 people—a mixed group of children and adults that included students, psychologists, physicians, and engineers—say they saw the Virgin clearly and distinctly.

There was an immediate investigation by Monsignor Pio Bello Ricardo, bishop of the diocese of Los Teques. It culminated three and a half years later in an official approval that the apparitions at Finca Betania were authentic. "After having studied repeatedly the apparitions of the Most Holy Virgin in Betania and having begged the Lord earnestly for spiritual discernment," the monsignor wrote, "I declare that in my judgment said apparitions are authentic and have a supernatural character. I therefore approve, officially, that the site where the apparitions have occurred be considered as sacred. . ." This means, in part, that the site should be kept as a place of prayer, worship, and pilgrimage, and that liturgical acts may take place there.

In 1990 the monsignor reported that by then more than 2,000 people had seen the apparitions at Finca Betania, and that Maria Esperanza had seen them "countless times."

The Virgin's messages urge prayer, forgiveness, and reconciliation, and include warnings that "fire, war, and death" are in the future if there is not a widespread return to faith. Maria Esperanza in 1984 reported that the Virgin had told her that "My message is of faith, love and hope. More than anything, it brings reconciliation between people and nations."

The shrine is surrounded by low hills and lush tropical vegetation. A stream, the Tarma, leads to the grotto where most of the apparitions have taken place. Masses are celebrated on weekends and on most feast days, and the shrine is open to pilgrims all year.

Transport and Accommodation

Finca Betania is near the town of Cua, in the rain forest about an hour's drive south of the capital city of Caracas. Several pilgrimage tour operators offer trips to the shrine from major U.S. cities via Caracas; alternatively, travelers can make their own way to Caracas and then to the shrine by rental car.

Caracas, a cosmopolitan city with a population of four million, offers a broad choice of accommodation and dining. Hotels and restaurants nearer Finca Betania, however, are much less plentiful.

Note: In mid-2003, the U.S. State Department urged U.S. citizens to use caution when traveling to Venezuela because of an "unstable political environment and unpredictable security situation." Intending travelers are advised to check with the State Department before departure to ascertain whether the situation has changed. In the Region

Venezuela, at the northern tip of South America, has one of the highest standards of living on that continent. It boasts sandy beaches, vast plains, rain forests, mountain peaks, and the world's tallest waterfall. There are 42 national parks, some of them immense. Venezuela has only two seasons—one wet, one dry (the latter runs from December to April)—but temperatures are generally pleasant.

Its Caribbean coastline, more than 1,700 miles long, is known worldwide for its resorts big and small.

One famous destination is Margarita Island, which offers all the amenities and attractions of a top-scale Caribbean resort.

Caracas itself offers attractions of every kind. The religious pilgrim will find worthwhile visits to the Metropolitan Cathedral, completed in the late seventeenth century, and the Iglesia de San Francisco (Church of Saint Francis), famed for its 10 gilded altars and colonial-era icons.

SANTUÁRIO DEL COBRE

On a scorching January 24, 1998, Pope John Paul II placed golden crowns on Cuba's most revered icon and patron saint, the Virgin of Charity of El Cobre, and the Christ Child she holds in her arms.

The moment came at the conclusion of a four-hour mass as a 200-voice choir sang and many in an audience of more than 100,000 wept and cheered. A chant arose: "John Paul, our brother, now you are a Cuban!"

The coronation was a highlight of the pope's historic five-day visit to Cuba and took place in Santiago, site of the birthplace of the country's most important events—from the Spanish conquest of the early sixteenth century to Fidel Castro's revolution of the 1950s.

The wooden statue of the Madonna and Child, about three feet high, is a powerful symbol in Cuba not only of faith but of national unity and patriotism.

According to legend, it was found in the Bay of Nipe near Santiago in the 1600s by two fishermen, Rodrigo and Juan de Hoyos, and a 10-year-old boy. Struggling in a storm-tossed sea, the three heard a voice say, "I am the Virgin of Charity," and across the waves they saw the statue floating on a board. The Virgin—a mulatta, like the fishermen, of mixed black and white heritage—carried a mulatto baby Jesus in her left arm and held a cross in her right hand. She wore long, dangling earrings, and a yellow dress, which the fishermen said was miraculously dry. "I am the Virgin of Charity" was inscribed on the board.

The shrine in which the statue is usually kept is some 12 miles from Santiago in a modest, cream-colored church in a small mining town, Santuário del Cobre. It is by far Cuba's most sacred pilgrimage site. For more than three centuries, people have come to ask the Virgin's help in times of need, to pay homage, or to leave a tribute of gratitude.

National heroes of Cuba's struggle for independence in the 1800s prayed to the Virgin of El Cobre for victory, and later in thanks. Although Cuba has had a Marxist government for four decades, devotion at the shrine has never ceased. Castro's mother, Lina Ruz, asked the Virgin to save her son's life when he was fighting his revolution in the late 1950s, and crowds of his troops and supporters flocked there to give thanks at the end of that struggle.

Tributes left at the shrine have ranged from candles and flowers to sports trophies (including numerous signed baseballs), military medals and uniforms, letters and photographs, replicas of afflicted body parts believed to have been healed with the Virgin's help, canes and crutches, wheelchairs, even a large gallstone accompanied by a note of gratitude for its successful removal. Writer Ernest Hemingway, who lived in Cuba for years, donated his 1954 Nobel Prize for Literature to the Virgin; the medal is no longer on display there because of attempts to steal it, nor is a small figure of a guerrilla with backpack and rifle, left by Castro's mother.

Others have come to the shrine in recent decades asking the Virgin's help in bringing about yet another political change, or for help in leaving Cuba. Some of the photographs show Cubans now living in Miami.

Just before the pope's visit, a guide at the shrine told a visitor that "Without the Virgin, we Cubans are nothing. She is for all Cubans because she does not recognize political ideology. You can be a communist or even an exile in Miami and she won't care."

Travel to Cuba

Although hundreds of U.S. pilgrims went to Cuba by special arrangement during the pope's visit, travel to Cuba is made difficult (in most cases, illegal) by the continuing U.S. trade embargo. This applies even if a U.S. resident makes his or her visit via a third country, such as Mexico.

As of mid-2003, travel from the United States was basically limited to "journalists . . . regularly employed by a news-reporting organization," members of certain international organizations, U.S. government officials on official business, and "persons making a once-a-year visit to close family relatives in circumstances of humanitarian need."

SAINT JOSEPH'S ORATORY

Overlooking Montreal from the heights of the mountain for which the city is named, Saint Joseph's Oratory is an inspiring sight. The domed basilica is a magnet for throngs of pilgrims who come there to honor not only Saint Joseph but also to honor and invoke Brother André, through whose devotion the oratory came to be.

Brother André's devotion to Saint Joseph of Nazareth—the husband of the Virgin Mary and guardian of the Holy Family—was a lifelong passion, going back to his impoverished and sickly boyhood.

Brother André was born Alfred Bessette in the town of Saint-Grégoire d'Iberville, about 25 miles east of Montreal, on August 9, 1845. He was the eighth of 12 children of Isaac and Clautilde Foisy Bessette. By the time he was 12 years old, both of his parents had died—his father, a carpenter and wheelwright, in an lumbering accident in 1855 and his mother about two years later of tuberculosis. Alfred, who had been ill since birth, went to live with his mother's sister and her husband. Always weak, he tried his hand at working in a bakery and as a farmhand, tinsmith, blacksmith, and apprentice shoemaker, but largely without success. In his late teens, during the U.S. Civil War, he traveled south to Connecticut where industry was booming to supply the war effort and worked there at several mills and on farms, returning to Quebec in 1867.

Soon afterward he was introduced by his parish priest to the Holy Cross Brothers—an order of "educators in the faith," working particularly with the poor, afflicted, and oppressed. Despite his continuing ill health he was admitted in 1870 to Notre Dame Côte-des-Neiges, the combined novitiate and boys' school that the order had established on the western slope of Mount Royal. He took the name Brother André after Father André Provençal, his parish priest and mentor. In August 1872 he made his first temporary vows.

Brother André became the school's porter or doorkeeper—a post he kept for 40 years, living in a small office by the main door. Principally, he was the school's "official greeter," although his duties also involving running errands, sweeping floors, doing laundry, even giving haircuts.

He also visited the sick, both at the school and outside its walls. He sometimes anointed the ailing with oil from a lamp burning in front of a statue of Saint Joseph in the school chapel. Many got well, and soon there was talk of miracle cures. People asked him to call on ailing friends and relatives, and he became known as "Good Brother André." He volunteered to nurse during a smallpox outbreak, and the epidemic soon ended. The number of people seeking his help grew, and some cures were said to be spontaneous.

Brother André's superiors were concerned by the throngs of sick people coming to the school; they were uneasy, higher church officials were suspicious, and several in Montreal's medical community accused Brother André of quackery. Through it all, he constantly denied that he was responsible for miracles. "I do not cure," he often said. "Saint Joseph cures."

Eventually, he sought permission to build a small oratory—a place for prayer—on a hillside near the college. His request was turned down, but he was given permission to place a statute of Saint Joseph in a simple niche on the site. People who came there to pray often left alms, and by 1904 Brother André had collected about $200. Impressed, his superiors gave the go-ahead to build a small chapel.

When work began, more money came from Brother André's supporters. The resulting building was a modest wooden structure just big enough (15 by 18 feet) to hold an altar, a priest, and altar boys. Worshippers were seated in the open, on benches. Four years later—as the number of pilgrims steadily grew—the little building was replaced by one capable of holding 200 people under cover. Another expansion soon followed, and in 1910 a second-floor room and a steeple were added. The number of pilgrims grew steadily into the thousands. Brother André saw as many as 30 to 40 an hour. Many weren't cured of their ailments, merely comforted; but many others said they were cured, and dozens of crutches, canes, and other ex-voto offerings were left there. After more than 400 cures were recorded for 1916, there was another expansion—this time to a building capable of holding 1,000 people.

The present basilica was begun in 1924. Brother André, who by this time was nearly 80 years old, was determined to build a magnificent building to honor Saint Joseph. When the project stalled during the Depression years of the 1930s, he suggested that a statue of the saint be placed in the middle of the unfinished building, confident that "If he wants a roof over his head, he'll get it." Get it he did; additional money began to pour in, and construction resumed within two months.

Brother André didn't live to see the oratory as it now exists. He died January 6, 1937, at 91. At least a million mourners filed past his coffin at the oratory (then still domeless; it wasn't finished for another 30 years). He is entombed in the votive chapel there.

In 1940 the archbishop of Montreal instituted the beatification process for Brother André. In June 1978 Pope Paul VI declared him "worthy of the title Venerable," and on May 23, 1982, Pope John Paul II declared him Blessed. Many pray for his early elevation to sainthood.

The Oratory

Today's oratory was inaugurated in March 1955. One of the world's largest religious buildings, it seats 3,000 people and can accommodate another 10,000 standing. It is widely considered to be the most important shrine in honor of Saint Joseph. The oratory's outer dome (125 feet in diameter and towering more than 300 feet) is the second largest of its kind after the dome of Saint Peter's Basilica in Rome. More than two million people, the majority of them pilgrims, visit the oratory each year to pay tribute to St. Joseph (especially on March 19, his feast day) and to Brother André. Thousands make the long climb up 283 steps from street level to the basilica's portico; many make the ascent on their knees.

The oratory's carillon is made up of 56 bells that were originally cast in France for a planned carillon in the Eiffel Tower. Its grand organ, with 5,811 pipes, was designed by noted German organ-builder Rudolf Von Beckerath.

An exhibition of Nativity scenes is staged from late November to early February and each year includes 250 scenes from around the world, of which 100 are being shown for the first time.

In the Region

Montreal was founded in 1642, largely as a Catholic mission to convert the area's native people to Christianity, and churches and other religious buildings have been a major part of the local landscape ever since. Mark Twain, when he visited the city a century ago, joked that it was a place "where you couldn't throw a brick without breaking a church window."

In addition to Saint Joseph's Oratory, some of its notable churches are

- Notre-Dame Basilica, a vast Gothic Revival church built in the early nineteenth century, known in part for its concert programs including an annual Mozart festival staged jointly with the Montreal Symphony Orchestra. The church was raised to the status of minor basilica by Pope John Paul II when he visited Montreal in April 1982.

- Mary Queen of the World Basilica-Cathedral is a replica of St. Peter's Basilica in Rome, built in the late nineteenth century. Its mortuary chapel is the final resting place of the city's bishops.

- Notre-Dame-de-Bonsecours Chapel, largely rebuilt since it was founded in the mid-seventeenth century, is a noted landmark of Old Montreal. It contains a museum dedicated to one of the city's founders, Marguerite Bourgeoys.

- Saint Patrick's Basilica, which dates to 1847, was the first anglophone Catholic church in Montreal. It is known for its outstanding woodwork and stained-glass windows. Facing the Saint Lawrence River, it dominates the Basse-ville (Lower town) in the middle of the English-speaking community.

- The Church of Saint-Pierre-Apôtre de Montréal is an impressive neo-Gothic church dating from the mid-nineteenth century that combines French and English architectural styles.

- The Shrine of the Blessed Sacrament in the heart of the city is a shrine of eucharistic evangelization founded more than a century ago by the Congregation of the Religious of the Blessed Sacrament.

- The Church of the Visitation on the banks of the Rivière des Prairies, built in 1752, is the only remaining church on the island of Montreal that dates to the French Régime. The tabernacle and the Louis XV-style carved portals leading to the sacristy are among its noteworthy features.

Transport and Accommodation

Montreal—the world's largest inland port and the home of Canada's first banks and trading companies—is truly a world-class city. It is also the world's second-largest French-speaking city, but English-speaking travelers find that many people there (as well as most signs and menus) are bilingual. The city is easily accessible by air from most major airports in North America and elsewhere. Access by road and rail is also easy.

Montreal offers accommodation and dining of all types and price ranges; Saint Joseph's Oratory itself offers some dining and accommodation facilities.

When entering Canada from the United States, U.S. citizens must show either a U.S. passport or proof of U.S. citizenship and photo ID. U.S. citizens entering Canada from a third country must have a valid pass port. A visa is not required for U.S. citizens for a stay up to 180 days.

SAINTE-ANNE-DE-BEAUPRÉ

Miracles and favors attributed to Saint Anne, the mother of the Blessed Virgin, draw more than a million pilgrims a year to Quebec's Basilica of Sainte-Anne-de-Beaupré.

Devotion to Saint Anne was brought to the New World by the earliest French colonists. The majority of them came from eastern France, where the ancient devotion had lately been revived at the shrines of Sainte-Anne du Carrefour and Sainte-Anne d'Auray.

The Canadian shrine, on the Saint Lawrence River about 20 miles east of Quebec City, originated in 1658 when Etienne de Lessard of the Beaupré coast donated a piece of land at Petit Cap for a chapel. A wooden chapel was built within the year and dedicated to Saint Anne, but it was an event four years later that established the site as a pilgrimage destination. When three boatmen were caught in raging seas off nearby Cape Tourmente, they prayed to Saint Anne for deliverance; they were safely tossed ashore near the chapel and were quick to attribute their salvation to her intervention. Word quickly spread, and pilgrims began arriving with their prayers and petitions.

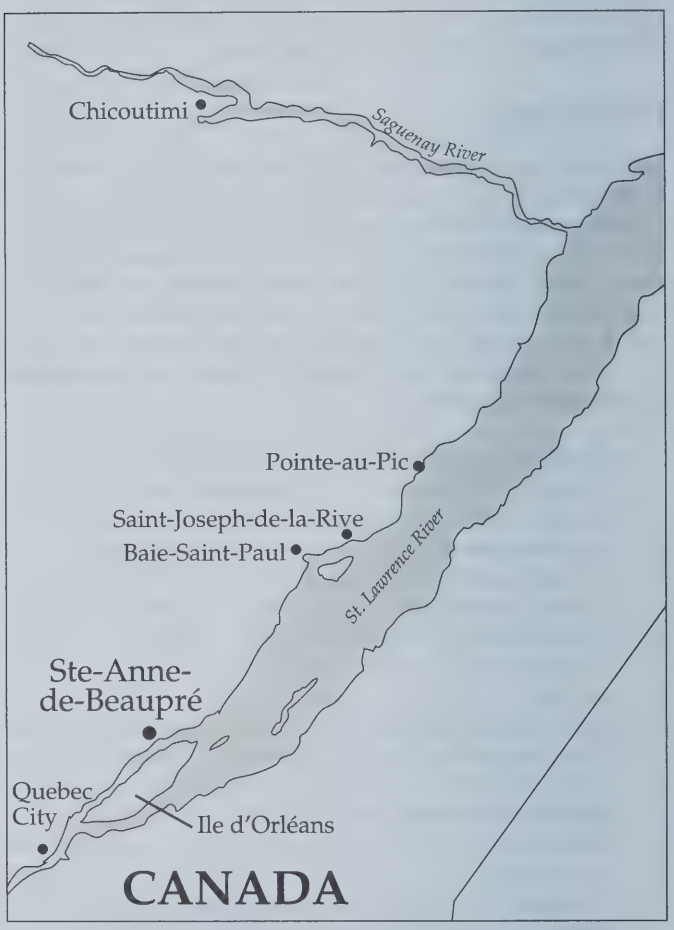
The small chapel was built so close to the often turbulent waters of the Saint Lawrence that it was damaged by waves and tides and within a few years was replaced by a stone church a little farther inland. As pilgrimage grew steadily, successive churches were built at the site. By 1876, the original small chapel had given way to a basilica. When it was destroyed by fire in 1922, the present neo-Roman basilica took its place.

Today the shrine is one of the largest and most celebrated in North America.

Every 20 years a new accounting of miracles and favors attributed to Saint Anne—Quebec's patron saint—is published by the Redemptorist fathers, who have been in charge of the shrine since 1878. Just inside the basilica's main entrance, under its towering twin spires, there are high piles of canes and crutches—attesting, according to countless notes of thanks left with them, to the saint's healing powers.

The small town of Sainte-Anne-de-Beaupré is dominated by the basilica, designed by architects Maxime Rosin of Paris and Louis-N. Audet of Quebec. Built in the shape of a Latin cross, it has 22 chapels and 18 altars. Ceiling mosaics illustrate details from Saint Anne's life, while 214 stained-glass windows by French artists Auguste Labouret and Pierre Chaudiäre feature personages believed to have been instruments of God over the centuries.

Near the basilica is the Chapel of the Holy Stairs, which has a replica of the stairs Christ climbed as he went before Pontius Pilate. Pope John Paul II climbed the stairs on a visit to the shrine in 1984. Also nearby is the Commemorative Chapel built in 1878 on the foundations of an earlier church and including many of its remnants, such as a crucifix sculpted by François-Noël Levaseur in 1775.



In the Region

Sainte-Anne-de-Beaupré is at the western end of the picturesque region of Charlevoix, which extends along the north bank of the Saint Lawrence to its confluence with the Saguenay River and takes its name from Jesuit priest François-Xavier de Charlevoix, Quebec's first historian.

The region combines mountain, pastoral, and coastal scenery, and offers resorts, picturesque villages, and numerous establishments catering to the tourist trade. Among its better known locations are the towns of Baie-Saint-Paul (dating to 1628), Pointe-au-Pic, La Balbaie, Cap-a-l'Aigle, Saint-Joseph-de-la-Rive, and Baie-Sainte-Catherine.

West of Sainte-Anne-de-Beaupré is Quebec City, one of the oldest and most picturesque cities in North America. The first European to set foot on the spot, in 1535, was explorer Jacques Cartier. Samuel de Champlain founded the settlement in 1608, and in the years that followed the growing city played a major role in events shaping the New World.

The church was a primary force from the earliest years as religious orders (among them the Jesuits, the Franciscan fathers, and several orders of nuns) founded churches, hospitals, and schools. The city's church of Notre Dame de la Victoire is the oldest standing cathedral on the North American continent, dating from 1678. In fact, much of today's city dates from the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries.

Near Quebec City, in the direction of Sainte-Anne-de-Beaupré, is Ile d'Orléans, an island in the Saint Lawrence that has retained the atmosphere of an earlier time. The rural, largely agricultural island (measuring about 21 by 9 miles) offers churches and homes that are among the oldest in the province.

Transport and Accommodation

Quebec City has a major airport and the region as a whole is well served by bus and train services and well-maintained highways. Accommodation of every type is plentiful, as are restaurants of every class.

SHRINE OF OUR LADY OF MARTYRS, AURIESVILLE, NEW YORK

The seventeenth-century martyrdom of eight missionaries in the North American wilderness is commemorated at the Shrine of Our Lady of Martyrs in Auriesville, N.Y.

Jesuit missionaries had come from France to the New World in the 1600s in hope of converting the native people to Christianity. Their work was centered principally among the Huron Indians in southeastern "New France," the present-day Canadian provinces of Quebec and Ontario.

The year 1642 found the Jesuits' missionary center, Mission Sainte Marie, badly in need of supplies. This required a difficult journey to Quebec, about 600 miles away, its dangers compounded by the fact that the Iroquois, including the Mohawk tribe, were constantly at war with the Huron and deeply distrustful of the few Europeans they had seen.

An expedition headed by Father Isaac Jogues arrived in Quebec in mid-July after a trek of several weeks. On their return trip up the Saint Lawrence in early August, in canoes laden with supplies, the convoy of about 40 was set upon by a war party about 70 Mohawk.

Many in the convoy were killed outright. Father Jogues and his young mission assistant, Brother René Goupil, survived the attack but were beaten and tortured during the next two weeks as the war party headed home with them as captives. There was worse to come.

Once in Mohawk country, in what is now Upstate New York, they were taken from village to village and tortured continually. Then, on September 29, Brother Goupil was slain after being accused of practicing black magic—he had been seen making the Sign of the Cross over a small child. Father Jogues was spared, but remained captive for more than a year. Finally escaping with the help of Dutch settlers at Fort Orange (now Albany), he made his way to New Amsterdam (now New York) and crossed the Atlantic to France, where he received a hero's welcome. Before long, however, his mission in the New World called him back and he set sail for North America again.

In early May of 1646 he was once more among the Mohawk, leading a peace mission for the French and the Huron. Initial approaches went well, but soon afterward he and a donné (lay assistant), John Lalande, were taken prisoner—blamed for pestilence and crop failure that had plagued the Mohawk since their previous visit. Although the Mohawk were divided on their fate, both men were put to death. Father Jogues was tomahawked and beheaded, his body thrown into the nearby river and his head impaled on a spike of the high palisade fence surrounding the village. The next day, Lalande was also slain and beheaded.

By December 1649, five of their fellow missionaries had met similar fates at their Canadian outposts—priests Antoine Daniel, Jean de Brébeuf, Gabriel Lalemant, Charles Garnier, and Noël Chabanel.

The church confers the title "martyr" only after rigorous inquiry proves that hatred of the faith motivated those who killed them. These eight, known as the North American Martyrs, were beatified in 1925 and canonized in 1930. Brother Goupil, the first to die, thus became the first canonized martyr of North America.

The Shrine

The Mohawk abandoned the village where Father Jogues and Lalande were slain not long after the martyrdoms and its precise location was unknown until its rediscovery in 1884 following long research that included examination of detailed letters written by Father Jogues after his escape in 1643.

The site, known by the Mohawk as Ossernenon and now Auriesville, immediately became a shrine. The first pilgrimage took place in 1885, when about 4,000 faithful climbed a rough hillside to kneel outside a small chapel. Today the shrine covers 600 acres and is visited by more than 300,000 pilgrims each year between May and October. Always among them is a group from Caughnawaga in Saint Lawrence County, Canada—descendants of the Mohawk who inhabited Ossernenon three centuries ago.

One of the shrine's outstanding features is the Coliseum, a circular church that can accommodate 6,500 worshippers. The shrine's most precious treasure is a reliquary containing fragments of the bones of Saints John de Brébeuf, Gabriel Lalemant, and Charles Garnier—the only three of the eight martyrs whose remains were partially recovered.

In the Region

A few miles from Auriesville, near the town of Fonda, is the National Tekakwitha Shrine. This shrine honors Kateri Tekakwitha, who was born at Ossernenon in 1656, the daughter of an Algonquin mother who had converted to Christianity and a Mohawk sachem of the Turtle clan. She first met Christian missionaries at the age of 11 and was baptized at 20, on Easter Sunday 1676. Her beliefs were met with hostility by many of her people, however, and she relocated to a Christian Indian settlement near Montreal. She died there less than three years later, but in that short time Kateri had become known for her piety, her love of those around her, and her patience in times of suffering. She was declared a Servant of God by Pope Pius XII in 1943, and declared Blessed by Pope John Paul II in 1980. Please see www.TheLifeofKateriTekakwitha.net.

The North American Martyrs are also honored at a Martyrs Shrine Church conducted by Jesuits near the site of the village of Sainte Marie where the missionaries worked from 1639 to 1649. The village itself, near Midland, Ontario, has been reconstructed.

Auriesville is in the region known as Leatherstocking Country, which offers some of New York State's most scenic pastoral countryside. The Mohawk Valley itself was the scene of considerable action in the Revolutionary War and numerous sites commemorate its battles; noteworthy among them is Rome's Fort Stanwix National Monument, a faithful reconstruction of a fort successfully held by the Continental Army during a long siege by British forces in 1777.

Also in Leatherstocking Country is Cooperstown, home of the National Baseball Hall of Fame and Doubleday Field, where baseball was born in 1839. Nearby is Lake Otsego, immortalized by James Fenimore Cooper as "Glimmerglass."

To the immediate north of Auriesville is Adirondack Park, an area covering six million acres, much of it designated "forever wild" by the state. Also nearby, to the south, are New York's Catskill Mountains.

Transport and Accommodation

Auriesville is roughly midway between New York City and Montreal and lies just off the New York Thruway between interchanges 27 and 28. There is regular train and bus service to towns within a few miles of the shrine, and accommodation is plentiful.

CHIMAYÓ

For nearly two centuries pilgrims have traveled to a small town in northern New Mexico to worship and to ask divine help at the Santuário de Chimayó. Today, an estimated 300,000 make the journey each year—some 50,000 during Holy Week alone—and the shrine is becoming known as "the Lourdes of America."

As at Lourdes, many come seeking cures. The adobe chapel encloses a site whose soil is said to have miraculous healing powers, and many people say they have been healed by God at the santuário. Discarded crutches, braces, and canes, as well as scores of notes and letters of thanksgiving, line the santuário's walls.

According to legend, a man who lived in the village in the early years of the nineteenth century saw a mysterious light shining from the ground on the night of Good Friday. He and others from the village dug at the spot and unearthed a large wooden crucifix. They took it to their church three times, but each time it disappeared—only to be found soon afterward at the spot from which they had taken it. They concluded that the site was sacred and built a small oratory or chapel to enclose it; the oratory is now part of the larger santuário.

The chapel and its santos (religious images) are featured in Willa Cather's 1927 novel Death Comes for the Archbishop.

The shrine, which has been designated a National Historic Landmark, is particularly revered by Hispanic Catholics. Its annual feast is celebrated on the last Sunday in July.

The santuário is dedicated to Our Lord of Esquipulas, a devotion originating from Esquipulas, Guatemala, where a statute of the Crucifixion has attracted pilgrims from across Central America since the late sixteenth century.

In the Region

Chimayó and its immediate area are also well known for weaving, wood carving, and outstanding regional cuisine. The nearby village of Cordova is the center of a wood-carving industry that for generations has produced santos and other decorative figures for churches and private devotions. Cordova's Saint Anthony of Padua Chapel is noted for its locally crafted statuary and other woodwork.

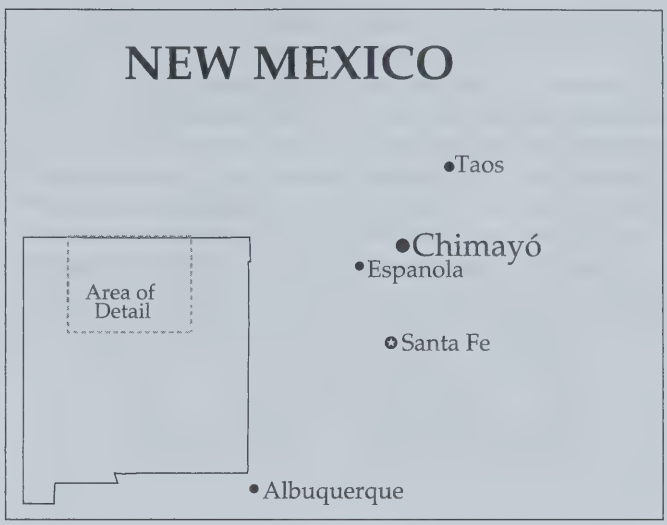
The region features gently hilly countryside dotted with orchards and small farms, set against a backdrop of the rugged Sangre de Cristo Mountains. It is within easy reach of New Mexico's capital, Santa Fe, and of Taos, both popular tourist destinations.

Taos is in fact three places: the town of Taos itself, Taos Pueblo, and Ranchos de Taos.

The town of Taos, which blends Native American, early Spanish, and Anglo cultures, is known around the world as a literary and art center. Among its famous devotees were writer D. H. Lawrence, painter Georgia O'Keeffe, and photographer Ansel Adams. (The D. H. Lawrence Shrine near Taos contains Lawrence's ashes; the La Fonda de Taos Hotel has some of his paintings.) Numerous galleries and museums house the work of Taos artists past and present and celebrate such figures as the legendary frontier scout Kit Carson, who lived there for more than 25 years.

A popular day trip from Taos is the Enchanted Circle, a 90-mile drive through the peaks, canyons, and forests of the Carson National Forest.

Taos Pueblo, two miles north of the center of town, is the location of the multi-story pueblo dwelling known as San Geronimo (Saint Jerome) de Taos that has housed a community of Taos-Tiwa Indians for nearly 1,000 years. It is among the oldest continuously occupied dwellings in North America.



Ranchos de Taos, four miles south of town, is a ranching and farming community founded by the Spanish centuries ago. It is the site of one of the Southwest's most noteworthy churches, the Church of San Francisco de Asis (Saint Francis of Assisi), an outstanding example of Early Mission architecture. Built in the seventeenth century and recently restored, it is known for its rich collection of religious artifacts and paintings. In the nearby parish hall, visitors can see the painting "Shadow of the Cross"; in the evening the shadow of a cross, not seen during daylight hours, appears over Christ's shoulder.

Among the region's outstanding museums is the Millicent Rogers Museum, which contains more than 5,000 pieces of Hispanic and Native American art.

Santa Fe, the second-oldest city in the United States (after Saint Augustine, Florida), was founded in 1609 by Don Pedro de Peralta as La Villa Real de la Santa Fe de San Francisco de Asis (the Royal City of the Holy Faith of Saint Francis of Assisi) and has retained much of the pueblo appearance of its colonial times. A notable exception is the Cathedral of Saint Francis, built in the late 1860s in the French Romanesque style for Santa Fe's first archbishop, Jean Baptiste Lamy. The archbishop is entombed beneath the church's high altar. An adjoining adobe chapel holds La Conquistadora (Our Lady of the Conquest), the oldest representation of the Virgin in the United States.

Built in the same era, by the same French architects and Italian stonemasons, was Santa Fe's Loretto Chapel. Legend surrounds a "Miraculous Staircase" leading to its choir loft. The 20-foot wooden staircase, a double helix with no visible central support, is said to have been built by an unknown old man who offered to help when the workmen had difficulty designing a stairway to the loft. He built it single-handedly, using only a square and a saw; many believe he was Saint Joseph.

Another Santa Fe church, the Church of Cristo Rey, was built in recent times (1939) but of traditional mud-and-straw brick, and is the largest adobe structure in the United States.

NATIONAL SHRINE OF SAINT ELIZABETH ANN SETON, EMMITSBURG, MARYLAND

Elizabeth Ann Seton—the first American-born saint—was a wife, mother, convert, and the founder of the American Sisters of Charity of Saint Joseph. The national shrine in her honor is nestled in the foothills of the Catoctin Mountains in Emmitsburg, Maryland, where she lived from 1809 to her death on January 4, 1821.

She was born in New York City on August 28, 1774, the middle daughter of Dr. Richard Bayley, professor of anatomy at King's College (later Columbia University), and Catherine Charlton Bayley, both staunch Episcopalians.

Her mother died when Elizabeth was a small child, but she received careful education and training from her father. While still a child, she showed a deep interest in religion and an abiding concern for the poor and the sick.

At 19, a wealthy and beautiful debutante, she married William Magee Seton, the son of a prominent shipowner. Five children—two sons and three daughters—were born of the marriage. In the following decade, however, the family's fortunes turned. For William Seton, business difficulties coincided with serious illness. While staying with friends in Italy in late 1803, he died.

Elizabeth spent the early months of her widowhood with her hosts, the Filicchi family, and during that period came to know the Catholic faith. She returned to New York in mid-1804 a convinced Catholic, and was received into the church in March 1805. This was met with considerable opposition from friends and family, who ostracized her.

After working briefly at a school for boys and then running a school boarding house, she was invited in 1807 by Father William DuBourg of Saint Mary's Seminary in Baltimore to found a school for girls in that city. The school opened the following year and soon drew both students and a number of young women who offered themselves as assistants. Father DuBourg and Bishop John Carroll of Baltimore gave her a set of rules and directed her to admit subjects to her sisterhood. The bishop permitted her to adopt a religious habit and gave her the title of Mother.

Meanwhile, a Virginia convert and seminarian offered $10,000 for the establishment of a school for poor children, and Mother Seton became its founder. In June 1809 she moved to the village of Emmitsburg and adopted a permanent rule that was a modification of the one given the first Sisters of Charity by Saint Vincent de Paul.

Over the next few years she laid the foundations of the American parochial school system, training teachers, preparing textbooks, writing, and translating noteworthy religious works from French. She also found time to continue her lifelong dedication to helping the poor and the sick, and won many converts to the Catholic faith.

Her order grew quickly, first with the opening of an orphanage in Philadelphia in 1814 and one in New York three years later. Today thousands of Mother Seton's sisters serve throughout the Americas, in Italy, and in numerous foreign missions.

Mother Seton was declared venerable in December 1959, and beatified by Pope John XXIII in March 1963. On the day of her canonization, September 14, 1975, Pope Paul VI declared "Elizabeth Ann Seton is a saint. She is the first daughter of the United States of America to be glorified with this incomparable attribute."

The Shrine

Pilgrims usually begin their tours at the Visitors Center, which houses a theater where a 15-minute video presentation on the life of Elizabeth Ann Seton is shown. Surrounding the theater area is a museum containing many artifacts and memorabilia from her life and time.

The Stone House (circa 1750) was Mother Seton's first permanent home when she came to Emmitsburg in 1809. In February of the following year, she and her companions moved into a newly built log building; later faced with clapboard and painted white, it is now known as the White House. A school opened there by Mother Seton for the children of the neighborhood was the first parochial school in the United States.

The shrine's Mortuary Chapel, housing Mother Seton's remains, was built in 1846 through a substantial donation made by her son William. Her relics now rest in the basilica built in the mid-1960s in anticipation of her canonization. Formally dedicated on May 1, 1965, it was designated a minor basilica in 1991 by Pope John Paul II. On August 1 of that year the formal ceremony was carried out by Archbishop Agostino Cacciavillan, Apostolic Pro-Nuncio to the United States.

Tours of the shrine are self-guided. Docents are on duty at each site to offer information and answer questions.

Transport and Accommodation

There is no public transportation to Emmitsburg. The closest major airports, train stations, and bus terminals are in Baltimore (65 miles away), Washington, D.C. (70 miles), and Harrisburg, Pa. (50 miles). Motels and bed-and-breakfast establishments are located near Emmitsburg. All shrine sites are handicapped-accessible, there is ample free parking, and group tours are welcome.

In the Region

The shrine is located approximately 22 miles north of Frederick, Maryland, just off U.S. Route 15. About 10 miles from Emmitsburg is Gettysburg, Pennsylvania, the site of the battle in July 1863 that is considered the turning point of the American Civil War.

NATIONAL SHRINE OF THE ASSUMPTION OF THE BLESSED VIRGIN MARY, BALTIMORE

Baltimore, Maryland, holds a special place in American history, and in the history of the church. It was the seat of the nation's first Catholic diocese, established in 1789, and its "old cathedral"—the Basilica of the National Shrine of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary, considered an architectural masterpiece—has been a place of pilgrimage for the better part of two centuries.

Maryland was the first colony in the New World where religious tolerance was established. The colony was planned in the early 17th century by George Calvert (the first Lord Baltimore), a Catholic convert; founded by his son Cecilius Calvert, and named for a Catholic queen, Henrietta Maria, the wife of Charles I of England. It was an auspicious beginning, but times of considerable difficulty followed. In 1692 William of Orange, King of England, made Maryland a royal province and made the Anglican Church the colony's "established church," with every colonist taxed for its support. In 1702, religious liberty was extended to all Christians except Catholics, and shortly afterward Catholics were forbidden to instruct their children in their religion or to send them out of the colony for such instruction. At the height of this anti-Catholic period, authorities could even take children from Catholic parents.

In the years following the American Revolution, however, the situation rapidly changed. The National Convention in Philadelphia in 1787 granted religious liberty to all. The Diocese of Baltimore came into being two years later when Pope Pius VI appointed Father John Carroll the first Catholic bishop in the United States. Originally, the diocese encompassed the entirety of the American republic—stretching from Georgia to Maine and westward to the Mississippi—and was seen as a symbol of the religious freedom the new nation promised.

It was fitting, the pope felt, that the nation's first diocese have a "temple on a hill" as its seat, and in 1806 then Archbishop Carroll laid the cornerstone of the present basilica at Cathedral and Mulberry streets.

It was to be a grand undertaking. The archbishop chose as its designer Benjamin Henry Latrobe, who held the post of Architect of the U.S. Capitol under Thomas Jefferson. Latrobe submitted two preliminary designs, one Gothic and the other neoclassical. The latter was chosen, in part because it seemed less "foreign" or "more American" than the Gothic design, which was distinctly European. The chosen design's similarity to the then-newly built Capitol was also felt to be in its favor.

The cathedral took 15 years to complete, its progress slowed in part by the War of 1812. Archbishop Carroll died before its completion and is entombed in its crypt. The cathedral was dedicated on May 31, 1821, by Baltimore's third Archbishop, Ambrose Marechal.

At the time (and until 1846) Baltimore, as the only Catholic archdiocese in the United States, had the entire country for its province, making the cathedral the mother church of Catholicism in America.

It has been the scene of many important events. In 1884 it hosted a plenary council that was the largest gathering of the church hierarchy outside Rome since the Council of Trent in 1545. That council decreed the preparation of the Baltimore Catechism, encouraged the establishment of elementary schools in every parish, and laid the groundwork for establishing the Catholic University of America.

In 1937 Pope Pius XI raised the cathedral to the rank of a minor basilica. In 1972 it was declared a national landmark, and in 1993 it was declared a national shrine by the National Conference of Catholic Bishops.

Pope John Paul II prayed before the Blessed Sacrament during a pastoral visit to the cathedral in 1995. During his visit, the pope noted that "Maryland holds a special place in the history of American Catholicism, indeed in the religious history of the nation. It was here that religious freedom and civic tolerance were enshrined in the American experience . . ."

The following year Mother Teresa of Calcutta attended a renewal of vows there of 35 of her Missionaries of Charity, and in 1997 one of its distinguished visitors was Ecumenical Patriarch Bartholomew, Archbishop of Constantinople.

Architecturally, the basilica is among the nation's best-known 19th-century neoclassical structures and is considered to be Latrobe's most outstanding work. Architecture historian Niklaus Pevsner has called it "America's most beautiful church."

In modern times, however, the basilica has fallen into disrepair, largely because of the pressing need to use church funds elsewhere. A major restoration project is being launched. The effort will involve returning the building to Latrobe's original design to the extent possible (numerous major changes have been made to the cathedral, some of them as recently as the 1940s when many of the original clear glass windows were replaced with stained glass). An early priority of the restoration is the return of the cathedral's dome to its original design, which featured two dozen skylights that cast indirect, diffused light into the sanctuary. They fell into disrepair and were covered in the 1940s. "Restore the Light" is the theme of a major fund drive seeking to raise $25 million for the total restoration project.

An organization has been formed to guide the project. The Basilica of the Assumption Historic Trust is a nonprofit corporation that aims to "maintain, preserve, protect, repair and restore the structure and site of the basilica, together with its grounds and ancillary buildings to ensure that their historic and landmark character shall be preserved in trust for the enrichment of future generations of Baltimoreans." Its address is 408 North Charles St., Baltimore 21201 (tel. 410-727-3565, e-mail potter@baltimorebasilica.org).

In the Region

The cathedral, across the street from the Enoch Pratt Free Library, is in Baltimore's Mount Vernon Cultural District, and a number of other pilgrimage sites are within walking distance.

Among these is the Saint Jude Shrine on West Saratoga Street, which honors Saint Jude Thaddeus, the often-invoked "Patron Saint of desperate cases." Jude, one of the 12 disciples, died a martyr to the faith and is entombed at Saint Peter's Basilica in Rome. The Baltimore shrine has been staffed and operated by Pallottine Fathers and Brothers since 1917 and has since become a national center for those seeking the saint's help.

Another frequent Baltimore destination for religious pilgrims is Saint Mary's Chapel, the chapel for Saint Mary's Seminary, the first Catholic seminary in the United States and the place where Elizabeth Ann Seton made her religious vows.

The basilica, the Saint Jude Shrine, and Saint Mary's Chapel are all near Baltimore's well-known Inner Harbor tourist and shopping district.

The city of Baltimore is within about 35 miles of Washington, D.C., which is home to the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception. Only about 65 miles away, in Emmitsburg, Maryland, is the National Shrine of Saint Elizabeth Ann Seton. Both shrines are described in detail elsewhere in this publication.

NATIONAL SHRINE OF SAINT JOHN NEUMANN, PHILADELPHIA

John Neumann's piety, kindness, and missionary zeal made their mark on mid-nineteenth-century America and led to his canonization. Ever-growing numbers of pilgrims come to his shrine in Philadelphia to honor him and prayerfully seek his intervention.

The man who was to become Saint John Neumann was born in Bohemia (part of today's Czech Republic) in 1811. Although he lived less than half a century, he became a revered leader in an era that often presented great challenges for American Catholics. At the time of his death he was Bishop of Philadelphia.

John was the third of six children of Philip Neumann and Agnes Lebis and was baptized John Nepomucene after Bohemia's patron saint. As a boy he showed considerable intellectual ability and a gift for languages that would prove of great use later in life.

In 1831 he entered the seminary of Budweis, and during his five years there his goal became to go to America as a missionary. In 1836, not yet ordained but having completed his studies, he sailed from Le Havre, France, aboard the three-masted Europa bound for New York.

He arrived in early June—age 25, ragged and impoverished, but determined. The next morning, he found his way to Christ Church on Ann Street, whose pastor gave him the address of the Bishop of New York, John Dubois, who ordained him later the same month.

The bishop needed German-speaking priests, not only in the growing city but in the distant corners of the New York diocese hundreds of miles away. The young priest soon found himself bound for the isolated wilderness and farm country on the Niagara frontier in far Upstate New York, where he ministered to German, Irish, and French Canadian settlers and to Native Americans who were still numerous there.

Four years later he decided to join the Redemptorist order and became the order's first novice to be professed in the United States, making his initial vows at Saint James Church in Baltimore, Maryland.

As a Redemptorist, Father Neumann found himself on the road again, trekking into the Allegheny mountains, the Shenandoah Valley of West Virginia, and along the Susquehanna to give pastoral care to a far-flung flock.

In 1844 he became superior of the Redemptorists' house in Pittsburgh and three years later was appointed vice regent, and later vice provincial, of all Redemptorists in the United States. While in those posts, his work placed the Redemptorists in the forefront of the parochial school movement.

In 1849 he became a parish priest again in Baltimore, and among those who came to him for confession was Archbishop Francis P. Kenrick, who in 1852 appointed him Bishop of Philadelphia. His consecration came on Passion Sunday 1852, Father Neumann's forty-first birthday.

As bishop, he was an innovator and a builder. He was responsible for the construction of more than 80 churches, including the Cathedral of Saints Peter and Paul, a Philadelphia monument. He also greatly increased the number of parochial schools in the diocese, instituting a central board of education that became a national model, and during his episcopate the number of children attending parochial schools more than doubled. He also founded a congregation of religious women, the Sisters of the Third Order of Saint Francis at Glen Riddle, Pennsylvania.

But his episcopate was to last only eight years. On January 5, 1860, at age 48, he collapsed while walking on Vine street a few blocks from his new cathedral and died. Many said he had worked himself to death for his faith.

He was entombed in a basement crypt in Saint Peter the Apostle Church on Fifth Street at Girard Avenue, and his grave soon began to draw pilgrims, many of whom claimed his miraculous intercession.

Bishop Neumann's cause was introduced in Rome in 1897, and he was beatified in October 1963. He was canonized by Pope Paul VI on June 19, 1977. Pilgrimage continues to grow steadily, and countless visitors to the shrine say their prayers have been answered.

The National Shrine of Saint John Neumann is at Saint Peter's Church, 1019 North Fifth Street. The saint's body lies in repose beneath the shrine's altar, where mass is offered daily. The shrine museum is open every day from 9 A.M. to 5 P.M., and the gift shop Monday to Saturday from 9 A.M. to 4 P.M. and Sundays 10 A.M to 4 P.M.

In the Region

Philadelphia was founded in 1682 by William Penn, a Quaker, as a "holy experiment," a place where religious freedom was guaranteed, and where no person "shall . . . be molested or prejudiced in their religious persuasion or practice or in manner of faith or worship." It naturally became a refuge for persecuted Catholics, and there were Catholic congregations there from its earliest days. Immigrants of every faith from across Europe flocked there in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, contributing to a cosmopolitan society that continues today.

In addition to the Shrine of Saint John Neumann, a Philadelphia site that draws many religious pilgrims is the Cathedral of Saints Peter and Paul at Eighteenth Street and Ben Franklin Parkway. The cathedral, built in the Italian Renaissance style, is the basilica of the Archdiocese of Philadelphia. Six bishops and archbishops of Philadelphia are buried beneath the altar.

Philadelphia is most famous, of course, as the place where the Declaration of Independence was signed in 1776 and where the Constitution was formally adopted 11 years later. The carefully preserved sites where these events took place combine to form Independence National Historical Park in the heart of the city.

Philadelphia is also widely known for quality restaurants of every type and accommodation at all price levels. It has its own international airport, and its location about midway between New York and Washington, D.C., makes it a logical stop for visitors to the Northeast.

About 20 miles northwest of the city is Valley Forge, where George Washington made his headquarters from December 1777 to June 1778; 12,000 troops camped there through that bitter winter without adequate food, clothing, or shelter.

Two other regions near Philadelphia are well-known tourist destinations: Bucks County, a picturesque area stretching north through the Delaware Valley, and Lancaster County, about 65 miles to the west.

Although suburban sprawl has made inroads into the Bucks countryside, it remains largely rural. Two of its towns, New Hope and Doylestown, have long been centers for the arts. Restaurants and upscale bed-and-breakfast inns are plentiful.

Near Doylestown is the National Shrine of Our Lady of Częstochowa, created in homage to the renowned "Black Madonna" of Częstochowa, Poland, an ancient icon that has been the object of veneration for centuries (see the earlier chapter titled Częstochowa). The Pennsylvania shrine has received millions of pilgrims since its dedication 1966, among them Pope John Paul II, several U.S. presidents, Polish leader Lech Walesa, and scores of bishops, archbishops, and cardinals from around the world. The shrine complex includes a church, cemetery, gift shop, cafeteria, and bookstore.

Lancaster County is the heart of "Pennsylvania Dutch" country, home to the Old Order Amish whose way of life has changed little over the centuries. Much of the region remains undeveloped, although suburbanization and tourism have made many changes. Lancaster County's great popularity as a tourist destination makes off-season visits less crowded.

SHRINE OF THE MOST BLESSED SACRAMENT HANCEVILLE, ALABAMA

Not all pilgrimage destinations have a long history. The Shrine of the Most Blessed Sacrament of Our Lady of the Angels Monastery in rural Alabama was consecrated as recently as 1999, but already draws pilgrims from around the world.

The shrine's creation is closely associated with Mother Mary Angelica—best known as the founder of the Eternal Word Television Network (EWTN)—who assures questioners that it was divinely inspired. The inspiration came while she was on a business trip to Latin America in 1995, hoping to set up a Spanish-language branch of her religious broadcasting service. She was in Bogotá when she saw a statue of the Child Jesus in a small shrine. As she prayed there, she says, the statute " . . . became alive and turned towards me. He had the most beautiful eyes I had ever seen! Then the Child Jesus said to me with the voice of a young boy, 'Build me a temple and I will help those who help you.' I was awestruck . . . "

The temple she built, on a 380-acre former soybean farm an hour or so north of Birmingham, is a Romanesque-Gothic complex of shrine and monastery patterned after the Franciscan churches and monasteries of thirteenth-century Europe. Richly appointed and decorated, it represents the work of noted artisans from several countries. Major features, including the sanctuary, monstrance, tabernacle, confessionals, and statues of the Child Jesus and Our Lady of Grace, were designed and constructed by Talleres de Arte Granda in Spain; the marble used abundantly throughout the shrine comes from various places in Italy and Finland; the altars are inlaid with mosaics of glass and gold created by artisans in Pietrasanta, Italy, using centuries-old techniques; the stained-glass windows came from a noted studio in Germany; the exterior stone is from Canada, the roof tiles from Colombia. A relic of the fourth-century German martyr Saint Alexander of Trier lies in the main altar. The shrine also has a permanent display of full-size photographic images of the Shroud of Turin.

The piazza, big enough to hold tens of thousands of people, has at its center a monument of El Divino Niño, the Divine Child Jesus, sculpted in white marble and red jasper. A 110-foot-tall campanile houses a carillon of 14 bells.

The site, almost totally encircled by the Mulberry Fork of the Warrior River, includes a 19-acre area enclosed behind walls that houses the cloistered nuns of Our Lady of the Angels Monastery, who—like Mother Angelica—are Poor Clares of Perpetual Adoration (PCPA). Also on the site is Castle San Miguel, which houses the Gift Shop of El Niño, conference rooms, and catered eating facilities. Near Castle San Miguel is a chapel housing a near-life-size Nativity display.

Mother Angelica stresses that the lavish complex was not financed by EWTN, and is not maintained by it. The funding came from five families who have chosen to remain anonymous.

EWTN itself also welcomes pilgrims at its headquarters and studios, and receives thousands of them each year. Visitors to EWTN can be in the audience of a live broadcast or attend a televised mass. The network, which started on a shoestring in 1981, now reaches an audience estimated at nearly 70 million households in more than 40 countries. Its headquarters is in the Birmingham suburb of Irondale, about 60 miles from the shrine.

The sometimes controversial Mother Angelica, who attributes the entire success of EWTN and the shrine to divine miracles, has been called "the most influential Catholic woman in America" by Time magazine. Born Rita Antoinette Rizzo in 1923 in Canton, Ohio, she had a childhood of ill health and poverty. In August 1944 she joined the Poor Clares at Saint Paul's Shrine in Cleveland, Ohio. In 1961 she founded a Poor Clares monastery at Irondale, and 20 years later started the television venture in the monastery's garage. Perhaps coincidentally, Saint Clare of Assisi, the founder of the Poor Clares, is the patron saint of television.

In the Region

Another popular pilgrimage site in the same part of Alabama is the Ave Maria Grotto in Cullman, where more than 125 miniature replicas of many of the world's famous churches and shrines cover a three-acre hillside site on the grounds of Saint Bernard Abbey.

The creator of the replicas was Brother Joseph Zoettl, a Bavarian-born Benedictine monk who came to the abbey in 1892. His regular task was to operate the abbey's power plant, but he also found time to teach himself the art of creating miniature buildings. He used whatever materials came to hand—everything from concrete and stone to seashells and glass jars. The display soon began to draw visitors, and the Ave Maria Grotto was dedicated in 1934. Brother Joseph worked on the replicas for more than 40 years, incorporating materials sent from all over the world. He built his last model, a replica of the basilica at Lourdes, in 1958 when he was 80. He died in 1961 and is buried in the abbey cemetery. His lifelong project is now included on the National Register of Historic Places.

The nearest major city is Birmingham, which during the past quarter century has successfully struggled to overcome decades of decline and misfortune. Until the Civil War, what is now Birmingham was just a small town called Elyton. In the post-war years, coal mining and the iron and steel industry transformed it into a major industrial center, named for England's Birmingham and nicknamed "the Magic City." Growth continued until the Great Depression, when Birmingham went into a decline that lasted through the 1960s, when the city became notorious as a violent center of the civil rights movement.

Since the mid-1970s—largely through the influence of the University of Alabama at Birmingham and a revitalized business climate—the city has once again become a major center of commerce, education, and cultural and recreational opportunities.

The Birmingham Civil Rights Institute, which opened in 1993, chronicles the civil rights movement from the early years of the twentieth century through the present day through exhibits, multimedia presentations, and other activities.

Other attractions in and near Birmingham include the Alabama Jazz Hall of Fame, Alabama Sports Hall of Fame, the Southern Museum of Flight, the theme park Visionland, the Birmingham Zoo, the Birmingham Museum of Art, and the Birmingham Botanical Gardens.

A popular stop for many visitors to the area is the Mercedes-Benz Visitors Center in Vance, about 30 miles from Birmingham, which is part of a Mercedes-Benz manufacturing plant and includes a museum on the past and possible future of the automobile.

NATIONAL SHRINE OF THE IMMACULATE CONCEPTION, WASHINGTON, D.C.

More than 35 million people from across the United States and around the world have visited the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception in Washington, D.C., since its dedication in 1959.

The shrine basilica is the largest Catholic church in the Western Hemisphere and the eighth largest church in the world, with a seating capacity of 3,500 and a total capacity of 6,000.

The project began in 1914 when Bishop Thomas Shahan, fourth rector of the Catholic University of America in Washington, received the approval for the undertaking from Pope Pius X.

An early proposal for a Gothic design was rejected in favor of a more contemporary structure embodying elements of the Byzantine and Romanesque styles that has allowed for gradual architectural and artistic adornments over the years. The principal creator of the final design was Charles Maginnis; following his death in 1955, an associate, Eugene F. Kennedy, Jr., was architect for the erection of the superstructure.

The cornerstone was laid on September 23, 1920, and at the shrine's dedication nearly 40 years later the interior of the massive structure was still incomplete. Officiating at the dedication—the largest ecclesiastical ceremony in the history of the Church in America—was Cardinal Francis Spellman of New York, in the presence of four other cardinals and more than 200 archbishops and bishops.

In the form of a Latin cross, the building is 459 feet long, 240 wide at the transepts, 120 feet high to the peak of the roof, 237 feet to the top of the dome, and 329 feet to the top of the bell tower. It was built entirely of masonry, as were the great medieval cathedrals of Europe.

Artistic details were planned by an iconography committee made up of theologians, artists, and historians. The east wall is on the theme of faith; the west wall on charity. The north features contemplatives, and the facade centers on Christ and the Blessed Virgin.

In the interior, a 3,500-square-foot mosaic, "Christ in Majesty," by John de Rosen dominates the north apse of the upper church, portraying Christ as celestial ruler. Other large mosaics illustrate the creation, the outpouring of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost, and the last judgment.

Reflecting the religious heritage brought to America by generations of immigrant Catholics, there are more than 60 chapels and oratories within the shrine. Numerous nationalities and regions are represented, as are religious orders and other groups, including the Augustinians, Carmelites, Catholic Daughters of the Americas, Claretians, Dominicans, Franciscans, Jesuits, Montfort Missionaries, Oblates of Mary Immaculate, Redemptorists, Salesians, Sisters of Charity, Sisters of Providence, and Vincentians.

The shrine has a full schedule of daily and Sunday masses, confessions, and regular services, and provides guides and services for pilgrims and other visitors. It also has a gift shop, cafeteria, and bookstore.

AKITA

A small convent in northern Japan has become widely known in recent years because of a series of supernatural events there declared by the Vatican to be "reliable and worthy of belief."

The events have included apparitions of the Blessed Virgin to the visionary Sister Agnes Sasagawa, followed by blood, sweat, and tears flowing from a wooden statue of the Virgin. Over a period of six years, the statue wept a total of 101 times, often before many witnesses.

Agnes Katsuko Sasagawa was born to a Buddhist family in May 1933. In ill health throughout her childhood, she suffered from paralysis of the central nervous system at 19. She was immobilized for 16 years, spending much time in hospitals and undergoing numerous operations.

During a period of recuperation, she met a nurse at a Catholic hospital who gave her several books on the faith; after reading them, she decided to devote her life to Christianity.

She initially joined the Sisters of the Immaculate Heart of Mary in Nagasaki, but soon fell ill again. After her recovery, she decided to change her vocation and join the Institute of the Handmaids of the Eucharist.

Formed in 1946, the institute consisted of a small group of women living in a modest convent in the hamlet of Yuzawadai on the outskirts of Akita. They led a life of prayer and lived on strict necessities, having abandoned their worldly goods in order to consecrate themselves to God.

There, Sister Agnes—who had become deaf—devoted herself entirely to prayer. It was during this period that the supernatural events began.

On June 12, 1973, alone at prayer in the convent's chapel, Sister Agnes saw a bright light apparently shining from the tabernacle. Overwhelmed, she dropped to the floor and remained there face down for about an hour. When she arose, the light had disappeared. Early the next morning, she returned to the chapel and saw the light again. The following day, at prayer with several companions, she saw it once more, although the others failed to see it.

Her visions continued and intensified. Then, toward the end of June, she developed a painful cross-shaped wound on the palm of her left hand.

On July 3, in the early hours of the morning, Sister Agnes says she was visited by her guardian angel, who spoke to her and led her to the chapel. There, the Virgin spoke to her for the first of what were to be three times.

As she knelt before the statue of the Virgin, "a voice of indescribable beauty struck my totally deaf ears," Sister Agnes later wrote.

The three messages are said to be strikingly similar to those received by the three children at Fátima, Portugal, in 1917: They are stern messages calling for prayer, penance, and repentance, and they include a warning that unless there is widespread repentance and conversion, there will be "a terrible punishment on all humanity."

Although it was only Sister Agnes who heard the Virgin's voice, scores of people—not just religious, but people from many walks of life—were witnesses to the events that followed.

The statue of the Virgin was carved in the 1960s, on commission from the order, by a Japanese Buddhist wood-carver. It was fashioned from a single block of wood from a katsura tree and was patterned on a German painting, "Our Lady of All People." About three feet tall, the statue shows the Virgin standing on a globe and in front of a cross.

On the day Sister Agnes first heard the Virgin's voice, she and several of the other sisters saw drops of blood flowing from a cross-shaped wound on the palm of the statue's right hand. About ten weeks later, on September 29, the wound disappeared, but that same day the statue began to perspire profusely, particularly from the head and neck. As they dried the statue with cotton, the sisters noticed that the liquid had a sweet, subtle fragrance.

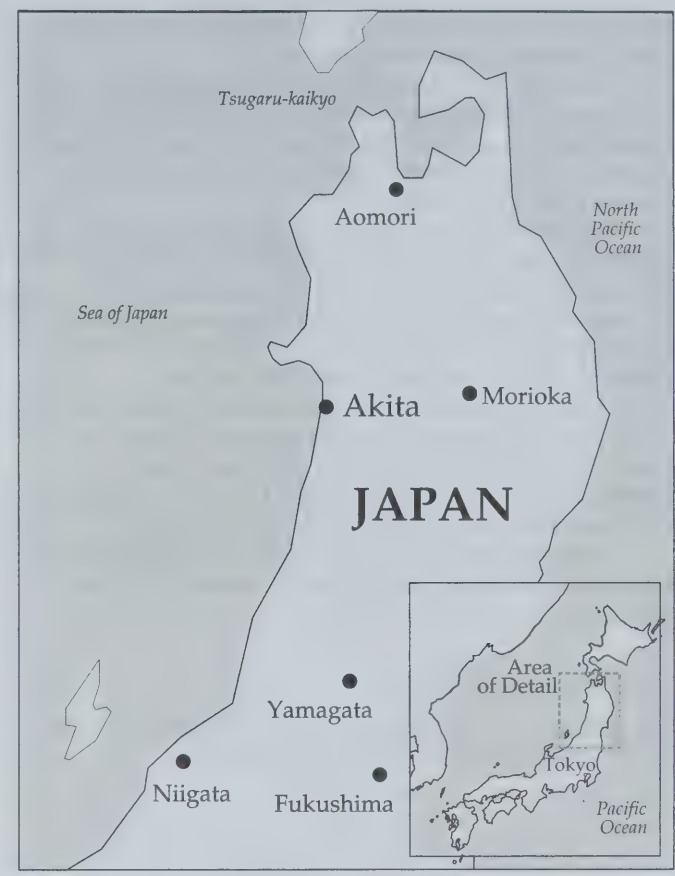
On October 3, 1973, Sister Agnes received the third and final message, and there were no further events for nearly two years. Then, on January 4, 1975, the statue began to weep.

Sister Agnes was among the first to see the tears flowing copiously from the Virgin's eyes. Summoned to the chapel by another sister, she gazed at the statue in astonishment and then spread the word. The entire community gathered in the chapel within a few moments.

The statue wept twice more that first day, and there were at least 20 witnesses. From that day to September 15, 1981, it wept on 101 occasions. The last time, on the Feast of Our Lady of Sorrows, about 65 people were present.

Meanwhile, Sister Agnes had been temporarily cured of her deafness, but on March 7, 1981, she became totally deaf again. This time doctors pronounced her deafness incurable, but—as had been predicted by her guardian angel—she was suddenly and completely cured on May 30, 1982, the Feast of Pentecost.

In April 1984, the Most Rev. John Shojiro Ito, Bishop of Niigata, declared the events of Akita to be of supernatural origin and authorized the veneration of the Holy Mother of Akita throughout the diocese. The bishop said his investigation had shown that the blood from the wound on the statue's hand was "true human blood," that the perspiration the statue had shed was similarly human, and that the tears shed on 101 occasions were "true human tears."



In June 1988, the Vatican—through Joseph Cardinal Ratzinger, Prefect, Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith—judged the events and messages "reliable and worthy of belief."

Transport and Accommodation

The shrine at Akita is small, but it is drawing increasing numbers of pilgrims and can provide accommodation to about 40 at a time. There are also hotels nearby.

Elsewhere in Japan, particularly in urban areas, the variety of accommodation is broad and restaurants are plentiful.

Flights to Tokyo and other Japanese destinations from the United States are frequent throughout the year. There are several daily flights to Akita from Tokyo and from Osaka, but many travelers prefer to use the convenient and efficient train system. Train connections to Akita are via Morioka.

In the Region

Akita is about 350 miles north of Tokyo on the Sea of Japan, in the region known as Tohoku in northern Honshu (Japan's main island). It is a region still largely undiscovered by Western tourists.

The city of Akita itself is a commercial center and prefectural capital. Apart from the shrine, its principal tourist attraction is the Kanto festival in early August, during which men hoist 30-foot poles adorned with dozens of lit paper lanterns.

Senshu Park in Akita is the site of the ruins of Kubota Castle, as well as the Hirano Masakichi Art Museum, which has a noteworthy collection of Japanese art as well as works by European masters. Near the park is the Akita Sangyo Kaikan, an arts and crafts museum that also offers items for sale.

Tour buses from Akita give access to such nearby attractions as the scenic Oga Peninsula, Tazawako (Lake Tazawa, Japan's deepest lake), and Mount Komaga-take. The city of Hirosaki is also popular with visitors, as are Sukayu Onsen's sulphur springs.

Package tours, including religious pilgrimage tours, often include destinations elsewhere in Japan, such as Tokyo and Mount Fuji.

United States Catholic Mission Association

3029 Fourth Street, NE, Washington, D.C. 20017. Tel: 202–832-3112; Fax: 202–832–3688. E-Mail: uscma@uscatholicmission.org; Web site: www.uscatholicmission.org. Rev. Joseph Nagle, OFM, Pres.; Sr. Rosanne Rustemeyer, SSND, Exec. Dir.

Mission outreach is to the global community. This survey includes not only U.S. citizens serving in mission outside U.S. borders but also those serving in cross-cultural mission within those same borders. While many are involved in short-term mission experiences, this survey concerns those in mission for a minimum of one year.

Type of Business:
Founded in 2003 by Pasquale and Raffaello Follieri, The Follieri Group, LLC is a Manhattan-based real estate investment and development organization.
The Follieri Group was formed to assist the Catholic Church by purchasing, as principals, the Church's properties and then renovating them for uses such as low and middle income housing, community centers, daycare facilities, senior citizen housing, places of worship, offices and retail spaces.
The Follieri Group provides each diocese with a donation for student scholarships to Catholic schools in the area. Additionally, a portion of The Follieri Group's revenues support The Follieri Foundation. In addition to providing economic and financial assistance to local communities, The Foundation is organized to provide significant funding, and other resources, to impoverished areas of South America. These resources are earmarked for housing, education, medical and cultural enrichment programs where they are most direly needed. ■

"Cargill Associates brought to us the true message of stewardship. The parish is realizing its dream of more space."
– Father Dennis O'Keefe

STEWARDSHIP

When it's a journey in faith, rather than a matter of money, all things are possible.

At St. Joan of Arc Catholic Church, Kokomo, Ind., 740 families recently pledged $3.2 million: three times their annual offertory.

Cargill Associates has helped dozens of parishes across the nation fulfill major capital and offertory needs —often with results they never thought possible.

- three times annual offertory 75% of the time
- four times annual offertory 45% of the time
- five times annual offertory 25% of the time

SCULPTURE WORKS/BARRY WOODS JOHNSTON, SCULPTOR
2423 Pickwick Road
Baltimore, MD 21207
Tel.: (410) 448-1945
E-mail: barry@sculptorjohnston.com
Web Site: www.sculptorjohnston.com

Type of Business:
After earning a B.S. in architecture from Georgia Institute of Technology, Barry Woods Johnston studied at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, the National Academy of Design and the Enzo Cardini, Nerina Simi, and Romanelli Studios in Florence. Johnston is fluent in Italian, and partially fluent in German and Chinese.
Regarding Johnston's work, one critic called him "A mystic in metal." Subjects show rich array of symbolism, are generally upbeat, and are derived from mythology, religion, literature, psychology and the contemporary dilemma. Portraiture is a forte. Recent commissions include two life-size figures for Govan's Presbyterian Church in Baltimore and a relief for the Catholic College of Notre Dame in Baltimore. Other public commissions include a 141/2' bronze for the front of the City Hall in Hampton, Virginia, a 191/2' bronze for the entrance of Lafayette Center in Washington, D.C. and a 7' "Mother and Child" for Evanston Women's Hospital in Illinois.
As Johnston states, "My job is to visualize and then breathe life into an appropriate concept for a client. I seek to capture the client's vision. I strive to grasp the heart of what makes life worthwhile, to transcend materialism, grasping the heart of what makes life worthwhile, exploring questions about whom we are as we consider where we've been and where we are going. My sculptures are often light and lively in feelings. My subjects are generally upbeat, both imaginative and realistic. I seek to compliment an architectural setting while adding levity, movement, and humanity. Clothing is rendered in faithful detail, but with flowing movement and compositional unity. My training in architecture gives me a high regard for aesthetics and a desire to integrate art into its architectural setting. Many of my pieces incorporate micro and macro symbolism. In other words, an overall design, as a macro expression, is often symbolically extracted from a micro observation in nature. Or again said, when creating a sculpture, I look for an abstract form that symbolically embodies the overall vision and then integrate that abstraction into a realistic statement." ■

Paul J. Bayer.....Managing Director
Brenda Hoyt.....Consultant - Sales and Marketing
John Fuchs.....Consultant - Design

Type of Business:

CAPITOL LIGHTING DESIGN & RESTORATION is a company whose two new owners in association with its two founders and senior business associates have a history in the lighting industry dating back to the 1950's. It is a company that continues to be totally dedicated to supplying quality products and delivering them on schedule. Due to the background of its management, CAPITOL LIGHTING is sensitive to the needs of its clients. Designers need accurate drawings and information on time. Owners and contractors need adherence to schedules with equipment delivered in good condition and in conformance with approved coordination drawings.

The newest additions to CAPITOL LIGHTING's management team, Suzanne Bayer and Paul J. Bayer in association with it's founders, Brenda Hoyt and John Fuchs, bring their own and unique talents to the organization making it unrivaled in the lighting industry. CAPITOL LIGHTING's associates include a metal sculptor with a Master of Fine Arts degree; another metal sculptor whose special interest is 19th century gas and oil lighting fixtures and their early conversion to electric usage; two foundry specialists, one for short custom production runs, the other for production runs using the traditional lost wax process. In this process, CAPITOL LIGHTING DESIGN & RESTORATION is able to offer bronze chandeliers of extraordinary quality. CAPITOL LIGHTING DESIGN & RESTORATION has also successfully modified existing and antique lighting equipment to make use of newly developed light sources. It continues to be a corporate philosophy to restore old fixtures rather than discard them and supply new replacements; it is a philosophy much appreciated by sensitive clients and continues to be adopted by its new owners.

In addition to restoring and supplying ornamental lighting equipment, CAPITOL LIGHTING DESIGN & RESTORATION has carved a niche for itself in the design of special lighting equipment largely unavailable from other suppliers. Whether it is the design of ornamental exit signs or small accent lights to be installed in very limited spaces—CAPITOL LIGHTING DESIGN & RESTORATION has always prevailed in the face of difficult design challenges.

It is safe to say that no other ornamental lighting fixture supplier can claim to have this type of expertise at its disposal or within its own corporate structure-it is a fertile environment conducive to the promotion and fulfillment of the design process. ■

Type of Business:
EverGreene is a full-service decorative arts studio committed to preserving the integrity of historic sacred spaces through conservation, restoration, and compatible new artwork and decoration. Services include investigation and analysis of original finishes; consultations, renderings, budgets and samples to support decision-making and capital campaigns; design of color schemes, architectural ornament and furnishings; and guidance on specifications. EverGreene's consistently high-quality work is performed by a staff of experienced project managers, professionally-trained conservators, fine artists and craftsmen.

EverGreene's capabilities include all types of decorative painting, stenciling, gilding and trompe l'oeil; conservation, replication, and new design of murals and mosaics; and allied crafts including wood and metal refinishing, interior stone cleaning, art glass, tile work and other architectural arts. EverGreene's plaster shop provides services nationwide in restoration of flat and ornamental plaster, and design and fabrication of new plasterwork in traditional styles.

Among EverGreene's current projects are the redecoration of the Cathedral of the Blessed Sacrament in Sacramento, California; the Chapel at Sacred Heart Monastery in Lisle, Illinois; and Christ and St. Stephen's Church in New York City. EverGreene's work over the last 27 years includes projects large and small in houses of worship around the country, including ten cathedrals, 26 state capitols, and hundreds of theaters, public buildings, commercial interiors and residences. Completed projects include the Church of the Immaculate Conception in Celina, Ohio; the Cathedral of St. Matthew the Apostle in Washington, D.C.; the Visitation Catholic Church in Kansas City, Missouri; and many others. ■

PUT YOUR NEXT FUNDRAISER OVER THE TOP

Donor recognition increases contributions. It's a fact that's been proven time after time. For over 50 years Zax Donor Recognition Products has worked with Catholic churches, organizations and religious groups throughout the U.S. to design attractive and appropriate means of acknowledging contributors. You might say we wrote the book on donor recognition. So why not work with the leader to plan and execute a recognition program that fits the mood and tone of your situation. Protect your future fundraising programs by saying thank you now.

Providing Architectural Solutions Since 1977 for Places of

WORSHIP, LEARNING, AND HEALING

CDH PARTNERS, INC.—Architecture, Engineering, Interior Design, and Construction Services

It has been said "the best use of life is to spend it for something that outlasts its earthly value." CDH Partners is an organization that has served as a guide and a steward—for over twenty five years helping our clients to wisely invest in the future.

Each week, over 300,000 people worship in church buildings designed by CDH Partners. Daily, more than 100,000 students attend classes in educational spaces conceived and planned by our team members. Over 75,000 people each day are treated in outpatient and emergency care facilities or nurtured back to health in hospitals planned and designed by our team of professionals. All of this is possible because of the dedication of our committed architects, engineers, interior designers, construction professionals and support staff. Every project that is entrusted to us becomes much more than a design rendered on a piece of paper. They are touch points—where we become personally involved in the lives, the visions, the future of others, and for opportunity to serve a greater purpose.

It comes down to one fact: CDH Partners is a team of ordinary people committed to doing extraordinary things and committed to providing what we promise. This perspective not only drives the way we do our day-to-day work. It is our legacy.

CDH PARTNERS

The people to turn to for design solutions that minister to the spirit, mind, and body.

Services include investigation and analysis of original finishes; consultations, renderings, budgets and samples to support decision-making and capital campaigns; design of color schemes, architectural ornament and furnishings; and guidance on specifications. EverGreene's consistently high-quality work is performed by a staff of experienced project managers, professionally-trained conservators, fine artists and craftsmen.

EverGreene's capabilities include all types of decorative painting, stenciling, gilding and trompe l'oeil; conservation, replication, and new design of murals and mosaics; and allied crafts including wood and metal refinishing, interior stone cleaning, art glass, tile work and other architectural arts. EverGreene's plaster shop provides services nationwide in restoration of flat and ornamental plaster, and design and fabrication of new plasterwork in traditional styles.

Among EverGreene's current projects are the redecoration of the Cathedral of the Blessed Sacrament in Sacramento, California; the Chapel at Sacred Heart Monastery in Lisle, Illinois; and Christ and St. Stephen's Church in New York City. EverGreene's work over the last 27 years includes projects large and small in houses of worship around the country, including ten cathedrals, 26 state capitols, and hundreds of theaters, public buildings, commercial interiors and residences. Completed projects include the Church of the Immaculate Conception in Celina, Ohio; the Cathedral of St. Matthew the Apostle in Washington, D.C.; the Visitation Catholic Church in Kansas City, Missouri; and many others. ■

2423 Pickwick Road
Baltimore, MD 21207
Tel.: (410) 448-1945
E-mail: barry@sculptorjohnston.com
Web Site: www.sculptorjohnston.com

Type of Business:

After earning a B.S. in architecture from Georgia Institute of Technology, Barry Woods Johnston studied at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, the National Academy of Design and the Enzo Cardini, Nerina Simi, and Romanelli Studios in Florence. Johnston is fluent in Italian, and partially fluent in German and Chinese.

Regarding Johnston's work, one critic called him "A mystic in metal." Subjects show rich array of symbolism, are generally upbeat, and are derived from mythology, religion, literature, psychology and the contemporary dilemma. Portraiture is a forte. Recent commissions include two life-size figures for Govan's Presbyterian Church in Baltimore and a relief for the Catholic College of Notre Dame in Baltimore. Other public commissions include a 141/2' bronze for the front of the City Hall in Hampton, Virginia, a 191/2' bronze for the entrance of Lafayette Center in Washington, D.C. and a 7' "Mother and Child" for Evanston Women's Hospital in Illinois.

As Johnston states, "My job is to visualize and then breathe life into an appropriate concept for a client. I seek to capture the client's vision. I strive to grasp the heart of what makes life worthwhile, to transcend materialism, grasping the heart of what makes life worthwhile, exploring questions about whom we are as we consider where we've been and where we are going. My sculptures are often light and lively in feelings. My subjects are generally upbeat, both imaginative and realistic. I seek to compliment an architectural setting while adding levity, movement, and humanity. Clothing is rendered in faithful detail, but with flowing movement and compositional unity. My training in architecture gives me a high regard for aesthetics and a desire to integrate art into its architectural setting. Many of my pieces incorporate micro and macro symbolism. In other words, an overall design, as a macro expression, is often symbolically extracted from a micro observation in nature. Or again said, when creating a sculpture, I look for an abstract form that symbolically embodies the overall vision and then integrate that abstraction into a realistic statement." ■

Catholic women religious are treated in Guest House in Lake Orion, Michigan. The facility in Rochester, Minnesota has treatment programs for priests, deacons, brothers and seminarians. An important part of the treatment is the beautiful environment of our facilities. Residents respond to the quiet serenity of the surroundings to help in their recovery not only physically and emotionally, but spiritually as well.

Generous donors have established an endowment fund to provide financial assistance for any diocese or religious community needing assistance with the costs of treatment. Treatment is provided without regard to financial consideration.

The facilities are licensed and accredited.

Guest House also offers educational programs, seminars, and workshops on addiction-related topics. Its annual Summer Leadership Conference addresses current issues of addiction. Its seminary programs address prevention and ministry-related topics for those in formation. Women religious leadership are offered on-campus and off-campus training in identification, intervention and treatment services. ■

Navy Chaplains serve both the Church and Country in diverse ministry settings. Chaplains provide spiritual guidance to members of the Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard. We offer leadership positions in ministry for the spiritual well being of the whole community. Priest Chaplains provide sacramental and spiritual support for Catholics in the military and care for all. Working closely with clergy from other faith traditions, we cooperate with each other without compromising our own faith and practice. Navy Chaplains experience the joy of ministry with young people. We have a program for seminarians, the Naval Reserve, and for full-time, active-duty positions. Contact the chaplain recruiters listed above for more information. ■

AN ARMY OF ONE™

For many Soldiers, the hardest battles aren't always fought on the field. Raising kids. Saving for the future. Being separated from their families on deployments. These are the struggles they face every day. As an Army Chaplain, you provide the spiritual weapons Soldiers and their families need to fight back. Whether you're already ordained or still a seminary student, there are both full- and part-time ministry opportunities for you in the U.S. Army Chaplaincy. Type of Business:
The Knights of Columbus is the world's largest Catholic family fraternal service organization. Father Michael J. McGivney (1852-90), an assistant pastor at St. Mary's Church, New Haven, Conn., founded the fraternal benefit society in 1882 with a group of parishioners.The organization was chartered to assist the widows and orphans of deceased members through a life insurance program, to instill in members a heightened sense of pride in their Catholic faith, and to provide opportunities for volunteer service to the Catholic Church and society. Since its founding, the Knights has grown into a worldwide organization with nearly 1.7 million members and their families in close to 13,000 units throughout North America and the Philippines. Annually, Knights at all levels of the organization raise and contribute to charities more than $128 million and volunteer more than 60 million hours of service. Knights of Columbus Insurance, with more than $50 billion in force on members and their families, consistently receives top ratings from independent review agencies.The cause for canonization of Father McGivney is under investigation at the Vatican. ■

Type of Business:
We are the only official and authorized Blue Army Pilgrimage operator.
The mission of the tour division of the World Apostolate of Fatima is to bring pilgrims to visit the Shrine of Our Lady of Fatima. Since it's founding, tens of thousands of pilgrims have made their way to the Shrine for prayer, reflection and healing.
The Blue Army has enabled pilgrims to visit Fatima and to learn more about the message of Fatima, come back reconsecrated as a result of this message, and fulfill the requests of Our Lady. As a result of this journey, pilgrims learn and commit to this message. A visit to Fatima is a genuine spiritual experience.
Our Custom Group Department would be happy to develop a specialized program based on your group's size, budget and travel dates. ■

Catholic Heritage Tours is operated by a full-service Catholic travel agency and specializes in customized travel for Catholic groups, such as parishes, schools, and organizations. We do not offer pre-packaged tours; each tour is created with a specific itinerary according to the group's particular interests and needs. Since we understand the value of spiritual journeys and pilgrimages to the Catholic shrines of the world, we not only take care of all travel arrangements, we also do our best to ensure pilgrims attain the highest spiritual fulfillment possible. We supply a custom-made booklet containing information on the saints, sites, and shrines visited each day of the trip. In the cities you choose to visit, our local guides will point out and explain the Catholic treasures and sites. Group organizers can have the option of traveling for free. For more information, please call us at 800-290-3876. ■

The mission of the tour division of the World Apostolate of Fatima is to bring pilgrims to visit the Shrine of Our Lady of Fatima. Since it's founding, tens of thousands of pilgrims have made their way to the Shrine for prayer, reflection and healing.
The Blue Army has enabled pilgrims to visit Fatima and to learn more about the message of Fatima, come back reconsecrated as a result of this message, and fulfill the requests of Our Lady. As a result of this journey, pilgrims learn and commit to this message. A visit to Fatima is a genuine spiritual experience.
Our Custom Group Department would be happy to develop a specialized program based on your group's size, budget and travel dates. ■

LIFE TEEN is an international, comprehensive Catholic youth ministry that serves the Church and leads teens and their families closer to Christ. LIFE TEEN is open to high school teens of all faiths and focuses on the Liturgy, especially the true presence of Christ in the Eucharist. Every Sunday, more than 120,000 teenagers attend LIFE TEEN Mass and LIFE Nights in more than 969 parishes worldwide. In addition to these powerful liturgies and challenging youth meetings, there are retreats, outreach, prayer groups and weekly activities for teens that deepen their relationship with Christ and each other. LIFE TEEN provides youth rallies for high school teens as well as Training Conferences and Advanced Training Certificate Programs for youth leaders. LIFE TEEN has three camps and retreat centers across the country. LIFE TEEN also provides many resources for youth ministry programs from ministry and promo videos to different video series for Confirmation and vocations, as well as books and music.
